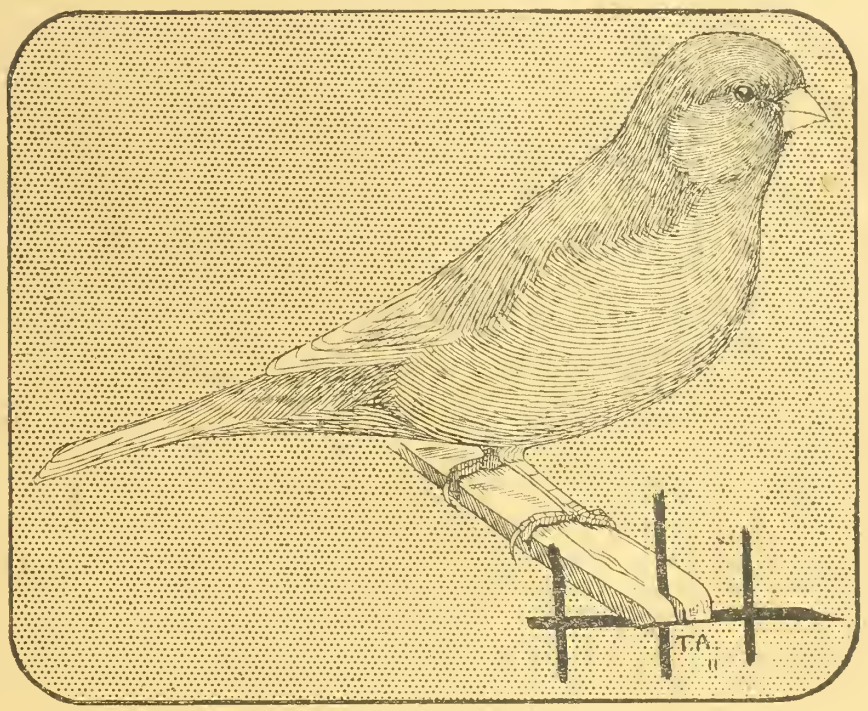
Variable in Temperament.

Pardon the violence of my language, good reader, and bear with me yet a little longer, while together we examine the behaviour of our subject under captivity. Few birds are so variablo in temperament as Chaffinches. I have had many examples which have been docile and well-behaved from the first, and some others which were still unsteady after years of confinement. Steadiness being a great point in Chaffineches, it should be observed as a general rule (not without exceptions, mark you) that young birds taken in the autumn just through the moult, or, better still, half moulted, are the likeliest to steady easily and quickly. Always allowing for exceptions, the later caught birds are the most difficult to get tame.

The demure-looking hen Chaffinch is an almost exact replica of the cock in everything excepting colour. Take away all the bright colouring of the cock Chaffinch and a little of his size and you have the hen.

An Apparent Affinity.



We now arrive at the last figure to be passed under review—the Bramblefinch. There is apparently an affinity between the Bramblefinch and the Chaffinch, for they have quite a number of characteristics in common. They are alike in shape, in size, and in feeding habits, and the soxes in each case are distinguished by the application of the same rule. Thero is the same variability of temperament, although of tho two the Bramblefinch is tho more capable of astonishingly sudden transitions from recklessness to sanity. The moulting period seems to bring to many a wild Brambling a realisation of the choice lying before him of another twelve months of riotous banging about all tattered and torn, or a corresponding period of gentle exorcise in his handsome new suit. To his credit be it said that he usually adopts the latter course.

The most important show points of the Bramblofinch are well brought out in our illustration. The head and back feathers are a "beetle-green-black," and each separate feather being edged with brown, a spangled effect is produced. The more regular and perfect this spangling is, the better. Tho chest colour is a bright tan, commencing right at the beak, and, in good spocimens, extending well down the breast—the further the better. Some Bramblefinches have a little patch of white just under tho beak. This is rather a technical imperfection than a downright fault. Others have the black of the head and neck continued so far down and round as to encircle tho throat. This is decidedly objectionable in tho show bird.

Notice should be taken of the variously-coloured wing bars, and of the two rows of ticking at the thighs, also of the clean cut lines which divido the several colours. The pure white regions immediately above and below the tail are an admirably suitable finish to an extremely handsome bird.

YELLOW NORWICH PLAINHEAD HEN

The Breeding of Norwich Plainheads.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. Furniss before the Sheffield C.B.S. on Feb. 2.

I received quite a shock on arriving home last Saturday to be informed that one of our secretaries had called to say that they had put me down for a paper on the Norwich Plainhead, seeing there are, in this society, members who have had far more practical experience than I. You have to-day a Fancy Press which gives all the information possible, so that you must not expect to hear anything but what has been oft repeated.

The Ideal Show Bird.

An ideal show bird should have a good, round head; that is, wide at the entrance, and rising nicely from a short beak, with a bold eye and prominent cheeks; a short, thick neck; good, deep chest, well filled in down the back; and the wings well braced, just meeting nicely at the tips. It must have a neat, short, closely-folded tail, clean round the thighs, and be short in legs, but not too short.

The bird must have a nice, jaunty carriage, and must take the perches in the best of style. It should possess that soft, silky feather which carries that delicate and desirable pinky shade of colour; and the bird should have no "trousers" round the thighs.

Now, to breed a winner, the birds would have to be paired together judiciously, and the fancier should be careful to avoid the pairing-up of those having the same faults, and to try to counterbalance the failing of one by the excellence of the other, thereby striking the happy medium as it were, which would bring us nearer the model given us to attain.

In pairing-up take particular notice of the hens. See that you get them true to type, and of medium size, with short, silky feather.

Points of the Hens.

Three of the most important items in respect to the hens are head, wings, and carriage. There is nothing looks worse than a slovenly hen, with wings crossed like scissors, or one wing down and the other one up. And the head properties are an important point, the head being one of the hardest things to keep up in size, so that it is as well to let both birds excel in head. On the cock's side you must have size, substance, and colour. You can afford to give a little as to feather, as there are few large birds which do not carry a bit of feather.

In visiting other fanciers' rooms, I have noticed that some of their old stock cocks possess massive heads, "nappers," as some call them; they are a bit browy, have short, thick necks, and oh! what bodies! Some of them are like young pigeons when handled. Stock birds which these old fanciers keep and breed with year after year are paired to hens of medium size, but all there for type and quality. I prefer a year-old cock—one which has been run over, paired to either a year-old or an unflighted hen of opposite colour, and, of course, both birds must be in good health and condition.

I am not a lover of using birds which sit on the perches all the winter looking thick, and then are forced into breeding condition. I like them to be vigorous all the year round.

Plenty of Green Blood Wanted.

Another important item is to have plenty of green blood in your stock, as you can then get colour and quality which, as you all know, plays such an important part on the show bench.

I must here say that at some of our shows you occasionally see typical birds put back in preference to the big, long-sided, red-hot, browy bird. Personally, I think type should be first. No doubt many winners on tho show bench to-day are the result of double-buffing. Of course, care is needed in selecting tho type of bird for this purpose, and also a knowledge of how the bird is bred. But if both birds are nice, light-feathered specimens, bred from good stock, and there is plenty of colour in them, they should produce something tip-top. I have seen youngsters bred this way of better quality than their parents.

One of the great drawbacks to double-buffing is the limiting of the yellow birds; practically all the youngsters are buffs. And in the ordinary way of pairing yellow to buff, you still got a preponderance of buffs. Double-yellowing I don't consider suitable for Norwich, as you get birds slimmer and smaller. Mind you, produce a good breeding yellow hen this way and pair it back to a big buff stock bird, and this should breed something right.

I have not touched on the work in the breeding and moulting season, through the limited time I have had at my disposal in preparing this short paper, but I will give you my methods of breeding, etc., on some future occasion.

The Roller Canary: Its Breeding, Training & General Management.

By "SCHOOLMASTER."

This practical article is written by one of our leading present-day Roller experts who, however, wishes to remain anonymous.

Place your hens in one of your double-breeding cages with partition removed. This will make a serviceable flight for two hens. Put your cock bird in another room out of hearing altogether from the hens, or his singing will have a tendency to bring the hens forward into breeding condition before anything like suitable weather prevails.

Subduing the Song.

Should the cock, instead of being a low, or moderate-voiced bird, be full-toned (which in Roller parlance means loud-voiced), with, say, two or more faults, no amount of darkening in a shutter-cage will make it into a low-voiced singer. But while the majority of these full-toned singers are in a closed shutter-cage, they will sing in a more subdued tone, but immediately they are given the light again they fall back into their old style of singing.

A bird of this description is by no means to be despised as a stock bird, providing it is well bred, say, from a winner and a properly selected hen, or again, from a known winning strain; it is no guarantee whatever that because the cock is a full-toned, faulty singer his youngsters will be the same. I will give the novice beginner just one illustration in proof of this; I could give more, but I think one will suffice to make my meaning perfectly clear. I have bred with a winning cock that sang a good variety of tours, but had a bad nasal tour; now, out of a whole season's breeding not one youngster bred from this cock sang this same fault. Some of the youngsters sang a slight aufzug, others a high schockel, and others, again, brought out sharp flutes and a high bell tour. At the same time they had some beautiful tours, especially the hollow roll, water glucke and bass tour. The beginner will see by the above that like does not always breed like. I might mention that these young cocks were not tutored by their sire. It is far the better plan for the purchaser to personally visit a breeder or dealer, whom he suggests to purchase his stock from; he would then in all probability hear the cock (or cocks) sing before he decides to buy. At the same time the seller will point out to him the different tours, also the faults, if any, which his selected bird sings.

A Tip

Perhaps a little advice on this subject would be beneficial. When you get into a breeder's or a dealer's room, remember that he is often a busy man, who always has plenty of work waiting for him. So tell him at once what you require, and how much you are prepared to give for the same, and don't sit in his room for a couple of hours trying to teach him how he should breed his birds, or that you do not think it matters what kind of a German hen he uses, or that you yourself had a beautiful singer (a Seifert) that sang over 30 changes, but alas! it is now dead. Old hands in the Fancy will know that the above is not a mere theorising on my part, but absolutely according to fact. And if the seller does not wish to begin an argument with you, well, he'll smile when you are gone.

So when purchasing your birds, do not waste the seller's time, but ask for what you want, and at the same time ask him how the birds have been fed, and whether they are used to a cold room or one where artificial heat is used. Also get to know what tours your cock bird sings. No man will demur answering these few sensible questions, and it is very likely you will also get the following thrown in: "If you get 'stuck fast' at any time, call again, and I'll do my best to set you right." It is often surprising the number of local callers a breeder will get in answer to an advertisement in our CAGE BIRDS, and every one takes up of his time. But try and remember that the "old hand" will not believe your yarns of cocks with 30 different changes of song.

Price Will Depend.

The price you will have to pay for your stock will depend a great deal upon the seller, and upon the price he paid for his own breeding stock. Opinions on this point differ very much, so no hard and fast valuation can be set upon it, and if a breeder's stock birds cost him from £3 to £5 each for cocks, and 10s. upwards for hens, then you cannot reasonably expect to get from him pair of birds for, say, 15s., because he knows it is very probable you are just as likely to breed a winner from one of his faulty singers (that is, if it is properly trained) as he is himself from a better class singer of the same strain. I think I have said sufficient to set the beginner right in the matter of the purchasing of his stock. Having ascertained the temperature your newly-purchased birds have been used to, and the kind of seed they have been having, follow out same at least until the warm weather arrives; then you can remove them to a cold room. By a cold room, I mean one where no artificial heat is used. The hens (or cocks) can then remain in this cold room all through the following winter, as the Roller Canary is a hardy bird, and will stand a great deal of cold. But by all means avoid cold draughts and damp. I have Rollers at the present time (Feb. 1st) in a cold out-door room, with the glass standing at freezing point, and my birds are all tight in feather, and as hard as nails. And even at this temperature they will have a bath and enjoy it. There is not a wheezy, ailing bird in my whole stock. I mention this fact to show the beginner that the Roller is not such a hot-house variety as some people believe it to be. Other people will complain that it is only a one-year's singer; also that when they purchase Rollers they sing sweet and low, and then after a short time the voices get so loud as to craze you. This is entirely the purchaser's own fault, and not the fault of the bird at all.

Not a One-Season Singer.

It is erroneous to say that the Roller is only a one-season singer, because if properly treated they will sing for you as long as they live. But I must admit that as age increases their song will deteriorate. I know there are exceptions in all cases, for I myself knew a common German Canary that sang well for eleven years, and this bird was hung from a ceiling in an open wire cage, over a gas jet and quite close to a fire. This is one of those exceptional cases, as the owner's next dozen pets might not stand this sort of treatment for as many weeks as his old bird did years.

The reason those low, sweet singers get loud, and craze you, is because before you purchased them their trainer had kept them dark. This is the whole pith of the thing. Treat birds in the following way: Place them in a shutter-cage, with doors about half-way closed. Then when you know the bird can readily find his food and water, begin gradually to close the doors until you have the bird so that he can find his food and water in the dark. Feed him liberally, but not too well, or else you will get the bird into rank breeding condition; that is, if he is in a warm room. It is only natural that when he comes into this form his voice will get louder.

When you have the bird used to the cage, so that it can find both food and water, you will find he will sing when closed up, but you must open the cage doors at least once per day, for a period of three-quarters of an hour, or an hour. If your time will not allow of this, then open oftener but for shorter periods. You should arrange it according to your time. Say, if you go home to your breakfast and dinner, arrange for the shutter-cage, or cages, to be open for a few minutes each time, then close them up again in darkness. But see to it your cages are properly ventilated.

By following out the above-named method you will get your low-voiced birds to sing in a low tone; but with a full-toned bird, no amount of darkening will make it a natural low-voiced one.

The Next Step.

Assuming that your hens are now placed in your breeding cage (which will act as a flight cage), place a good covering of gritty sand or sawdust on the cage bottom; but if sawdust is used, grit must be supplied in a separate vessel. A small shrimp-pot is handy, or a wire worker would make you a few grit-tins to hang inside the cage. A very convenient size is 1¼in. long, ¾in. wide, and ¾in. deep; these will be very handy, as they do not take up much room; they look neat, and they will only cost about 9d. or 10d. per dozen.

Cold Room Birds.

If your birds are in a cold room you may feed them more liberally than if they were in a warm room. In addition to their usual staple diet, give once per week a small teaspoonful of hemp seed for each bird. Then on another day give the same quantity of egg food or a capital substitute for the same, mixing with it a good pinch of maw seed. This, with a small piece of sweet apple, boiled potato or carrot, or a small piece of watercress once or twice per week, is ample to keep them fit until you commence to feed them up, before placing them together for breeding. I do not care for watercress myself, unless I can gather my own, and can then see what sort of water it grows in; it does not always grow in the cleanest and purest water.

The above-named treatment is suitable for both cocks and hens when they are kept in a cool room. Birds kept in this way do not they were kept in an artificially heated room, I should most certainly advise you to do the same. If this is not convenient for you, put the birds in your living kitchen and warmly cover the cages up each night when the gas is turned out. Here you will have to keep them until suitable weather arrives, when you will be able to transfer them to your selected cold room. Birds kept in this way do not require very liberal feeding during the winter months, or you will bring them forward into breeding condition before the proper time, and your hens will begin to drop eggs on the cage bottom, and by all possible means this should be avoided, as it often upsets a hen for the whole season.

Feed them on nothing but plain Canary and rape seed, or rape seed, as the birds are used to having, with a little apple or green food twice a week, and in all cases don't forget their bath. Let them bathe every day if they will; this is all that is necessary until you commence to feed them for breeding.

A RARE AND INTERESTING HYBRID.

Crested Greenfinch Mule exhibited at Clapham Show by Mr. H. J. Weaser (Denham, Bucks.)

Wild Bird-Life.

The Destructive Woodpigeon.

All the year round Woodpigeons are fairly plentiful in that part of Surrey where the writer of these notes resides. During the early spring and heat of summer there is no sweeter sound in the woodlands than the love song of this handsome bird. He is well named, for when not feeding in the fields, he is haunting the woods, either to rest, and digest his meal, or to seek beech mast, and scorns, both of which he is exceedingly fond of; and although he frequently nests in isolated trees, in tall hedgerows, and small plantations, he undoubtedly prefers the solitude of the more extensive woods in which to build that curious platform of sticks which serves as a nest, to contain the pair of snow-white eggs and to rear a couple of lusty young ones. To the agriculturist the Woodpigeon is of very little use, for although during the months of June and July he will settle in the growing corn, and feed upon several of the seeds of weeds growing mostly upon cultivated ground, he is practically for the remainder of the year an enemy who has to be watched very carefully. The Woodpigeon is a tremendous feeder, and during harvest a good handful of ripe corn can be taken from the crop of a single bird, and later, in the winter, when the sowing commences, he is quite as destructive as the Rooks. When green stuff is scarce, towards the turn of the year, after he has denuded the woods of acorns, and beech nuts, he raids the fields for green food, and will devour as much in a day as will suffice for a human being. Unfortunately we have not only our own birds to contend with, but thousands of others visit us during the autumn, and winter months. These roam the country in huge flocks, doing no end of damage, and in the wooded districts of the southern counties are almost a plague upon the land. So serious are their depredations that big battues are arranged, extending over several counties. The method of dealing with them is simple yet effectual. At a given time of a certain day, every farmer and land-owner takes up a favourite position, usually at the edge of a wood; shooting soon commences. As the birds fly from wood to wood, they are met at each point, so that in a few hours thousands are slain, the majority of which are despatched to the nearest markets. Of late years these birds have become much more numerous, and as they breed nearly all the year round, it requires some such method to keep them in check, as we have now no large Hawk or Falcon, who systematically destroys them. Falcon, which systematically destroys them. That the guns entail huge slaughter upon the hordes of pigeons is unquestionable.

Hybrid Breeding: Its Pleasures and Difficulties.

By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

Again, Britishers in captivity are very erratic in their manner of laying. Some hens will lay one egg, and then stop for three or four days, when you will get the rest of the clutch, perhaps on successive days. Others will present you with an egg on alternate days until the full clutch has been obtained; while others, again, will lay a certain number on two or three successive days, and an equal number again in about twelve or fourteen days. My hen Redpoll gave me considerable trouble in this respect, laying an egg every second or third day. Thus it took a fortnight or more to get a full clutch from her, with the result that the eggs were placed under the Canaries in two or threes, and at different times. The Bullfinch hen from which I bred by Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrids laid two eggs at the end of every twelve days with great regularity throughout the season.

Testing the Eggs.

Having secured your clutches of eggs, the next business is to test them. Here, too, your methods must be thorough. You cannot afford to be lax in this matter, for it is just possible that the eggs which you do not test are the ones which would have proved fertile. Every egg must be thoroughly tested. This is not always an easy matter, even with five or six pairs of Canaries to take the eggs, and the resources of the breeder will often be taxed to the utmost.

Most breeders say that fertile eggs are more likely to be obtained late in the season, in July and August; but, with one exception, the whole of my Hybrids were hatched in May or early June. Two Goldfinch-Redpolls were hatched on May 12th, and a Linnet-Bullfinch on May 19th. I attribute this early success to natural feeding and the splendid condition of my birds.

Management of the Canaries

The next important point for our consideration is the management of the Canaries which are to be entrusted with the work of incubating and rearing the young Hybrids; it is not safe, as I have already stated, to trust the Britishers in these matters. It will be necessary to have several pairs of Canaries going off to nest at different times, so that there shall always be two or three hens sitting ready to take the eggs laid by the Britishers. Common Canaries are as suitable as any for this purpose, as they are generally good feeders.

If you are trying any of the smaller crosses, such as the Goldfinch-Redpoll, or the Siskin-Redpoll, it would be advisable to have a Border Fancy hen or two among your feeders, as I think the tiny youngsters would do better under these small hens.

My first pair is set going on the first Saturday in April, as a rule, and the remaining pairs on the following five Saturdays—one pair each week. By adopting this plan you will be sure that your hens are going off to nest at different times, which is a matter of great importance. Do not allow your hens to come into breeding condition too early, or you will find it difficult to carry out this arrangement. When setting your hens going, always select the most forward birds, for then they will soon go off to nest.

Give your Canaries their usual diet of Canary, rape seed, etc., but also get them used to the wild seeds, such as groundsel, dandelion, plantain and shepherd's purse, for you will find them very useful when the young Hybrid arrives. Some Canaries, too, will not object to ants' eggs when these are mixed with the egg-food, and I have known many Canaries devour them greedily. Such birds should prove invaluable, for I believe we should stand a much better chance of rearing our Hybrids if they were supplied with a certain amount of insectivorous food.

Colour-feeding for Exhibition

When at last the Hybrid is reared, there must be no relaxation of effort, for there is yet much to be done before the young bird will be ready for the show-bench. The approach of the moulting season is a most critical period, for much depends upon how the bird is steered through its first moult. If he moults out a strong and healthy specimen, he is likely, in an ordinary way, to live through several show seasons. Supply him with good wholesome food give plenty of exercise, together with a free use of the bath, and keep your cages and fittings scrupulously clean and free from red-mite. Attention to these matters makes all the difference in the bird's health, and will probably considerably lengthen its days.

It is scarcely necessary for me to say that if any winning is to be done with our Hybrids, they must be colour-fed. Indeed, it would be almost useless to send a natural-coloured specimen to a show in these days of keen rivalry. Colour-feeding, then, must form part of the scheme in the production of the exhibition Hybrid. Whether we agree with colour-feeding or not, does not very much matter. The fact remains that we must either colour-feed our birds or take a back seat.

When obtaining your colour-food, get it direct from a reliable dealer, and only use pepper of the best quality. To every 4 lbs. of tasteless pepper I add 1 lb. of best hot Natal, and ½ lb. of castor sugar. Many breeders add a certain quantity of best olive oil to the pepper; but I think that the foods as supplied by most dealers contain quite sufficient quantities of oil. When preparing the colour-food for my Mules and Hybrids, I mix one teaspoonful of pepper to two or three teaspoonfuls of egg food, supplying a teaspoonful of this mixture to each bird. Do not commence at this strength, but begin with a very small proportion of pepper, and gradually increase until the full strength has been reached. Do not wait until your birds begin to drop their feathers before commencing to colour-feed. I put all my old birds on to the food by the end of June, so as to get the colour well into the bird's system before the new feathers begin to grow. All young birds are put on to the food when they are about seven or eight weeks old. If your birds are to moult out a really good, even colour, the food must be given regularly, and you must see that your birds finish their allowance each day. You will often find it necessary to remove your seed vessels until the birds have finished their soft food. My own plan is to remove seed vessels at night, and put them back on the following day when the birds have eaten their egg food. I avoid the use of green food during the moult, as I find the colour-food quite relaxing enough.

Continue to give the colour-food until the birds are well through their moult, and then gradually decrease the quantity of pepper, and also give your birds their seed a little earlier every day until you get them on wholly to seed again. Do not let the change from soft food to seed be a sudden one, or you will upset your birds, and possibly lose some of them. Even after the birds are clean-moulted you will find it necessary to give your exhibition birds colour-food once or twice a week during the show season, as they are apt to lose feathers from various causes, especially when at the shows or travelling.

Hints on Exhibiting.

When the time arrives for sending your birds to the shows you will find that this part of your hobby furnishes yet another instance of that glorious uncertainty which makes bird-keeping such a fascinating pastime. Here, again, however, much can be done to enhance your chances of winning. Show your birds to the best advantage. I have seen many a bird at the shows, which would have occupied a higher position in the award list if it had been properly staged. Send out your birds in properly fitted show-cages of the latest pattern and design, and stage them as faultlessly as possible. Pay a visit to one or two big shows, and learn for yourself how some of the big winners stage their exhibits. I have visited the Western Counties Ornithological Society (Plymouth), and the Crystal Palace Shows, and have found these shows an education in themselves.

I am not in favour of over-showing one's Hybrids, unless one possesses a big team on which to ring the changes, sending one team out one week, and another team the next. I think five or six shows quite sufficient for any bird in one season; and this means sending a bird out about once a fortnight.

Do not be too apt to quarrel with the judge's decisions when you find your birds out of the cards. Learn to take your wins and losses in the same good spirit. We should not be hasty in our judgment of the judge's awards, nor should we assume that we know all his motives. By all means criticise his awards if you think he has made mistakes, but let your criticism be fair, and at least give him credit for having done his work conscientiously. Judges, after all, are merely human, and like the Mayor of Slocum-on-Mud, they sometimes make mistakes. Above all, show your birds honestly; do not let the desire to finish on top lead you to act fraudulently.

A Final Word.

Many have adopted bird-keeping as a result of reading an interesting article from the pen of an aviculturist who has been willing to allow others to benefit by his experience; and I shall feel amply rewarded if, by the writing of this article, I shall have persuaded any of my readers to follow in my steps, and adopt as a hobby the breeding of Hybrids. It is a generally accepted maxim that every man should have a hobby, and it cannot be denied that, as a rule, those men who spend some of their leisure in the pursuit of some interesting pastime, are far more happy and contented members of society than those who have no occupation during their hours of leisure. If there are any among my readers who are in search of a hobby, I can thoroughly recommend Hybrid-breeding as a delightful pastime, extremely fascinating, and one which will provide you with plenty of healthy and enjoyable excitement. You will in the pursuit of it find plenty of interest, to amuse and to instruct you, and when, at last, you have reached the goal of your ambition, and the living Hybrid stands before you—a result of all your labours—your joy will be such as is never known to the man who buys his winners.

Hints on the Construction of Travelling Cases.

H. NORMAN.

All the above show cases are of a more or less finished character, but some may require something made of rougher material, suitable for long distances and easily constructed. Fig. 6 will probably meet their requirements. In this case no measurements are given, as it is simple to construct such a case of any size. The sketch almost explains itself. The only part where the ordinary fancier may find a difficulty is in constructing the corners. It is practically immaterial what wood is used—ordinary tile or slate batten is cheap, and answers the purpose admirably. The tile batten is perhaps the more suitable, and can be purchased at from one shilling to one shilling and sixpence per 100ft., according to the district. It generally measures about 1¼in. by ¾in.

The rails should be cut each end as shown at B (Fig. 6); these should be nailed to the uprights as shown at A. These uprights want to be 1in. or a full ¾in. thick, but before doing this a small mortice would have to be cut in the centre for the centre uprights. If one is unable to mortice or hasn't the necessary tools, it could, of course, be carefully nailed, but a mortice makes a much stronger and a neater job.

When finishing, get the whole affair perfectly square, and nail a ¼in. board on to the bottom (Fig. 7); this not only adds to its strength, but keeps it perfectly square and secure.

The top can be made separately, as shown in the sketch, with another thin board across it. When this case is well lined with American cloth or stout canvas and fastened with straps, it makes a very serviceable case, and one that costs little, and will last a number of seasons.

A Light Carrying Case.

A fancier living in a large town where he is able to take his exhibits to the show himself and fetch them home again, will require a handy, light case for that purpose, one that is easily carried; the one in Fig. 8 is suitable. To make this, two thin boards should be procured of the desired size for top and bottom; also some strips about 3in. wide—these can be of pine like the bottom, or, if one can procure cedar wood, so much the better, as it is light and strong. Having prepared them, cut a piece out of each corner of the bottom board, as shown at B (Fig. 9), and nail the strips on at right angles to each other. Repeat this at all four corners. To these the top rails can be fastened either by nailing them inside or, as shown, with an angle iron inside for strengthening purposes. The lid is simply a board with a strip of narrow wood at each end to prevent the board splitting. Cover the whole with stout canvas or twill, and you have a handy, very light case, suitable for your purposes. Although it is much more rigid than it looks, remember, it is hardly suitable for sending long distances.

In making the all-wood cases, the fancier must not forget to bore a hole at each end for ventilation purposes. These should be covered inside with a small piece of perforated zinc; this prevents draughts. It is advisable to have one's cases all the same colour, or to have some distinguishing mark upon them, as they are then easily recognised and found among the pile of others usually seen at a big show, many of which so closely resemble each other that a mistake or much loss of time might easily occur. Do not forget to paint your name and address both inside and outside the case; also put on the outside, in good bold letters in red, the words, "Live Birds." and don't omit to use CAGE BIRDS "Live Bird Labels."

The Quails' Leader.

Old writers declare that the Corncrake is the leader of every flock of Quails. These two birds generally make their appearance at the same time, and being both ground birds are frequently found in the same district. They also depart to winter quarters simultaneously.

Birds of Australia.

Although the Australian Continent is several thousand miles from Europe, many of our birds are plentiful in some parts of it. Among the wild life of the country may be seen Swifts, Swallows, Martins, and Flycatchers, also larger birds, such as Hawks, Owls, Eagles, Gulls, Ducks, Plovers, etc.

Martins Rearing Sparrow.

It is on record that a pair of House Martins successfully reared a young House Sparrow, which they hatched from an egg deposited in the nest by a hen Sparrow. She no doubt laid the egg with a view of taking possession, but was turned out by the enraged Martins. The young one was carefully fed until he left the nest with the young Martin, and then finding he was neglected returned, and was again fed until he could do for himself.

The Largest Bird's Egg.

The largest bird's egg is that of the Ostrich. It weighs three pounds, and is about equal to twenty-four hen's eggs.

A Bird Imitator.

It is well known that birds swallow small stones and pieces of grit to assist in digestion, but few are aware that the crocodile also imitates birds by doing the same thing.

A Curious Rookery.

Rookeries generally consist of a good many nests, dotted about in several trees, but in Yarrell's "British Birds" mention is made of a Rookery in a single tree; this contained no less than one hundred nests.

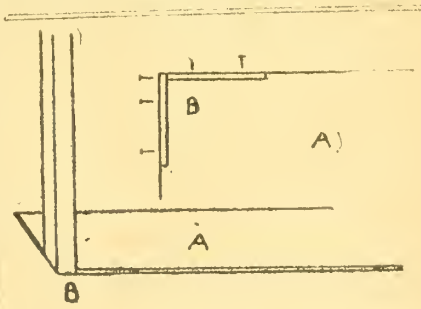

Fig. 9.

Jackdaws as Nurses.

Stanley relates an anecdote of some Jackdaws that were fed daily at a window sill, when one day the window was suddenly shut and crushed the greater part of the beak of one of the birds. It was nursed indoors for a time, and when released the companions of the bird fed it regularly until quite recovered, although it took several months for the mandible to grow again.

Three Forms of Bird Flight.

Birds have three chief modes of flight. They are: gliding or skimming; strokes of the wings; and soaring. Apparently most birds are able to glide, as even our common birds can be seen to do it; and again the majority progress by strokes of the wings, although the methods of using the strokes differs in the case of certain species, and frequently among the same birds. The sailing or soaring appears to be only possible to certain species. To rise higher and higher on motionless extended wings, is not an accomplishment given to all birds.

Club Reports.

DUNFERMLINE & W. OF FIFE O.S

Annual general meeting, held Co-operative Hall, Feb. 11th, Lord Bruce presiding. Balance-sheet was considered, and showed to be on the right side. Date of the show was fixed for January 2nd and 3rd, 1912.—Alexander Hynd, Sec.

CUPAR AND DISTRICT O.S.

Annual general meeting held 8th February. There was a record turn-out of members. Accounts were passed. Next show fixed for 2nd December. A large committee of fanciers were elected, with Mr. D. J. Bruce, Mount Pleasant, Cupar, as secretary.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, on Jan. 28th. Mr. J. Muir presided over a good attendance. Business: Revising rules and classes. We also extended the radius from 10 to 15 miles. Rule 21 has been deleted from the list. Next meeting Feb. 28th; nominating judges for ensuing year.—Wm. Clubb, Sec.

BEAMISH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, held Feb. 11th, Club Room, Bird Inn, Mr. Crosby in chair. Moved by Mr. J. Johnson, and seconded by Mr. W. Little, that we accept offer of Messrs. W. Butler, W. Knowles, and Crosby of a rose bowl, to be competed for at annual show for the best current year bird by a member. Moved by Mr. J. Johnson, and seconded by Mr. W. Butler, that Messrs. J. Robson, G. Robson, A. Young, and R. Goodchild become members. Moved by Mr. J. Johnson, and seconded by Mr. W. Butler, that we have nest feather show July 10.—W. Knowles, Sec.

BROXBURN AND DIS. C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Public Hall, Feb. 9, Mr. Murray (president) presiding over a very large attendance. Secretary submitted balance sheet for year ending Dec., 1910, as audited by Messrs. T. Sharp and W. Paul; it showed a credit balance of £4 2s. This, although £1 or so less than the amount brought into the accounts from the previous year, is a very creditable result in view of the fact that the expenses during the past year were much heavier than formerly. Office bearers.—Pres., W. Murray; vice-pres., W. Paul; Secretary, W. McLaren; treasurer, J. Workman; committee, Messrs. Sharp, Crighton, Rodgers, Boag, Findlayson, Philip, Aitken, Richardson, Taylor, Thomson. Classification drawn up for annual show and nomination of judges.—W. McLaren, Sec.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S

Meeting held St. Phillip's Mission Room, Westmoreland Street. Mr. T. Ridal presided over a capital attendance. The event of the evening was a judging competition with Mr J. Woolhouse as final judge. The result was a tie between Messrs. J. G. Cowley and H. Biddle; 2nd, Mr. J. Scott. This proved very interesting and instructive. Whilst the above was in progress the usual business was gone into. Decided, that we hold our nest feather show on June 24th, and that we appoint Mr. W. H. Champion to judge same. At next meeting, March 9th, we are to have the pleasure of hearing a lecture on breeding and rearing by Mr. G. Browning (Rotherham). Will all members endeavour to be present? Any fancier desirous of joining the above Society will be heartily welcomed. Following elected members: Messrs. Rhodes, Hutton, Kelsey, Hogan, Furniss, Roberts, and Howard.—C. W. Marshall.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Lecture on "Breeding and Management.

A large and enthusiastic body of fanciers welcomed Mr. J. S. Clarkson (Halifax) as lecturer at the meeting held Feb. 7th. The room was well filled with members and friends, who were delighted with a splendid lecture on "Breeding and Management." In the first place, the varied experience which he has enjoyed, coupled with the strong desire to fathom the many difficulties which face many fanciers, has given Mr. C. that confidence which an audience so thoroughly enjoys in listening to a lecture on such a seasonable topic; and although the lecture did, as Mr. Clarkson hinted it would, cover ground which in all probability had been traversed many times in previous lectures, yet the versatile manner in which he handled the subject made it very acceptable to both old and young fanciers alike, and I have no hesitation in saying that many of our members will be copying some of the methods Mr. Clarkson so freely gave; and I hope they will prove as beneficial to them in practical use as the lecture proved enjoyable.

In his opening remarks the lecturer took us back to the methods that prevailed at the time when he launched out in the Fancy; and the comparison he dealt with only tended to show the vast improvement which has taken place in the management of our stock and exhibition specimens.

In dealing with the cages, their preparation and arrangement, some real good points were dealt with. For instance, Mr. Clarkson does his cages inside with whitening, to which is added some ordinary table salt, the beneficial qualities contained in this common everyday commodity being very cleverly illustrated. No doubt much study has convinced the lecturer that it is almost a necessity with some animals and birds, just as it is argued on similar lines with regard to human beings. However, this proved a very good point. Those present mainly agreed with the lecturer in regard to the disadvantages which accrue from the use of enamel, etc., for the inside of the cages. Another very good idea was for the outside of the cages, instead of using the black lacquer, he used ordinary tar, to which had been added a sufficient quantity of turpentine, this acting in a double capacity—it was neat and was a check to any of the red mite or other pests which trouble a number of fanciers.

Mr. Clarkson's remarks anent his method of feeding his birds when preparing them for the breeding season contained some real good advice, especially re the advisability of studying the likes and dislikes of the birds. He also issued a warning with regard to pampering and over-feeding one's stock. This, in his idea, is a responsible factor in many of the disastrous events which follow afterwards when the young birds arrive. Ordinary household bread is used, along with hard-boiled egg and maw seed, the beneficial qualities of this seed receiving particular attention from the lecturer, who pins his faith to the good obtained from its use.

Mr. Clarkson does not believe in a too liberal use of green food at any period of the season, and refrains from using it at all for the first round. His arguments on this point were very forcible indeed, being backed up by considerable experience on his part. When the lecturer is preparing his nest boxes for the breeding season he fastens the linings of his nests in their proper place with Stockholm tar—another great preventive against red mite, it being almost certain to check any such pests.

On the training and upbringing of young birds, Mr. Clarkson dealt at great length, and impressed upon all the necessity for careful training, especially in the case of birds destined for the show bench. He said one-half the battle was to get them so they would show themselves to the best advantage, and whatever time was spent to obtain this result would always be repaid to the fancier in the long run.

Dealing with the question of feeding for colour, the lecturer, giving his methods of preparing and using same, passed some forcible remarks anent breeding for colour as well. Unless one was prepared to do this, he could, he said, assure him that satisfactory results would never be attained. Mr. Clarkson, in introducing this subject, said the idea that he had always followed out when breeding for colour was to use a cinnamon-marked hen, from which he obtained some real good quality and colour in the progeny. His objection to breeding it in on the cock side was in reference to the after-results.

In concluding, Mr. Clarkson said he would be pleased to answer any question that was asked. These were freely asked and answered. An enthusiastic vote of thanks was proposed in a neat little speech by the President (Mr. E. Suddards), and ably seconded by Mr. J. Farrar. Mr. Clarkson thanked the members for their attention. This closed a most profitable evening's business—one that had been thoroughly enjoyed by all.—H. Hill, Secretary

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held Feb. 4th, 55, Briggate, Mr. Mahoney in chair. This was a most successful meeting, 9 new members being enrolled. The balance sheet for 1910 was read and passed. We have every prospect of better time in the ensuing year. New members' names: Messrs. Best, Bland, Cross, Dobson, Firth, Hardcastle, Heron, Stead, and Sykes-Healy.—H. L. Davis, Assist. Sec.

COVENTRY (Godiva) C.B.S.

Election of officers for 1911: J. Busby, Esq., president; H. Saunders, chairman; W. Roycroft, vice-chairman; Messrs. Maff and A. Symonds, auditors; J. Busby, treasurer; committee, Messrs. J. Symonds, A. Wright, H. Wright, J. Blackshaw, H. Ward, J. Ingram, M'Dougall, J. Lucas, W. Wiberley, W. Rowley, and W. Payne; assistant hon. sec., T. Cooke; hon. sec., R. Symonds, 29, Melbourne Road, Earlsdon, Coventry.

LEITH (Jubilee) O.S.

Meeting held February 6th, Mr. Petrie presiding in the absence of the president through illness. There was a fairly good attendance, and a good spirit was put into the meeting by various members intimating that they had a goodly number of new members to propose at the March meeting. Proposed, that we have competitive classes of old birds at our annual show. Will anyone desirous of joining please communicate with me, or come to our meeting on March 6th?—Jas. Sinclair, 151, Easter Road.

HAMILTON (Cadzow Oaks) O.S.

Annual general meeting held Lesser Town Hall February 4th, Mr. J. Braidwood (vice-president) in chair. There was a large attendance. Mr. Cant (secretary) read the financial statement for 1910, showing a balance on the right side, and on the motion of Mr. Forrest, seconded by Mr. Allan, the balance-sheet was adopted. Chairman read Mr. A. Cant's resignation as secretary. Needless to say, we had to accept his resignation, but not without regret. Election of office bearers: Pres., W. Shearer, senr.; vice.-pres., T. Allan and H. Forrest; secretary and treasurer, G. Marlin; auditors, J. Braidwood and T. Morrison; committee, W. Shearer, junr., A. Cant, J. McIntyre, J. Braidwood, W. Hamilton, D. Johnstou, and T. Morrison. Settled, that we hold open show Nov. 11th, date to be inserted in "Show Date Fixtures" of CAGE BIRDS as soon as possible. Judges for annual show: Some of the best specialists we could think of were nominated for the different sections. A vote of thanks to the chairman and retiring officers terminated meeting.—G. Marlin, 21, Glebe Street (Sec.).

BOLTON WOODS C.B.S.

Annual supper and concert held Victoria Hotel, February 11th. We were again honoured with the presence of Councillor P. L. Craven, of the Bolton Ward. The supper provided by Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd was a great credit to them. The concert was A1, and no better singing has been heard in Bolton Woods for a long time, all the artistes being very good. The prizes were presented by Councillor P. L. Craven, who made some pleasing remarks, and promised to assist the Society and the cage bird Fancy in general at any time he could. He also promised to bring before the Parks Committee of the Bradford City Council a suggestion by Mr. H. J. Chittenden to provide public aviaries in the public parks. A vote of thanks was proposed and carried with musical honours to Mr. Craven; also the host and hostess and artistes. "God Save the King" was sung, and then we dispersed, everyone having spent a most enjoyable evening. Prize winners as follows:—Professional Section: Cup and marble clock, Mr. L. Dykes, first; marble clock, Mr. E. Goodwin, second; gold medal, Mr. F. Brook, third. Novice Section: Gold guard, Mr. W. B. Atkinson, first; alarm clock and brooch, Mr. J. Cooper, second; E.P. teapot, Mr. W. Bloomfield, third. This is the 5th time in succession Mr. Dykes has won the cup.—M. Skirrow, Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Feb. 2nd, Mr. Currah in chair. The following gentlemen were admitted members: Mr. J. Tate (Gateshead), Mr. N. Walker (Newcastle), Mr. F. Laidlaw (Benwell), Mr. J. Scott (Gateshead), Mr. Newton (Willington Quay). Correspondence was read from Mr. Winter and Mr. Bennett. Secretary read annual report. The balance-sheet as printed was accepted, and votes of thanks given the auditors. Mr. Haggie was elected president; vice-presidents elected, with the addition of Messrs. W. Anderson, W. F. Henderson, and J. Currah. Mr. Hutchinson was elected chairman and show manager; Mr. Shephard vice-chairman. Decided, that the positions of secretary and treasurer be joined, and that the secretary be paid a salary of £5 per annum. Mr. J. E. Atkinson, 10, Trewhitt Road, Heaton, Newcastle-on-Tyne, was unanimously elected to fill the position, and Mr. R. Tindale as hon. assistant secretary. Auditors elected: Messrs. W. Scott and J. Milne. To the committee were added Messrs. Curry, Maddison, J. N. F. Scott, G. Taylor, Tomlinson, and Crawhall. Rules passed with the necessary verbal alterations for the position of secretary and treasurer being combined. A selection of judges was made to be written to, and final selection left to committee.—T. C. Crawhall, late Hon. Sec.

EAST BOWLING AND DIS. B.F.A.

Annual social held Feb. 11th, St. John's School, and was a big success, the room being packed from end to end, people being unable to find sitting room. Chair occupied by our President (Mr. W. Robinson), who opened the ball with a few well-chosen remarks. The following artistes entertained the company to some splendid singing: Mr. F. Wilson, Miss Dixon, and the St. John's Concert party, consisting of Messrs. Booth, Fisher Wood, Cope, and Marsden. Miss Rider was an able accompanist, and gave a solo on the piano in fine style. The President presented the medal to the successful exhibitors during the past year. Open Section: 1, L. C. Casey; 2, A. Gledhill; 3, H. H. Clark. Novice Section: 1, C. Padgett; 2, L. Booth; 3, H. Shaw. A vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. Robinson, seconded by Mr. Booth, and supported by Mr. Firth, to the artistes and also the ladies for providing the supper, brought one of our most successful events to a close.—L. Booth, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual meeting held Feb. 18, Fawcett-st. Cafe, Mr. J. Farrer presiding over a good attendance. Table show for pairs, A.V., novices, held. Owing, no doubt, to the wet night, only a small number of birds were entered. Mr. J. Riseborough very ably judged, and in a short address on the Border Fancy pointed out that what was wanted was a nice round head, straight hill, full neck and back, not too long in legs, fine tail, and well carried wings. A very pleasant discussion was held, and Mr. Riseborough replied to several questions, and pointed out the good points and bad qualities of the birds shown. The membership being now confined to the borough and rural district, I shall be glad if members will do their utmost to introduce new members, who will be heartily welcomed. 1, Newcombe, very nice pair Bord., green cock and cl. buff hen; 2, 3, Bainbridge, very good mkd. buff ck., cl. yell hen, and cl. yell. ck., and mkd. buff hen, Borders. Mr. Bainbridge was congratulated on winning the breeding cage presented by Mr. Newcombe.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

YORK C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 13, when a very successful table show took place, some very good exhibits being entered in both the champion and novice classes. Over 70 birds were staged. Messrs. Shorney, Campling, Sissons, and Wright ably officiated as judges, and gave entire satisfaction. The honours in the Norwich classes were about equally divided amongst Messrs. H. Shoney, Hunter, Richardson, Pickering, and Wright; in the Yorkshire section they were shared between Messrs. Moffit and O'Reilly; in the A.O.V. Can., Messrs. Richardson and Thompson; in the British classes, Messrs. H. Shorney, Chittenden, and Zimmermann were the chief winners; and in the foreign section, Mr. Zimmermann gained most points. After judging the meeting was held. Several new members were enrolled. Decided, to hold whist drive, Feb. 28. Eight good prizes were given, including three singing Canaries. A silver tea-pot was given, to be won by a novice for most points during year; a silver medal was also given for second most points. Another table show of pairs will be held Mar. 13, the next meeting night, when all fanciers and friends will be heartily welcome.—H. Thompson, Sec.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES O.S

General meeting held Feb. 6th, Deansgate Hotel, there being a large attendance of members. Mr. W. A. Bladon in the chair. Report and balance sheet for year ending Dec. 31st submitted, approved and passed. They were considered very satisfactory. A table show of Yorkshires should have been held, but owing to some misunderstanding no birds were brought. Decided, to have a show of Yorkshires along with Norwich at next meeting, Feb. 20th, when there will he two classes for Yorks. (yell. and buff), and two classes for Nor. (yell. and buff). Mr. G. F. Gray will judge Yorks., and Mr. J. Raynes Nor. Mr. Raynes will also give a paper on Norwich. Will members bring as many birds as possible? Fee, 3d. per cage. Mr. A. G. Davis will give 2s. 6d. for most birds staged in Nor., and Mr. Yeats will give 2s. 6d. for most Yorks. Date for the annual open show again fixed for last Friday and Saturday in October (Oct. 27th and 28th); the show will again be held at Belle Vue. At end of the meeting the draw took place for the bird and cage offered in conjunction with the tickets for the Jan. show, the president (Mr. W. A. Bladon) drawing the slip bearing number 180, which was declared winner.—H. Boothman, hon. sec.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held Station Hotel, Feb. 8, Mr. Macdonald in chair. For about an hour Mr. Macdonald showed us views of local interest with the aid of the lantern. The committee's suggestion for the agenda for the year was adopted as follows: Feb., ramble around district with lantern views; Mar., lecture on birds; Apr., table show of British; May, egg food exhibition; June, July, Aug., table shows of young birds; Sept., social evening, presentation of table show cup and medals; Oct., washing exhibition; Nov., open date; Dec., ann. meeting. Judges for the above table shows were suggested as follows: April, Mr. Slack; June, Mr. Shepherd; July, Mr. Robson; Aug., Mr. Crawhall. Decided, to leave classification of British bird show in hands of committee. Also decided, that the young birds shows have four sections—Nor., Yorks., Bord., and A.O.V., and two classes in each section. The cup to go for most points won over the three shows, medals to be given to the member who wins most points at the three shows by the three highest-placed birds in each section. Mr. Stubbs was proposed a member. A vote of thanks was given Mr. Macdonald. The meeting was then closed. —John R. Evans, Sec.

SPEN VALLEY C.B.S.

To wind up a very successful year, members met round the festive board at the Commercial Hotel, Cleckheaton, on Feb. 6, and spent a pleasant time. A first-class meal was provided by Mr. and Mrs. Barron, which was partaken of by upwards of 20 persons. Mr. J. W. Wharton (president) occupied the chair. The following awards were presented by the chairman:—Cup and solid gold medal to Mr. F. Allen, for most points gained during season; rose bowl (given by Mr. J. M. Greig) and gold medal, Mr. H. E. Hadwen, for second most points; gold medal to Mr. B. Wood for third most points; and silver medals to Mr. A. Sheard and Mr. S. Binns, who tied for fourth place. This is the second year in succession that Mr. Allen has won the cup, and in acknowledging it he said he had always "shown" in the true fancier's spirit. Mr. Hadwen, who took up the fancy only three years ago, has this year won his novice medal with the Yorkshire Union. During the evening songs were contributed by Messrs. T. Murray (who also acted as accompanist), T. Bentley, F. Sykes, and H. Jessop. Votes of thanks to representatives of the Press and to the host and hostess terminated a pleasant little function.—J. Lewis, Hon. Sec.

In the Courts.

Fined at Grantham.

At Spittlegate (Grantham) Petty Sessions, on Feb. 11th, Harry Hunt, plumber, and John Hunt, plumber, Grantham, were summoned for using a net for taking a certain scheduled wild bird, to wit, a Goldfinch, on January 29th, in contravention of the Wild Birds' Protection Act. —Defendants pleaded not guilty.

Police-Constable Dawson said he saw the defendants in a field near Barrowby Thorne, which was the property of the Duke of Devonshire. They were trying to catch birds. After watching them for forty-five minutes he went towards the men. John ran away behind the wood. He saw they had got a Goldfinch and a Linnet in separate cages on the ground. They had two other Goldfinches with the braces (produced) round their bodies, and tied down with little strings. There was a large net with a long cord attached, and defendants had been standing at the end of the cord watching for birds coming. Harry Hunt said none of the things belonged to him. In a hamper witness saw a little bag containing a Goldfinch. It was very wild, and had been freshly caught. He asked defendants if they had got any birds, and they said only four decoys. They denied having a Goldfinch in the hamper, and witness then told them what he had seen. John Hunt said he would get it out, and he took the bird out of the hamper and let it go.—John Hunt: It was a Linnet in the bag. —Witness: You wilfully let the bird out of the bag.—Harry Hunt: It was a Goldfinch Mule in the cage.

Inspector Small, of the R.S.P.C.A., spoke to interviewing both the defendants. John Hunt said they were out for Linnets and not Goldfinches. Witness said, "Do you usually use a Goldfinch for Linnets? He replied, "Yes." Afterwards he said he caught anything that came in the way.—The Chairman: Yes, I should think he did.—John Hunt: What I said was, "If any bird went in that was of any use I should catch it.' (Laughter.)

The Chairman said defendants would be fined 10s. and 1s. costs each, and nets to be destroyed. —Superintendent Peach: The constable did not seize the nets.—"Nottingham Daily Express."

EXETER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A large gathering of fanciers met on Feb. 7th to pay a tribute to their esteemed hon. secretary (Mr. R. H. Folley) for his services during the past four years. It took the form of an address and a purse of gold. Mr. J. Stone (in the absence of the chairman, Mr. W. Down) made the presentation with a few appreciative remarks.—Mr. R. H. Folley, in reply, said he could not find words to express his thanks for the pleasant and unexpected surprise they had given him. He trusted that in the future members would rally round him when assistance was required, in order that the interests of the Society might be thoroughly looked after. A letter was read from the chairman paying a high tribute to the hard work and valuable services of Mr. Folley. Officers and committee elected: President, Mr. W. Linford Brown; chairman, Mr. W. Brown; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Stone; treasurer, Mr. R. Chudley; committee, Messrs. W. Cummings, H. Denham, T. Evins, J. Johnson, R. Marshall, C. Middleton, W. Moles, J. Scribbins, P. Stilling, G. Snell, G. Tripe, and J. Turner. There were 17 nominations for 12 seats. It will be seen that the members have infused fresh blood into the committee, which should tend to further strengthen the Society. The challenge cup in the Crest section (won outright by Messrs. Evins Bros.) is being replaced by subscription, the collector of the necessary funds being Mr. J. Johnson, who will be pleased to receive any small donations. The annual report for the year 1910 states that the meetings and lectures had been fairly well attended, but the committee hope that during the present year the younger members will take a keener interest in the Society. Three shows were held during the year, all of which proved successful, the annual exhibition being one of the best held.

RUGBY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A 10-mile radius show held at Geisha Cafe, Feb. 18. Mr. J. A. Tyler (Leicester) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

AN ASSOCIATION OF BIRD LOVERS.

A league of bird-keepers! Last week we intimated that in this issue we should have an announcement of great importance to make. It is this: We have decided to establish a league of bird-keepers, called "Cage Birds League."

The necessity of bird-keepers banding themselves together in the interests of the hobby they hold so dear has never been so apparent as at the present moment. The actions of those misguided individuals who from sentimental reasons would welcome the suppression of bird-keeping and bird-keepers have never been more aggressive than at the present day. And there is no organisation on the side of the bird-keeper which can stand up for his cause and effectually combat the mistaken views of the faddists who attack him.

To bring into being such an organisation is a question which has occupied our attention for some time, and now that the strenuous days of the exhibition season are done with, it seems fitting that some such organisation—a league of bird-keepers—should be launched. Well, we intend to do our utmost in the interests of the Fancy at large and of everyone who takes joy in the keeping of birds as pets, to organise such a League and establish it on such a basis as will permit of bird-keepers all over the country—in every quarter of the globe in fact, into which CAGE BIRDS penetrates—to effectually combine in case of need to protect their common interests.

But it must not be thought that the object of calling this League into being is solely one of defence against outside enemies. That is but one sphere in which it can be of use. The primary object is rather that it shall be a League of good-fellowship—a bond 'twixt fancier and fancier and 'twixt all who are interested in the hobby of bird-keeping, though not "fanciers" in the strict meaning of the term.

It is not our intention this week to indicate more than the main lines upon which we purpose establishing "Cage Birds League." We are anxious, in fact, to have the views of our readers on this matter before finally deciding upon its constitution. "In a multitude of counsellers there is wisdom." We ask bird-keepers to give their consideration to the ideas herein put forward and to write us at the earliest opportunity, either criticising them freely and fearlessly should they find weak spots, or suggesting the lines upon which they think the League ought to be worked. All letters which reach us will, as perhaps we need hardly say, be given the fullest and most careful consideration, and the suggestions they may contain be adopted, if practicable.

We want it to be very clearly understood that this League will in no sense aspire to be a governing or controlling body and that it will not interfere or conflict with any club or society at present in existence. Its sole idea will be to work in the best interests of bird-keeping and those who make bird-keeping their hobby.

To put the objects of the League clearly before our readers, we will define them tentatively as:—

(1) To form a bond of good-fellowship and union between bird-keepers all over the world.

(2) To inculcate the principles by which birds suited to captivity may be kept under humane and proper conditions.

(3) To act as a league of defence and protection.

Before the coming of the next show season we shall hope to place in the possession of every bird-keeper who sympathises with the objects of "Cage Birds League," a badge of membership. This badge will be neat and dainty in design, and made in three forms, one to be slipped through the button-hole on the lapel of the coat, one to be worn as a charm on the watch-chain, and one with a pin at back in the form of a brooch. These badges we shall ask members to wear on every possible opportunity (there will be nothing of the nature of an advertisement about them, except of the League itself) and at the shows, etc., they will serve as a valuable and, we think, much-needed means of introducing one bird-keeper to another.

The sympathy and co-operation of secretaries of societies are especially sought by us in bringing this League to the notice of all their members. We intend, in fact, to ask each secretary to act as a district representative, so that should it at any time be necessary for bird-keepers to take concerted action in their own interests, it will be possible to call one mass meeting in centres where it is convenient to do so; this, of course secretarial co-operation will make easy of attainment.

Now, kindly readers, the matter is in your hands. We need not reiterate the urgent necessity for the formation of an association of bird-keepers. We leave it in the full belief that you will take up the matter in the spirit of enthusiasm you have shown towards such appeals as we have made in the past. And "Cage Birds League" will be an assured success and launched upon a career, we hope and trust, of usefulness to bird-keepers and bird-keeping alike.

STONEHOUSE (N.B.) C.B. & H.S.

Special meeting held Feb. 18, Buck's Head, for election of office bearers for 1911. Resolved, to re-elect office bearers of last year, as we could not find a better chairman than we had in president George McAlpine; vice-president, J. Cuthbertson; treasurer, T. Sorbie; assistant secretary, W. Melvin; secretary, J. Hamilton; auditors, J. Buchannan and T. Mather. It was decided that we hold meetings in the Public Hall Anti-room, and to defray the expenses of hall rent we decided to make the subs. 3/6 this year for membership. Decided, that we hold open show on the same day as last year, and that we guarantee with CAGE BIRDS, so as to get our show advertised in the show dates fixed columns of CAGE BIRDS, in order to avoid other shows clashing with ours. Agreed, to hold a table show, Feb. 25th, for cage birds and homers. Classes for cage bird section in breeding pairs:—Can. pairs, Mule pairs, Hyb. pairs. Judge, Mr. J. Whitelaw. Specials for those classes:—2/- by Mr. J. Hamilton for best Can. pair; spl. by Mr. T. Sorbie for best in Hyb. pair and Mule pairs. Entry 4d. Show to be held in Lesser Hall at 6 p.m. It is hoped intending exhibitors will be at hall at time stated.—Jas. Hamilton,

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Annual tea and social held Co-op. Rooms, Sundridge-road, Feb. 11th, also members' competition prizes presented. A nice company of 84 fanciers and friends sat down to a splendid tea, and full justice was done to it. After tea the Chairman kindly stood down for our old and esteemed friend and fancier Mr. J. S. Clarkson (Halifax) to take chair, also to make the presentation. The prizes were tastefully arranged on a side table, and no doubt they made a grand show. Mr. Clarkson opened the programme by announcing a waltz, and I did not think we had so many dancers amongst us. Miss Ogalvie, Mr. W. Gledhill, and Mr. Murphy sang to the appreciation of all. In Mr. Clarkson we had the right man in the right place for the presentation. Commenting on the prizes, he said that in all his experience he had never seen a better set at any individual society's function. More songs and dancing were enjoyed till about 10.30, when Mr. J. Clark moved a vote of thanks to Mr. J. S. Clarkson. Mr. F. Lindbrook seconded, and Mr. W. Wharton supported—carried with enthusiasm. Mr. J. S. Clarkson ably replied. Mr. Morement moved a vote of thanks to the lady pianist and the artistes, also thanking the ladies for their services at the refreshment room at our late open show, when they handed over the sum of £1 13s. 3d., this being worked absolutely by themselves. I think this should be taken notice of by other societies. This was ably supported by Mr. W. Warton. Mr. Clarkson here mentioned that the Society was in a splendid financial position with over £21 in the bank; also that the last members' competition had proved the most successful, having averaged at the six shows 128 entries per show, also that the club's present condition was due no doubt in a great measure to the able and most energetic working of our present Secretary, Mr. F. Rhodes. Two new members were nominated—Messrs. S. Wilcock and H. Sims. Mr. J. Roe proposed a vote of thanks to the Fancy Press for the reports given; seconded by W. Morement.—W. Morement, Sec. pro tem; J. Roe, Assist. Sec.

BOLTON ROLLER C.S.

Meeting held Feb. 14, Joiners' Arms, Deansgate. It proved a very interesting meeting. One or two members brought their birds, and the tours were explained by the secretary, Mr. Massey; his remarks were very much appreciated by fellow members and friends. We enrolled five new members. —E. Hewsham, Assist. Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 18th, Three Tons Inn, Eastwood, when a large number of members turned out. Mr. R. Cooper in chair. Mr. J. Taylor was elected president, and kindly consented to give a valuable gold medal to be competed for at the first feather shows by members, for most points; he also stated his willingness to do his utmost to get a valuable cup to be competed for by the members. In our worthy president, Mr. J. Taylor, we have found one who has this society's interests at heart, and intends to assist us to bring it to the front. Now, brother fanciers and members, it is our lot to do what we can to assist our president by getting new members. Three new members were elected. Will the committee meet at the Three Tons Inn, Eastwood, March 4, 7.15 p.m.? General meeting, March 11, at Portland Arms, Jacksdale, at 6.30 p.m. Will members please try and attend, as there will be a special item for that night? Also new rule cards will be ready.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

The Management of Gouldian Finches.

By ARTHUR J. B. O'NEILL.

Seeing that there is another large importation of Gouldian Finches due the first week in March, I am writing you giving my own experience with about 50 I procured from the last importation. Having for many years wished to procure a pair or two of these beautiful birds, and being unable to do so, it was a great pleasure to see, about eighteen months ago, that an importation was due. I at once set about ordering a few pairs from separate importers, so as to make sure of getting them, and within a few weeks I found I had got about 50 birds.

Upon the arrival of the first lot I found them very weak and unable to crack the seed, just being able to run it round their beaks, then drop it, and then put their heads under their wings (or, at least, adopt the attitude which is referred to as "head under wing"). I began to think that this would never do, so I tried to find something to strengthen them and something which would be easily taken. I got out the pan in which I make my barley water for the Sugar Birds and Lories, and placed in it (after half-filling it with water) a cup filled with milk. When the water came to the boil, I took out the milk, and when half-cooled, added about a wine-glassful of liquid malt and a teaspoonful of glycerine, mixed well together. I gave them this.

In about an hour the Gouldians were greatly improved, and more so two hours after this, which was about two a.m. I then went to bed feeling that they were going to stay with me, but I left the gas lit and the fire on, as they require a lot of warmth for a week or so. As they leave Australia about the middle of their summer, and arrive here about the middle of our winter, they must have warmth for at least the above-stated period. But when once over the effects of the journey, they are very hardy birds, and live in perfect health and condition in the open aviary all winter.

Delightful Pets.

I parted with all but eight pairs, which I kept for the purpose of trying to breed. They nested about three months after arrival, and laid in all about 30 eggs, but only sat them a day or two, and then left them, which was, I may state, as much as I expected under the circumstances. However, I intend again trying my luck with the same birds, as they are now fully acclimatised, in perfect health, and busy already building nests, and making love. The male birds are singing and dancing all day. I intend to get a few more, to prepare for next season, and thereby have a good stock in hand, so I have arranged to have sent me a good selection of both Blacks and Reds.

Gouldian Finches must have a good and constant supply of spray millet, as they are particularly fond of it, and as a seed mixture, Canary 3 parts and white millet 1 part, as they eat more of the former than the latter. When the birds are strong and cracking the seed, they require a good clearing out, as they get a great deal of dirt along with their food during their long journey. My method was to give them a good dose of Dinneford's Fluid Magnesia on two alternate days, with just plain water on the day between, and then another day on the milk diet, with, of course, seed in the cage all through the treatment. Then they are ready for their place in bird-room or aviary.

In conclusion, allow me to state that if my attempt to assist any brother fancier who has not had experience with these birds, or who has been unsuccessful with them, proves of any value, I shall be amply repaid for the time taken in writing the above. I wish your splendid publication, CAGE BIRDS, the success it deserves.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station-street, Wed., February 1st, Mr. Burke in chair. The Assist. Secretary read balance-sheet, and it was decided that same be printed and each member given a copy. Messrs. Harvey and Ingram were proposed and duly elected trustees. Following new members were then elected: Messrs. Southon, Buckley, Tye, T. Jones, and H. Day. Agreed, that next open show be held headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station-street, Birmingham, October 18th and 19th; judge to be announced later.—S. Mole, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW AND WEST OF SCOTLAND N.M.B. AND F.B.C.

Special general meeting held 123, Ingram Street, Feb. 2, Mr. J. Brown (president) in the chair. Secretary intimated we needed to engage rooms as present quarters were not available for Tuesday meetings. On the motion of Messrs. Bowman and Crawford, agreed to engage Mr. Duncan's rooms at 71, London Street. Revision: after a good deal of discussion it was agreed to delete Rule 16, barring any member of another club from membership. The chairman intimated we had five silver cups kindly granted for competition at annual members' show for 1911. Gentlemen elected members: Messrs. A. M. Nicol, Wallace, W. Barrie, J. Chalmers, M. Craig, J. Crawford, and A. Geddes. This terminated a very pleasant evening.—F. Taylor, Sec.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Egg Substitute and Bird-room.

D. P.—(1) Either of the foods you name are very tolerable substitutes for the usual egg and bread crumb or biscuit foods, and will rear the young quite well. As for which is the best, I would rather let the birds be the judges. Use the one they seem to eat with most relish and avidity. If you wish after trial to go back to egg and bread crumb, the question of time need not deter you, for if you boil your egg or eggs at night and put them aside unbroken until next morning, the time taken then to break open, extract the yolk, and mince up with the requisite quantity of bread crumb will be very little, if any, longer than it takes to moisten and stir up the other foods. You would find an extensive list of substitutes for egg in "Our Canaries." (2) If the birdroom you describe is free from damp, I see no reason at all why it should not prove most satisfactory as a birdroom, and if you took care to procure only birds reared under normal conditions there would be no need whatever to heat it by artificial means. The birds should thrive well in it all the year round. I am not clear whether you mean the ventilator is on top of house or top of the door, but in either case it would be best to have an ingress for fresh air near the floor, in addition to this one, which should act as an egress for the foul impure air.

Incubator Shed and Ailing Birds.

Star.—(1) Assuming the birds are located at one end of the shed, and the incubator at the other, and there is also a ventilator at the incubator end to carry off the fumes of the lamp, no harm whatever would result from the combination, seeing that the shed is of a good size and the incubator quite small. But in the absence of any ventilator, as suggested, you should arrange some means of capturing the fumes of the lamp, as by a kind of funnel just over the chimney, but, of course, in no way interfering with the regulating rods of the incubator, and conducting the fumes to the outer air. (2) Give the hen a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of banana; on the alternate days give a morsel of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, and a pinch of maw seed. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second. (3) Feed this bird the same as No. 2; give the rhubarb and salts for two consecutive days, and then for a fortnight dissolve in the water every second day a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. (4) Feed and treat this bird the same as No. 2 for a fortnight. See that cages are quite clean, free from insects, and that the shed is quite free from draughts.

Elementary (Brondesbury Aviaries).—It is impossible to go fully into details concerning your queries; you would, therefore, be well advised to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager, which will solve most, if not all, of your difficulties. You could certainly mate a yellow marked Nor. hen with a yellow Yorks. cock, and if your object is merely to breed some birds, there is no great objection. The young would be mongrels, of no particular use for further breeding with pure breds, and the feather of the young may be too short and scanty. It is always best to mate a yellow with a buff until you have sufficient knowledge to understand what you are doing. To mate them place the cock in a small cage, such as a nursery cage, and hang on the front of single breeder for a day or so, or until you see him feeding the hen through the wires. A simple mixture of Canary and rape would be a better staple diet, as you may often see advised here. In addition, a teaspoonful of egg food sprinkled with maw every second day, and a similar quantity of the mixed seed on the alternate days, with a leaf or two of dandelion daily, should suffice for the pair. A modern single breeder is preferable to a London breeder. I do not approve of spraying birds at all except in quite exceptional circumstances, or sometimes after washing, when preparing birds for show.

Sore Leg (Bert).—Your treatment will answer very nicely if you keep on the bandage until the place is healed, and no longer irritable. You may move it about every second day to put on fresh supply of ointment. When apparently healed, if it begins to pick it again when bandage is left off, smear on a little lanocyllin, or castor oil, if the former is not available.

Seed Samples (Anxious, 2).—Sorry I omitted to mention seeds in other reply. It was an oversight. The Canary is very small, and decidedly musty—therefore unfit to feed Canaries with. The rape is a very fair sample, but needs proper storage for a few months longer to mellow it. The hemp appears to be a mixture of different qualities—some of it is very fair, but a proportion is quite bad and rancid; therefore not a safe seed to use. The maw is a fair all-round sample.

Moving Birds (F. Croft).—You should move the birds as far as possible away from the fire in the kitchen at once, consistent, of course, with keeping them out of draughts, and away from burning lights. Then seize the opportunity when we have a day or two of mild weather to move them to the cold room. Such a spell we are having whilst these notes are being written, and birds could quite safely be given such a change of room whilst it lasts. Should it suddenly turn cold when they are moved, throw a light cover over the cages at night for a few nights, and give a pinch of hemp and a morsel of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it each day for a few days, and they will take no harm.

Moulting (M. A.).—See that the bird is not hung in a position where it is exposed to cold draughts from opening doors or windows, and not where there is a vast difference between day and night temperature. Avoid both these things, and keep the bird in a just comfortable, but not overheated, place. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed stale spongecake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of hemp and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of tincture of steel every second day until feathers cease dropping out.

Canary Queriists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Rollers for Song (One in Doubt).—No, you cannot hope to breed good singing Rollers and also Norwich in the same room, and keep the song of the Rollers pure. The song of the adult Rollers would be practically certain to deteriorate rapidly, and the young Rollers would be more apt to pick up the plebian strains of the Norwich than the artificial performances which are expected of them. To a certain extent you could prevent the latter by removing the young Rollers to another room out of hearing of the other birds as soon as they could do for themselves, and let them hear only a good singing Roller to educate them. On the whole, I think you would do well not to attempt running the two breeds together. So long as you get Rollers of a real good singing stock, it matters little or nothing by what name they are called.

Roller Ailing (Anxious).—You are not feeding the bird correctly, in addition to which I suspect it has contracted a bronchial attack. If not considerably brighter by the time this appears, put it in a moderate-sized box cage, and keep it in a cosy and equable temperature, but not necessarily overheated. Feed on a staple of two parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days, give a morsel of banana, or a little green food, if available. Limit the diet solely to this until better. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whiskey, six each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken, in the water two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week if necessary.

Aviary (Novice).—I'm afraid you must very much curb your desires in respect to the proposed aviary. One cock and two hens will be ample to stock the aviary for breeding, and they must all be of the same breed, unless you do not object to cross-breds. To start with more, or attempt breeding with two distinct breeds, will mean certain disappointment, and even with the above number, if they do fairly well, it would be most advisable to remove the first broods before the second were due to hatch. Three or four nesting boxes should be put in.

Forward Hens and Ailing Cock (H. H.).—You should move the hens out of sight of the cocks, if possible; of course, without exposing them to draughts or a greatly different temperature. If you could also move them out of earshot, so much the better. Limit the diet to plain Canary and green food when the weather is mild; keep all kinds of nesting material out of their way, and add a crystal of sulphate of soda to the drinking water three times in one week. Under this treatment I do not think you need fear keeping them back another three or four weeks. I would not advise you to mate them up yet. (2) As regards the Norwich cock, you are feeding wrong, and are far too liberal with the cod liver oil. Feed and treat him the same as advised to "Anxious" in this issue, except that you give a staple of three parts Canary to one part rape.

Moulting and Panting (A.L.). — There must be something radically wrong with the hen, if as you say, she has never yet moulted any flights, although two years old. See that she is kept quite free from draughts, and in a fairly comfortable, but not overheated, and equable temperature. Also see that the cage is quite free from insect pests. Then try the following treatment for a month or so. Staple diet: plain Canary only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of banana; on the alternate days give the same quantity of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. A spray of watercress may also be given, if available, on these days. Limit the diet to these items. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day, and for another fortnight afterwards give 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day.

Double Buffs and Yellows (Feathers).—The result of double huffing is to increase the size and substance generally, with an increase in length, abundance, and, if carried too far, coarseness of feather. Double yellowing has the opposite effect, and tends to produce smaller and slimmer birds, with shorter and finer plumage. These general principles apply to Borders just as much as any other breed.

Drooping Wing (E.C.).—You probably caused some slight injury to the wing, either in the way of a strain or bruise, when the bird was struggling in your hand. The best treatment would have been to put the bird in a small cage for a time, where it would not be induced to make any effort to use its wings, and thus give the damaged member a rest. You should do this now, if the wing still droops, and do not attempt any manipulative treatment by any means.

Flights and Tail Curled (H.M., Cheadle).—See reply to "Reader," and treat your birds the same. If the birds are continually drawing the feathers through their beaks you might also tie a bit of string on the cage wires for them to pluck at, and thus help to divert their attention from their feathers. Also supply a mealworm each daily for a week or two as advised to "A.G. Rochdale."

Going Bald (Brumie).—Try the treatment advised to "A.G., Rochdale," for a month, and also follow same suggestion re making yonrself satisfied that red mites or grey lice are not the cause of the trouble. On the days when you give bread and milk dust it over slightly with flowers of sulphur, and give a third of a teaspoonful of maw separately. Anoint the bare places three times a week with Sanocyllin, but do not allow it to get in the eyes if you can avoid it. If there is not a great improvement in a month write again, referring to this reply, and I will advise you further.

Moving Birds and Unfertility (F.A.).—(1) See reply to "F. Croft," about moving birds, and follow the same advice. (2) It is not possible to state the cause of the clear eggs last season, without full particulars of treatment and feeding, and age of the birds. In all probability the cock was not in good breeding condition. If you continue to follow the directions as to feeding and general treatment you have now begun, there is no reason why the eggs should not be fertilised this season. Do not mate up until the cock is in good condition and song.

Lump on Head (Lucy Nicholls).—The lump is most probably a caseous nodule, which might be easily evacuated by opening the skin with a clear sterilised needle, pressing out the contents, washing clean with a boracic solution, and afterwards anointing daily with carbolised vaseline until healed. The painting is not likely to have the desired effect, and whether the above interference is to be advised to inexperienced hands depends very largely upon the position and possible ramifications beneath the skin of the swelling. If left alone its unsightliness will probably now be its worst feature.

Breeding Pure Yellows (Fixed).—I assume you mean clear yellows—that is birds with no markings of any kind on them. If so, you must not expect to breed all this class of bird from any kind of stock birds, especially if you want to get a good rich tone of colour; first, because you are certain to produce more buffs than yellows, and secondly, because a rich tone of yellow demands a fair amount of green blood, which means, of necessity, breeding a fairly large proportion of more or less marked birds. If you get a rich clear yellow cock bred from two clears, and a clear buff hen bred in the usual way—from clear and ticked, but from double yellows—you will be most likely to achieve your object. For muling, a pink-eyed clear yellow, bred from two clears, related, for two or three years would be a very good one.

Various (Confederate).—(1) Yes, a Yorkshire hen and Roller cock will breed very good singers, but not so good as pure Rollers, if good singers is your only object. (2) Always be sure egg-binding exists before you attempt any treatment for it. Two drops of warm castor oil placed in the vent with tip of small feather, steaming over hot water, warmth, 30 drops of brandy in tablespoonful of water, and plenty of crushed old mortar in cage, is the best treatment. Bacon fat is useless. You should ask our manager to send you the part of "Our Canaries," dealing very fully with egg-binding. (3) This is very vague. In a general way pure high-class Norwich are quite as good singers as Norwich of a common less valuable type, and the same would apply to the other breeds. If this is not what you mean, write again, and be more explicit. (4) Not much to choose. Personally I should prefer the Crest, because the voice is mellower, and though quite as powerful as either Yorkshires or Norwich, is not nearly so shrill and ear-piercing. But there is less variety in the song.

Becoming Bald (Sharsted).—The bird's cage is largely accountable for the baldness. Dietetic or medicinal treatment is of very little use except just about the time the bird is moulting. Give a piece of bread and milk about the size of a hazel nut, with the least dusting of cayenne on it, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, every third day for a month, and in the first week add a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice to the drinking water every second day, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for a fortnight. Mix 20 drops of glacial acetic acid in a teaspoonful of glycerine, and just moisten the bare places with this twice a week for a month, but do not put it close to the eyes, nor apply it freely enough to bedaub the feathers. If this has not the desired effect, write again about next August.

Pulls out Feathers (A. G., Rochdale).—First of all examine the cage thoroughly, probing any open joint, holes, or crevices, with a pin, to see if any red mites are in hiding. If you find any overhaul the cage at once and thoroughly eradicate them. Allow bird to bathe freely, and twice a week add a few quassia chips to the bathing water. Feed on plain Canary only as staple. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of green food or banana, and on the alternate days an equivalent quantity of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. A mealworm daily, if available, would be of great benefit—crush the head and fasten it on the end of perch with a pin. Continue this feeding two or three weeks. In the drinking water give as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week.

Gas and Canaries (Novice).—(1) If the griller is—as you say— only used for a few minutes in the morning, just to boil a kettle, I do not think it would materially affect the birds, but at the same time such close proximity to burning gas is most undesirable, and if you cannot move them further away, and also keep them a fair distance from the fire and out of draughts, it would be much better to move this cage, as well as the other birds you refer to, into the front room. (2) You speak of these birds as being paired for breeding. If you mean you have already put them together you have made a big mistake. See reply to "F.H.H." on this point in last issue, and act accordingly. But if they have started nesting you had better leave them where they are until they have brought off this brood, and then move them before they start nesting again. In case they are not together, see reply to "F. Croft" in this issue about moving them.

Curled Flights (Reader).—As the birds are so late hatched I rather suspect they are weak in constitution, and probably did not moult properly last autumn. Give them the staple diet advised to "M.A.," and in addition give separately a small teaspoonful each of a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, millet, and broken groats, and one part each teazle, black rape, linseed, and maw twice a week, and on two other days a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. On each of the remaining days give a scrap of green food. Continue this dietary for a month. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards twenty drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. Allow the birds to bathe freely. Examine cage carefully for insect pests, and if any are found, take steps to eradicate them at once.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Cockatoo Unfit.

Cycle.—I should be inclined to change its food; supply the following mixture: one part each of maize, hemp, dari, sunflower, oats, and paddy rice, and grit; well mix, and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also keep a tin of Canary and white millet seed (about equal parts) in the cage. Try this bird with a piece of dry boiled potato, also a little boiled maize, boil till soft, drain away all water, and then supply to the bird, but it only keeps fresh 24 hours. Give the bird nothing but chemical food and water to drink, let it have, say, four reasonable drinks daily. Stop the tea and coffee at once, give nothing of the kind. It can have a few nuts daily, various kinds. Its bowels should improve with above treatment.

Parrot Pulling Its Feathers.

Min. K.—I should stop the rice and tapioca pudding; not too sudden, but only give a little, say, every other day, and then every third day, and so on. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the daily supply of drinking water, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep two mixtures in its cage: one of Canary and millet in equal parts, and the other to consist of equal parts of hemp, oats, paddy rice, dari, and sunflower seed well mixed together. Fill the tins up each morning, and give no more during the day; it will then be forced to vary its diet a little. It can have a little soaked biscuit, but the biscuit must be moistened only with chemical food and water. Also supply such ripe fruits as it will take, a few nuts, cuttlebone, and grit, a pinch of the latter can be added to the daily supply of seed. Cease to give the rice and tapioca as early as possible. See Nutshell Booklet on the Grey Parrot, 2½d., post free, from our Manager.

Amazon Parrot Unwell.

J. F. Kershaw.—Stop the bread and milk at once, and diet as under:—Seed mixture: Canary, white millet, hemp, dari, maize, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, equal parts of each, the whole to be well mixed together. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and a little boiled maize—boil the maize till soft, drain off all water, and supply to the bird; it only keeps fresh about 24 hours, so must be prepared fresh daily. As the bird has been used to sop, it can have a little plain biscuit sopped with chemical food and water. The drinking water should be well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food till the bird is stronger again. While the looseness lasts, once daily give two drops of tincture of opium in a teaspoonful of tepid water; if you give this before the daily supply of water, the bird will readily sip it up; if it will not, then you must give two drops direct to the beak from a quill. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, nor yet animal food of any kind whatever. Keep warm and free from draught.

Beginning to Pluck.

H. T. G.—I should certainly not feed entirely on boiled maize, neither should I withhold the water. Spray the bird twice weekly with a weak solution of fir tree oil, choosing a genial day and keeping out of draught till dry. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the daily supply of drinking water, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. The bird will probably moult out all right, if you carry out the above treatment for two or three months, so as to bring into thorough condition. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food whatever. Keep a small tin of canary and white millet, about equal parts in the cage. Seed mixture: Maize, paddy rice, hemp, oats, dari, grit, and sunflower seeds in about equal parts—keep a supply in the cage. A little boiled maize or rice may be given daily—the former only keeps fresh 24 hours—boil in water till soft (the grains should be whole, though), and drain away all water, and if need be, drip up moisture with a cloth before supplying to the bird. Ripe fruit, nuts, cuttlebone, and an occasional piece of cake, plain biscuit, or crust of bread, can be given; if the bird prefers it moistened, moisten with the Chemical Food and water.

Grey Parrot Unwell.

Miss P.—If the crop is really pierced to any extent, a stitch will be necessary, and you had better get your local vet. to operate. You might try a little surgical plaster just to cover the wound, and if well fastened on it should suffice, but I fear unless a bandage be put over it the bird will bite it off. But first of all try one or two applications of Friar's Balsam—use a small camel-hair brush and well cleave it after each occasion—this should heal it up, if the bird will only let it alone; if this fails, you must fall back on the former methods. The bird's beak needs trimming, and you must do this, or have it done, a pair of sharp nail pincers is the best tool; you must not cut back far, merely take off the point, and a supply of hard wood, lump of mortar, rubbish, and piece of cuttlebone to chew and bite about, will assist it to keep its beak trimmed. Your dietary is satisfactory, but do not give any slops or messes.

A Feather Puller.

W.P.—Stop at once all tea sops and table scraps, and confine its diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in its cage, and put a pinch of grit with its daily supply of seed. As it has been used to sop, it can have a little plain biscuit sopped in chemical food and water. Every fourth day for, say one month, put one teaspoouful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep warm and free from draught. Spray twice weekly with quassia solution, choosing a genial day for the purpose. Report progress . few weeks hence.

Growth Under Bill.

Mrs. W.—Am afraid you have let matters go too far, and that the case is now more or less hopeless. Your birds were Zebra or Gold-breasted Waxbills, which, as a rule, are hardy and robust little creatures. In the first place, put the bird into another cage, and thoroughly paint over (particularly the crevices) your present cage with neat paraffin; after a few hours well swill with boiling water, and then a little later give a final swill with cold water, leaving it in the open air for a day or two to complete the operation. Of course, you will not put the bird back till recovery is complete, and then the temporary cage must either be treated the same way or destroyed. Continue to give shelled seed, also a little milk-sop made with boiling milk and crumbled sponge cake. Give two drops of Dinneford's Magnesia, direct to the beak, every third day from a quill. Put a little honey and horax, just inside its beak from the end of a quill, twice daily. Cleanse the growth daily with tepid water, dry, and then lightly anoint with iodide of potassium ointment, not using sufficient to run among the plumage. The respective quills must be well cleansed after use with boiling water, or fresh ones used each time. Only clean quills must be put into the respective mixtures. The little creature must be kept warm and quiet, and there is just a chance for it.

Another Feather Plucker (G. Watkin).—There are several answers dealing with this annoying habit, which, if you read carefully, and apply to your own case, will carry you over the period—that is, till our next issue, for you must send me particulars as to how you have been dieting and treating your bird before I can give you a definite reply.

Hand-feeding Budgerigars (Lucky).—Feed the chicks till they cease to call in the very early stages as often as every half-hour, then hourly, and then a little longer interval may be given. As a rule the chicks do not gape for food unless huugry, and settle down when their hunger is satisfied. If lusty, they will soon call when in want of food. You must keep it up till they are able to fend for themselves. When they begin to get about, keep a small tin of the shelled and scalded canary and millet in their cage, and later ordinary seed, and when they begin to pick up then begin to wean off.

Lavender Finches (F. Thomas).—You have treated them carefully and they should now recover, hut Lavender Finches are canny creatures till they have got established. Nursing, warmth, freedom from draught and a sweet atmosphere ought to pull them through. Try a little milk sop made with boiling milk and crumbled sponge cake; also a little green food. Fresh lettuce is best at this season. If a further aperient should be necessary, I advise Dinneford's Magnesia. Contiuue to give the Chemical Food. If they are alive a week hence I should advise putting them into a clean cage and well bake, scald and clean their present one before using it again. See our nutshell booklet "Disinfecting cages, etc.," 2½d., post free from our Manager. A couple of mealworms per bird daily will help if they will take them.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Re Atlas Weaver (N. Booker).—As stated in my previous reply, these dealers' names are very loosely used, but though I have enquired of several of my avicultural acquaintances, I can only trace it to the Combassou and Fufous-necked Weaver, and from your description the latter species is what your birds are. The price you gave is about right. They should breed in your pheasantries; a stack of dried reeds fixed in a retired corner would form good cover for them. Yes, they are fairly hardy, and will do in the pheasantries all the year round, providing there is a shelter shed attached to it.

Black-cheek Lovebirds and Budgerigars (F. W. B.).—In some cases the Black-cheeks agree well enough with the Budgies once they have settled down, but in others quite the reverse; balancing the evidence it would appear that they are very uncertain in this respect. It is worth trying. Give them proper nesting receptacles at once and see how they behave, when, if they still continue to interfere with the Budgies, you'll have to cage them up. In a roomy box-cage, say, 2 ft. long, 1½ ft. deep, and 2 ft. high, they should do well, and also breed. I consider there would be but little chance of them nestling in an ordinary size box breeding cage. We regret that owing to your query not reaching the office till Tuesday, a reply in our issue of 17th inst. was not possible.

Aviary Arrangements (Interested).—(1) It all depends on the size of the building for winter shelter. If there is room enough to give the birds wing exercise, it will answer well enough. In dividing off, arranging doors, etc., see that you do not create a draught. Avoid this and you should meet with good success. (2) Yes, a hot-water radiator would be the best, heated by gas. Get a good make, not the cheapest. Carry out makers' directions and have a flue pipe to atmosphere and there will be no danger. (3) Both will mate with the Canary, but the respective pairs would be better in separate cages. Both crosses have been previously successful. The value is chiefly a sentimental one. The song of the hybrids should be softer and sweeter than that of the Canary. Practically any species of Serinus would successfully mate with the Canary. (4) The hens will respond later. Do not hurry them. We shall have some hard weather yet. It will be better if nesting is not attempted for a month or six weeks yet.

Cutthroats, etc. (Brondesbury Aviaries).—You should give green food, little lettuce, or slice of ripe apple, and also at the present juncture give the birds a couple of mealworms each daily. Keep the drinking water lightly coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food for a couple of months. Remove the husk and do not replace it till the end of March, when the birds should be more fit and the trouble not occur then. When they are feeding young, supply soft food, also a tin of dried ants' "eggs." The indoor aviary is very narrow, and if you add a pair of Cockatiels to the birds you name, the accommodation will be fully occupied. Re sand, put down a good two to three inches of rough sand or gravel, scatter grit and river sand over this, rake over as required, and renew every two or three months. It will be better for you to arrange another flight for the Finch tribe and not attempt to keep them with Parrakeets, large or small.

Budgerigars (F. Child).—It is not a question of any particular species, but birds that have been kept indoors must not be put outside before the middle of April, or they will take harm; they can go out a little earlier or later according to the season. No matter how hardy a species is it must not be put outside before the beginning of April, it can afterwards be left out all the year round. See our Nutshell Booklet on this species, 2½d., post free, from our Manager.

Birds for Cages (J. W. G.).—(a) Remove the sliding partition and perches, put in some twigg branches at each end and a nest husk or box behind them, and get a pair of Zebra Finches, which will undoubtedly settle down and breed in the course of the year. Supply canary, white millet, spray millet, green food, grit, and water. (b) Yes, remove the sliding partition, put in some twiggy branches—not sufficient to block up the cage—hang up a cocoanut husk in one far corner and a pair of either Yellow or Green Budgerigars should soon settle down and breed. They require no nesting material. Supply canary, white and spray millet, few oats occasionally, green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water. See our Nutshell booklet on Budgerigars, 2½d. post free from our Manager. (c) I am not a dictionary, but I always call it so—Budg-re-gar.

Foreign Birds for Cages (P. J. Jamison).—A cage a little higher than a Canary breeder is better for Foreign Finches as a rule, but you should get fair results from these if you furnish with a twiggy branch at each end and a cocoanut shell nest at the back of same. Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Bengalese, White Java Sparrows, and Bronze Mannikins should all succeed. Of course, only one pair in a cage. You could also cage up Grey Singing Finch and hen Canary (small type); also Green Singing Finch and Canary, with good prospects of success. A Hartz travelling cage makes a good nest receptacle, with the fittings removed and a bar cut away to enable the birds to get in and out Hay and grass will be all they require for building material.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

A Bramblefinch (Percontator).—The Bramble should be caged and fed on the same lines as the Chaffinch; therefore follow the advice given "Brondesbury Aviaries" this week. The mixture you mention is a good one; but for newly caught Brambles a little cracked sunflower seed should be added to it every day. You will find a lot of good information in Mr. Prior's article now being published.

In An Aviary (Pom).—I think if you got together a collection of Finches you would find it the most satisfactory for your outdoor place. I hardly think the Blackbirds would do well therein; they can be quarrelsome and kill weaker birds. I don't quite see your object in keeping a pair, especially in a small cage. It is very unusual. I feel sure if you let the hen go that the cock bird will do much better, and "be happier," as you put it. Twenty-four to thirty birds should thrive.

Concerning a Chaffinch (Brondesbury Aviaries).—If you get our "Nutshell" booklet on the Chaffinch (2½d. post free) you will find the best kind of cage illustrated and described therein, and the proper feeding and management fully detailed. I expect the bird has damaged its plumage by reason of its wildness; this, of course, cannot be remedied until the next moult, unless the broken feathers are extracted. You give me no idea, however, as to the extent and nature of the "damage." Some Chaffinches are extremely difficult to get steady, especially birds which are a good age when caught. A house-moulted Chaffinch may be worth anything from half-a-crown up to three or four pounds if a first-class exhibition specimen.

Weeds and Redpolls (Wild Weeds).—Even if I were able to do so, I could not identify the weeds from the very minute fragments you submit, which, too, were all dried up when I got them. I may say, however, that the weeds useful to bird-keepers were given on the coloured plate issued with our last Birthday Number, and from this plate you ought surely to experience no trouble in identifying them. If you stand green food in water in a narrow jar, and add 2 or 3 drops of Condy's Fluid to the water (changing it daily), it will keep fresh for several days, especially if kept in a cool, dark place. It is an advantage to cover over the jar holding the green food (I have used a small bucket with excellent effect). Privet, etc., berries, will keep for a good time if buried in sand (ordinary bird-sand). The Common and Lesser Redpolls are one and the same bird (see the coloured plate given with the Crystal Palace number). The Mealy is a very much larger bird, greyish white (not brown) in ground colour.

Imperfect Feather (J. G. R.).—Judging by the appearance of the feather sent, the grey birdlice (not red-mite) are responsible for eating away the web in the manner you have noticed. When once they get established amongst the plumage of a bird, they are not easily dislodged, and can do a lot of damage. You should catch up the hend and hold her for a minute or so, when some of the lice will be certain to run on to your hand. You could not do better than try the remedy advised by Mr. Yates, viz., spraying with a luke-warm solution of sulphuretted potash—30 grains to 8 fluid ounces of water. You would need to repeat this a few times at intervals of a day or two.

Several Items (Borderer).—(1) To feed my Hawfinches I take one cupful of the ordinary Finch mixture and mix with it two cupfuls of sunflower seed (either the white or grey kind) and a half-cupful of hemp. They thrive splendidly on this as a stock food. (2) They are very hardy birds, fond of bathing, and easy to keep in "show condition" when steady. The perches should be varied in size and shape; then you will have no trouble with their feet. (3) Some Bullfinches are great offenders in the matter of getting their feet dirty; large cage or small cage makes no difference unless it is ever being cleaned out. The best type of cage for such a bird is that known as the Finch stock cage, for in this a bird has no inducement (or necessity) to roam about over the floor. (4) Yes; I have known a heavily marked hen throw a real good light Mule; but this is only one of the exceptions which prove the rule to the contrary. I certainly think that a clear yellow hen bred from stock which has been proved to produce light Mules, will be more likely to throw the latter than a clear yellow hen picked up haphazard. There can be no doubt about it. At the same time, I consider that the Finch used has a say in the matter.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. M.—Death was due to irritant materials causing acute inflammation of the bowels. It is not certain whether this was a poison of a mineral nature or ptomaine.

F. H. Wright.—Hen Bird.—Death arose from acute pneumonia. Considering the ideal conditions under which it was kept, it is difficult to imagine how this could have occurred. Possibly it was of recent import, and not yet acclimatised. All other organs were perfectly healthy, and the bird was in otherwise good condition.

Thigh or Flank?

Sir,—In Mr. House's explicit article on ticked birds, he speaks of Nos. 1 and 4 as thigh ticked. I have generally heard such birds spoken of as flank ticked, the thigh, amongst fanciers being generally spoken of as the upper visible portion of the leg. I know that scientifically this is incorrect, and it may be that I am wrong as to what is generally spoken of as the flank; if so, there are others also on the wrong track, and perhaps a little further enlightenment from your esteemed contributor would clear the mists away.

A New Cage Bird Society for Shire Moor (Backworth) & Dis.

Sir,—A meeting was held on January 30th in the "Blue Bell" Inn, Shiremoor, to discuss the possibility of forming a Cage Bird Society. We decided to have a club confined to a radius of two miles, and have already enrolled 17 members. Our next meeting is to be held on March 13th, at 7.30, when one of our members has kindly consented to give a washing exhibition (also a paper on Border Fancy, time permitting). Those desirous of becoming members are earnestly requested to attend.

The Growing of Dandelion.

Sir,—I had a most pleasant surprise on returning home from a journey last week-end, one of your readers in Bonnio Scotland having taken the trouble to gather a lot of wild grown dandelion and sending it on to me at Manchester; when it arrived in beautiful condition. Scotland may be a cold country, but it is evidently warm enough to grow dandelion in winter, and hearts willing enough to go out and gather it and send it along from the land of the heather to Manchester by the water, where very often we cannot even find the sun by the help of a telescope, at this time of the year, and I dare say that may have had something to do with the seed my friends and I planted early in the year, that refused to come up. So it was impossible for us to grow it from seed. But it may be quite possible for some people to so grow it, and environment, and the wild birds, ditto cats, will also have a lot to say about success or failure.

To Steady British Goldies.

Sir,—Re the above subject; as no answer was given in your correspondence columns last week, may I be permitted to give my method of taming any wild bird? It is as follows: Remove all traces of food for two hours, or, say, the night before; and at the end of that time, when the bird is hungry, place the cage on a table and put your hand gently into the cage with a teaspoonful of seed in the palm. Its favourite seeds should be selected, of course, for this. The bird will at first flutter a good deal, but if the hand is kept quite still, it will calm down, and will presently be seen eyeing the seed. Driven by hunger, the bird will at last timorously peck at it, and eventually must be made to hop on to the hand, and feed there. Once this has been accomplished, the bird will lose all fear of his owner, and should always be given tit-bits from the hand, or lips. This method will probably take a whole morning to carry through. But it is only being cruel to be kind, as to my mind until a bird has lost all fear of you, it is cruel to keep it in a cage. Should this method fail after two or three trials, it would be pretty certain that the bird was an old one, and practically untameable; in which case it were much better set at liberty. There must be no one but yourself in the room, and you must sit patiently waiting until the bird's will gives way to yours. If the bird shows too much terror at the introduction of your hand into its cage, place the seed on your finger outside at first. A small cage is best, as the bird is forced to come in contact with your hand. It must be alone in the cage.

How to Send Birds by Rail.

Sir,—I find that the public have a lot to learn in the matter of sending away birds. At least two out of every hundred have no sense whatever in despatching birds. One will send them in a very heavy box, and the railway companies, of course, charge by weight. One will send them under suffocating conditions, with no air whatever. Another will send the birds with a basin of water in their box; the water gets upset, and the birds arrive at their destination wet through, and in a dying condition, having had no chance to dry. Only once has this latter happened in my experience. Recently a man wrote three times for cash from me. In each letter he omitted to put his name and address. I have reported same to the police here (in Manchester), and I do not know the sender's address. I receive about 30 lots of birds a week, and some are sent off the day they come. All birds should have plenty of food and water in a quiet place till roosting time. They should then be packed in a box, with holes burnt or drilled through all round near the top of box. If the holes are on one side only, the box may be put tight against another parcel, when the occupants may not get sufficient air. If travelling from south to north, or any extra long distance, water with a sponge in a fixed tin or vessel would be admirable, or else bread soaked. The box should be labelled in large letters, "Live Birds; if delayed will die." On arrival, I give the birds warm milk and water, sometimes a little sherry or whisky (about two or three drops), and then put in a quiet place with plenty of light. I bring them into the shop the following day. With regard to the warm water mentioned, I should say that lukewarm water is sufficient—just take the chill off. Some senders of birds do send them excellently. One man has sent me 50 lots. He puts small perches nailed on the bottom of box, and has a calico covering all across an inch from top, then a wood cover over as usual. The hanging of the train door, and the noise of the engine cause them at times to flutter, and sent as mentioned above, they do not hurt themselves. I have never had a sick bird from that sender. All have arrived in grand condition. He has holes for air between the calico and the wood cover.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Durham.

Sir,—A number of fanciers belonging to the Dubmires Workmen's Club, have decided to start a cage bird society in connection with the club. We have decided to hold a meeting in the Dubmires Workmen's Club on February 26th. Will those fanciers wishing to join kindly attend the meeting? They must, of course, be members of the above-named club. If unable to do so, and they will send their names to me, we will be pleased to enrol them.

Does a Hen Canary Choose the Best Singer As Mate?

Sir,—In an article in last Saturday's "Westminster Gazette" it is stated in reference to the purpose of the singing of birds that all who have attended especially to the subject seem to agree that superiority in song gives to a bird an undoubted ascendency over others. It is added that Bechstein, who kept birds during his whole life, asserts that "the female Canary always chooses the best singer," and that "in a state of nature the female Finch selects the male out of a hundred whose notes please her most." I will not quarrel with the latter part of the statement attributed to Bechstein, but surely it is a somewhat sweeping assertion to say that the female Canary always chooses the best singer. I doubt not but that the element of song is as strong as any other in a hen Canary's selection of a mate, but my experience teaches me that it is not always the sweetest singer who succeeds in winning the birdie heart of a hen Canary. Perhaps those of your readers who have had more experience than I in the breeding of Canaries—Mr. Claudo St. John, Mr. J. C. Barnes, Mr. W. Mundell and other breeders in Yorkshire—will give me their opinions on the matter through your columns. I feel quite certain in my own mind that a lady Canary is not blind to the charms of dress and deportment, any more than are other ladies.

The Black-throated Hangnest at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—Re "Folkestone's letter on the above species; unfortunately I did not take detailed notes of the plumage, but put it down as the Black-throated (Icterus mesomelas), though, of course, this trivial name is equally applicable to several other species. To show the difficulty of recognising the species I give below the description of three of them, which will indicate that only the closest comparison of the bird with the description or skin, could result in a correct name, and the light at the Palace was by no means perfect. I. mesomelas: "Bright yellow; interscapulium, wings, lores, sides of head, and throat down to the middle of the breast, deep black; less wing-coverts, and under wing-coverts yellow; tail black, three outer retrices on each side, with the greater part of the apical portion yellow; outer secondaries sometimes slightly bordered with white; bill and feet black; whole length 8.5 inches, wing 3.9, tail 4.2"; I. giraudi: "Bright yellow, more or less tinged with orange; front and sides of the head, throat down to the middle of the breast, and wings and tail black; bill and feet black; whole length 8 inches, wing 3.9, tail 3.8"; and I. croconotus: "Bright orange; front, sides of the head, throat and tail black; wings black, lesser coverts orange, middle and greater coverts black; a white patch formed by the white outer margins of the secondaries; bill black, plumbeous at the base; feet black; whole length 8 inches, wing 3.8, tail 3.9 in." The descriptions are from the Brit. Mus. Cat. Vol. XI., and fully illustrates the almost impossible task of correctly defining them at sight. Thus I did not quote the scientific name in my notes on the show, but used the broader title of Black-throated, which is practically applicable to all three species. All three may be said to be equally rare. From my recollections of the plumage, I still take it to be I. mesomelas.

Another Talking Canary.

Sir,—I have been much interested in reading about the talking Canary, but, as stated in your valuable paper of Feb. 18th, it is not the first one, and I can give you another instance. Some 27 years ago, I bought a young cock Canary, and gave it to my mother, who lives at Churchill, in Somerset. When the bird was about one year old it said "Pretty Joeie," and during the next two years it learned to say "Missis, pretty little bird Joeie is," "Kiss me Quick," Missis, Little Beauty," etc. It talked for 12 years, being 13 years old, when it died. It was sent to me at Bristol to be stuffed, and is still on the table of his "Missis," who is now 85 years of age, well and hearty. For plain speaking this bird was a masterpiece. I wrote to the Press (there was no Cage Birds then, Mr. Editor), and I challenged him against any other bird for plain talking for £5, but no one took it up. We had several good offers for it, but the bird was one of the family, and no money would buy it. I am well within the mark when I say that hundreds came and heard it, and it is talked about to this day.

How to Solder with Resin.

Sir,—With reference to "Linnets" enquiry, I may say that at various times I have done a great deal of soldering work on cage fronts, baths, and other utensils; and the most satisfactory material I have found for this purpose is Fluxite, the cost of which is inconsiderable if purchased in large-sized tins or by weight. A special method which I adopt for cage fronts may be of interest to "Linnet" and others; I powder some solder with an old file and mix with the fine powder just enough Fluxite to make a fairly stiff paste, which will adhere to the bars. For heating I use a gas blowpipe, which I find most economical for extensive work. After applying a small quantity of the mixture to the joint, a fine flame is directed upon it, and the work done almost simultaneously.

Robbins.

Sir,—In answer to "Hardbill," I would like to state that this method for soldering would be very expensive and not at all practicable. He condemns the use of the only tool that is fit for the work, and recommends resin for cage fronts, which is the wrong flux for the metal resin. I would caution "Linnet"—it is only fit for lead or soft metals. It might be used on brass, but it undoubtedly fails on iron. As a proof, I would like to ask anyone who doubts to try his hand on a flat iron surface, and he will see the mistake. A tin of Batty's soldering fluid mixed ready for use would be more in his line, because spirits of salts from the chemists are no use until "killed" with zinc, and Batty's saves him the trouble of doing this. I may say that I earn my living by soldering, so I know what I am talking about, and do not like to lead others astray. If the poisonous nature of the acids is all that keeps "Linnet" from its use, I would advise him to rinse the work in water after it is done, as the action of water immediately cleanses it.

A Remedy for Inflammation in Canaries

Sir,—I read a few weeks ago, in Cage Birds, one of your correspondents suggesting that, when Bullfinches, Goldfinches, etc., were going wrong, Fuller's earth, given in the drinking water, was an excellent remedy. I also remember hearing a prominent Canary breeder, being asked at a lecture about three years ago for a remedy for curing inflammation in Canaries, and his reply was: Fuller's earth. I have used Fuller's earth for this purpose practically from my first entering the Fancy, and have always had excellent results from its use. My manner of using it is a little different to that suggested by your correspondent, and also to that employed by the Canary breeder. My maxim in these things is that every method of application is right if it attains its object. I remember going into my birdroom one day at the time of the year when the first nests of youngsters were beginning to drop into moult; we had a double-breeding cage, close to the window, which had unfortunately been left open when the wind was blowing the wrong way. We had eight of our best youngsters just beginning to drop their nest feathers in that cage, and when I cast my eye on them it was easy to see they were in a bad way—all of a lump. They looked as though they had lost their all, and would be glad to lose themselves also. We emptied the "pot hat" drinker, and placed inside one teaspoonful of ordinary Fuller's earth (sold at the chemist's in one penny packets); then we filled the drinker with water, and they drank Fuller's earth water for upwards of a week. Then we removed all seed, as the birds' droppings were very loose. My wife removed the cream from a portion of milk, then boiled it, afterwards making it into a milk sop, nice and soft, but not too sloppy. Then she mixed into the sop a good sprinkling of maw seed, and on the top of all dropped some chalk. Placing the mixture in the cage, we left them at that, just renewing the sop and contents daily, and watching the birds' droppings, reducing the chalk as these improved; also we filled up the drinker with fresh water on the old Fuller's earth for two or three days; then washed out the drinkers and gave another teaspoonful as before, and I am pleased to say we only lost one bird out of the eight, and that one was almost gone when we first found they were ill. Fuller's earth has certainly been our friend in the bird-room, so we pass it along, as it may do some fancier a good turn this breeding season, if inflammation makes its appearance among his babies; that is, if he does not possess a better remedy of his own. If he does possess a better remedy, will he kindly let us know in Cage Birds what it consists of, because we are anxious to increase our knowledge, save lives, and make things pleasanter for our feathered pets?

Are Birds Fruit Eaters?

Sir,—Alas! there is no doubt about birds eating fruit. Blackies, Thrushes, and Sparrows are simply dreadful. We can hardly get half our fruit when it is ripe. And the currants taken are still quite green. I go several times a day to drive birds off. No dressed-up figures or flags are of any use. Raspberries, currants, gooseberries, damsons, apples, and pears, are affected. I would be very thankful for any hints as to how to preserve the fruit. I put muslin curtains round, but the birds went in under them and ate pounds of fruit. We have never been troubled by the Starlings, though they abound here. Rooks get most of our walnuts. So all round we are bothered. I wish I knew someone who is clever and humane in the matter of catching some of the lovely birds all round our grounds. Goldie and Bullie—indeed, every kind of Finch almost—Whitethroats, Wrens, and other sweet little birds, in all our hedges. We have Owls, but we would gladly have more. We did put up boxes for the smaller birds, but they did not build in them.

The Recent Show Season in Ireland.

Sir,—Now that the shows in Ireland are all over, might I be permitted to make a few remarks with a view to assisting the officials of the different shows. They have a hard task in trying to please everybody. But the time has come when show committees will have to depart from the classification given 10 or 15 years ago, and cater for the present day fanciers. The Yorkshire is by far the most popular breed of Canary in Ireland, yet few shows give them the premier place in the classification. Take Dublin, Dundalk, and Larne; they catered well for the Yorkies, and their shows were the most successful held during the season. The committee of Larne Show are to be congratulated on securing the patronage of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of I., and giving 6 open and 4 novice classes for Yorkshires, seeing they had only one Yorkie breeder in Larne. But they made no mistake, as the Yorkies outnumbered all other breeds of Canaries. Derry would do well next season to give the classification that Dundalk gave last season, and judging from the support they received at their first effort their show promises to be one of the finest in Ireland, but I would advise them next season to pay more attention to sending exhibits home, and to send award catalogues to those who have paid for them on the first day of show, and not have exhibitors writing for them a couple of times and then get them 8 days after show, as was my own experience. Bangor Show was a success (financially), but they stood to lose nothing whether they were well supported or otherwise. They would be well advised to give an explanation if any mistake has been made re payment of prize money, and if the challenge given to Mr. Pidduck, the hon. sec., is not taken up, then it only encourages fresh attacks being made. The Ulster O.A. (Belfast) Show was not the success that was prophesied by the committee, who wisely (as they thought) curtailed the Yorkshire classes. I am confident that it never will be a success until there is a revision of rules, and steps taken concerning the alleged practice of members showing borrowed birds. It is surprising the way they evade a discussion on this most important subject at their meetings. Can it be that some of the most prominent exhibitors would be found guilty? But I live in hopes of some member having the courage of his convictions, and demanding an inquiry. The Belfast Norwich, Crest, and Y.C.C. would be well advised to have a thorough investigation at their next meeting re the accusations made by members of the society at their last meeting, and also after the meeting was closed, and if these members cannot prove what they have asserted then it is the duty of the members of the society to have them expelled, and save other members being annoyed and subjected to insinuating language at every meeting. The sooner it is remedied the better for their membership. The Yorkshire fanciers were disgusted with the classification given them by the Ulster O.A. at their last show, and the committee, if they wish to make their next show a success, would do well to secure the patronage of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, and accede to their rule that the entry fee for Yorkshires be 1s. 6d. per cage, then no doubt their show could be made one of the best in Ireland. They have an able secretary in Mr. Trimble, and he is not to blame if their show does not pay. An important point for a show secretary to remember is that every known exhibitor should receive a "schedule of prizes," as many shows held last season only sent schedules to those who applied for them; then they cry out they were not supported. All shows should be well advertised in Cage Birds, and the date of show inserted in the dates fixed column, and thus save shows clashing, as was the case last season, when one of our oldest societies, after changing their date so as not to clash with another show, this same show again took their date, evidently to boycott them; let us hope this does not happen next season.

Climbing the Yorkshire Exhibition Ladder.

SIR,—I see in your last week's issue that Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell state that I claimed a bird of theirs in the season of 1904-5, which they know is not correct, as the said bird was claimed by Mr. Pickup, of Bradford, and shown by him the following week at Pudsey and Stanningley, at which show I bought the bird from Mr. Pickup. I may also state that the bird never won at the Crystal Palace Show, as it was never shown there, which they know also. It seems to me a cheap way of advertising, and I think it would be more creditable to Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell to make accurate statements.

W. TAYLOR.

A Norfolk Bird Fancier in Trouble.

SIR,—I started bird-catching with trap cages, then I got to nets. I have been "in the game" now for 17 years. I am a married man, and have two children. I am a bricklayer by trade, and am paid at the rate of 4d. per hour. I used to go in for netting birds at week-ends, and have caught hundreds in my time. I have never seen so many Mealy Redpolls in my life as I did last autumn. I have caught as many as 300 a day, but Sheringham (where I live) is a place where you cannot sell anything, so I used to let the bird go again. I have been out of work for three months, so I tried to earn an honest shilling catching Linnets and other birds. At that time no one interfered with me when catching. This year I got some work again, and the day I started a man borrowed my nets, and went out catching. He took a Linnet, a Linnet Mule, and a Goldfinch; but the Sergeant of police stopped him and took my nets away from him. I was at work and knew nothing about it until I went home to dinner. Now I have got a summons that I "did unlawfully aid and abet, counsel and procure one Arthur Knowles to do and commit a certain offence, that is to say, to unlawfully use certain nets for the purpose then and there of taking certain wild birds, to wit Goldfinches." Now I don't think this is fair. I knew absolutely nothing until I went home to dinner about this offence, and I should like other catchers opinions on this case.

E. SADLER.

Rare British Birds at the Palace Show.

SIR,—I fully endorse all "Thistle Top" says in regard to the judging of Buntings at the Crystal Palace. Why include a Yellow-bellied Bunting in the list of competing birds, and put out Black-headed and Meadow Buntings? I also would like to hear what Mr. A. Silver has to say on the point. "Thistle Top," the Meadow Bunting passed was 1st at the Scottish National, not 2nd, as you say.

DISGUSTED.

SIR,—Mr. Ramsden's reply, saying that "every bird was judged on its merits" is all very well in its way, but I defy any judge, much more Mr. Silver, to say that the two rare Buntings I spoke of, the Black-headed and the Meadow, were not worth a card. It is silly to talk like that. A bird that gets first prize and special at the Scottish National, like the Meadow Bunting, is value for a ticket anywhere, and the class at the Palace was not so strong as the one at Edinburgh, for the Palace winner (the Corn-bunting) was not even noticed at the Edinburgh Show. What a change of place; and I know the Meadow arrived home in grand order. However, I'll say no more, but we in Scotland will know what to do when the next Palace Show comes round—we'll save money.

THISTLE TOP.

P.S.—You have me down last week as saying the Meadow took second prize at Edinburgh. It should have been first.

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Thistle-top" is singularly unfortunate in regard to the two birds he refers to as being unnoticed at the Crystal Palace Show. In the recently published list of British birds by Mr. Ogilvie Grant, it is stated that the Black-headed Bunting has not occurred more than six times in all in the United Kingdom, and that the Meadow Bunting has only occurred in all three times. So that, apart from the question of the birds not being in the N.B.B. and M.C. list, I think the two birds in question are unsuited to the show bench. Considering the extremely few times these two birds have occurred, it does not require any great stretch of the imagination to suppose that the birds passed over were not genuine caught British specimens, and I think every judge will agree with me that at our shows the classes for British birds are open only to such, and where a judge has grave doubts on the point, he is justified in passing the bird (or birds) in question. I allow that the question of nationality is beset with difficulties, and that there are many knotty points more difficult to settle than the two cases brought up by your correspondent. In this connection I believe I am right in saying that a number of birds excluded from the N.B.B. and M.C. list have occurred more frequently in the United Kingdom than the two birds in question.

BRITISH BIRD.

New C.B.S. for Smallbridge.

SIR,—I was not going to reply, but I see "Real Fancier" is suspecting the wrong man for my letter. I can assure him that I am not connected with the Littleboro' C.B.S., and when I wrote my letter it was with the sole idea of trying to bring more fanciers together. Whether at Smallbridge or Littleboro' was immaterial. Re his allusion to Littleboro' not being the only society with a cup, I never said they were, as the Rochdale O.C. have two cups, and the Rochdale Good Intent have a cup; and it would not be a bad idea to present this war-worn and much scarred trophy to the Smallbridge society, and then start a members' subscription to secure a new one. To his bit of childish talk about stones and windows, I have a four-year-old lad that can break enough windows to suit me, but even this youngster's childish prattle is as nothing compared to the last bit of "Real Fancier's" letter. "Novice's" letter I treat with contempt, as I am in contact with better fanciers and better birds than they possess at Smallbridge, and it is not my nature to be jealous of either man's capabilities or anything he owns.

WELL WISHER.

The South Birmingham and District O.S.

SIR,—The first meeting of the above society was held on February 15th at headquarters, the Sydenham Hotel, Small Heath Station, and a grand success it proved, over 20 attending, and several unable to attend also promised their support. The above name was decided upon in preference to Small Heath and District, the proposer (Mr. J. H. de Maillet) explaining that it would have a much larger sphere to work upon. Mr. Wilmott was elected chairman, Mr. J. Hughes vice-chairman, and Mr. Leike treasurer; the Selection Committee was put back along with other officials until the adjourned meeting, to be held on February 22, at 8.30. The rate of subscription decided upon was 4s. per year, payable quarterly in advance. Meetings and time: Arranged for the second Wednesday in each month, 8.30, at above hotel. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Leike for his kindness in granting us the use of a room, and to Mr. Hughes for so skilfully taking the chair. The post of secretary was taken by What Constitutes an Even-marked Mule?

SIR,—On looking over the Mule classes at the Crystal Palace, I confess I, too, was somewhat surprised to see a bird that was marked on both wings, wrong classed. In the light of Mr. House's article, and according to Yorkshire Union standard (possibly other standards, too) this is correct. But the question arises, ought not two eye marks, two wing marks, or two tail marks respectively, constitute an even marked bird? It seems strange that a four-pointed or six-pointed bird alone should be eligible to compete amongst evens when the two-pointed bird is debarred. This is harder amongst Mules, where 4 and 6 pointed birds are extremely rare indeed.

X-RAY.

SIR,—In a very clever article on "The problem of the Yorkshire Canary Exhibitor," my old friend, Mr. House, sets out the decision of the several Yorkshire Canary specialist clubs with reference to ticks, even and uneven-marks. No one need quarrel with Mr. House's conclusions. They are clear and definite. But the point at issue at the Crystal Palace show was much wider in its application. Mr. Weston applied the rule to Mules. While setting out very clearly the Yorkshire standard, Mr. House made the somewhat far-reaching statement—"Such, however, is the law." Now that seems to be the moot point with regard to Mules and other varieties besides Yorkshires. It is clear, and the Yorkshire clubs have every right to adopt it, if they choose, that in their estimation, "a two-pointed bird, that is, one marked on both eyes, wings, or both sides of the tail, is, according to Yorkshire Union law, an unevenly-marked bird." Rightly or wrongly, it has been in the minds of many (of course outside the Yorkshire Fancy) that the points for evenness of marking are two, four, six. It is scarcely an answer to critics to quote the Yorkshire law. Such, it is apparent, is not the general "law," and we are not far enough advanced, yet awhile, along the line of sectionalism, to regard it as universal in its application. What, I think, is needed is that we should try and arrive at a decision which shall be regarded as universal. The views of the specialist clubs of all varieties can easily be obtained, and if they decree that the two-pointed bird is not an evenly-marked specimen, then so be it. But it does seem to me that the Yorkshire specialist clubs never intended, neither do they wish, that their "law" should be general in its application to other varieties. Mind, personally I should not object if it were, providing it is universally adopted. When it is, in Mr. House's own words, "a strange paradox," it is difficult to apply a paradox to, at present, non-consenting varieties, and call it the "law." The law which is most willingly obeyed is that which is obtained as the result of the expression of the commonsense of most, after an appeal to all. I repeat, I am not objecting to the Yorkshire Fancy's version, but should like to see an universal "law," as the result of an appeal to the wide commonalty of Canarydom. Let it be made apparent, once and for all, to those who do not see it at present, what is an evenly-marked bird, and what is not. It is quite certain, no matter what some of us may conclude, that there is by no means a general concensus of opinion upon the point.

G. G.

SIR,—From the manner in which Mr. Gardner introduces my name, it would seem that he thinks there is some connection 'twixt the publication of Mr. House's article and the wrong-classing by me at the recent Crystal Palace show of a two-pointed Mule entered in the even-marked class. Such, however, is not the case. Mr. Norman's drawing and Mr. House's article were finished early in January (for CAGE BIRDS Birthday Number, in fact). Neither do I shelter my action behind the Yorkshire Club's rule; that is but one factor in the case. My friend, "G. G.," has had, of course, a vastly larger experience of the Fancy than myself, and has, of course, acquired a vastly more profound knowledge of Fancy matters. Therefore, seeing that Mr. Gardner differs from me, I feel that it is like running up against a brick wall to say that I decided the point in question upon what I considered the present-day custom, viz., that a two-pointed bird shall not compete in a class for even-marks. May I point out, however, that the only two specialist Canary clubs which cater (i.e., give special classes) for even-marks, both debar two-pointed birds from competing therein? I refer to the Yorkshire and Border Fancy Clubs. Further, the National British Bird and Mule Club (which no doubt lays claim to speak authoritatively concerning Mules) states in its rule book: "The club has decided not to recognise a two-pointed specimen as such, but to allow it to compete in the class for ticked or lightly marked birds." Now, at the Palace Show my unfortunate position was this: I found one two-pointed bird in the "even-marked" class, and three two-pointed birds in the "unevenly-marked or variegated" class, so I had no option but to hand out a "wrong-class" ticket to someone or other. And I came to my decision on what seemed to me the present-day custom in the matter. I have no bias one way or the other. If the Fancy wish two-pointed birds to compete in even-marked classes, that ends it, so far as I am concerned. But judges should be given a definite ruling to that effect for their guidance. Anyway, it is a pity birds should get "wrong-classed" owing to any misunderstanding on the point, for I believe in an exhibitor having a "run for his money" after he has paid his entry fee and expenses. Perhaps Mr. Gardner will tell us what he himself would have done under the circumstances?

G. E. WESTON.

Foreign Birds for Working Men.

An Inexpensive and Delightful Hobby.

SIR,—It has always been a matter of surprise to me that more fanciers of the mechanic class do not keep the smaller foreign Finches. The general impression with regard to them appears to be that they are costly, difficult to keep alive, and require a specially heated aviary for their accommodation. This idea is quite erroneous. With regard to price, they cost less as a general rule, than a Canary of even average merit; when acclimatised, they live quite as long, and provided they are kept from contact with draughts and damp, their successful preservation presents no great difficulty. Added to this, their keep is an infinitesimal item of cost, and they are, in addition, a greater novelty than the "little yellow bird." A couple of years ago I tried the experiment of keeping these small Finches in a well-made garden aviary, but a few weeks of cold weather killed so many that I gave it up. After deliberation I had a grand indoor aviary constructed of quarter-inch wire fronts, the aviary measuring 3ft. 6ins. by 2ft. wide, and 2ft. high. I hope in some future number of the good old CAGE BIRDS, to give a photo of the aviary, and some particulars of its construction. With regard to its inmates, the Cordon Bleu is my favourite, but it was a long time before I was able to acclimatise a pair; five died before I really had any chance to acclimatise them; this was all the more vexatious to me when I noticed that at the Zoo they are housed in the outdoor aviary! The Lavender Finch is another little gem; but a similar difficulty exists with regard to this bird also. I have had three. The survivor, however, is "as hard as nails." The dwarf "Bib Finches" are entertaining little creatures, and well worth keeping. The "star" singer of the aviary is a Grey Singing Finch. This bird is so robust that I am this year trying the experiment of pairing it with a ben Canary. I have similar intentions with regard to a green one. I have had to put these two birds in separate cages, as the song of either was the signal for a fearful fight. On several occasions I have kept the Cutthroat Finch, but the pair I possess at present are the only ones whose tempers are anything approaching reasonableness. Other inmates are: St. Helena Waxbills, Red-eared (only one specimen, a cock, the hens dying apparently of acute diarrhoea within a few days of purchase), Combassous, Orange-cheeked Waxbill (note: these birds seemed unobtainable the last 12 months), Bengalese (whose dances are most amusing), Black-headed and Bronze-winged Mannikins, and Half-masked Weavers. The entire collection are in the pink of condition, and have attracted a great amount of notice where they have been exhibited. They are certainly well worth the trouble of acclimatising.

The Judging of Hybrids.

Gaudy Colours or Sombre Plumage?

SIR,—On reading the reports of various shows, I have noticed that in Hybrid classes the prizes have invariably been given to richly-coloured birds (Goldfinch, etc., crosses). In my opinion, this is very unfair, as it is every bit as difficult to breed Linnet-Greenfinch and Linnet-Siskin, as Goldfinch-Greenfinch and Goldfinch-Siskin. I think it is about time that judges paid more attention to the soberly clad hybrids, or these classes will shortly be lacking in variety. What say your readers?

DRAB.

The Awards in Any Other Variety Canary Classes.

SIR,—I am taking the liberty of writing you in regard to the judging at the late Palace show, in the A.O.V. Novice Canary Class. I had not the pleasure of seeing the birds there, but with all due respect to the judge, I very much doubt if there were four Cinnamons better as Cinnamons, than the Silver Lizard shown by Mr. A. E. Bosworth. Does it sound fair to call the class Any Other Variety when four out of the seven cards go to Cinnamons, the other three going to a Belgian, and Border Fancies? The same exhibitor sent two good Silver Lizards last year, with practically the same result, at any rate, the Lizards were unnoticed. Yet this year the cry is send your Lizards out more. Some encouragement, is it not? However, I fancy the A.O.V. Class will certainly not find Mr. B. showing again. I can honestly say that the three Lizards sent by Mr. B. the last two shows, have been good birds, and the one sent this time has won well in novice and also done well in champion Lizard classes. Trusting some abler pen than mine will help to make things a little fairer all round in these A.O.V. classes, is the wish of

JOHN RUKIN.

A New Roller Canary Society for Grimsby and Cleethorpes.

SIR,—I am pleased to report that a good number of fanciers attended the inaugural meeting in connection with the newly-formed Grimsby and Cleethorpes Roller Canary Society, and about 20 members were enrolled, in addition to several honorary members. The following influential fanciers were appointed to the respective offices: Chairman, Mr. W. Groves; vice-chairman, Mr. J. A. Ives; treasurer, Mr. A. Wilkinson; hon. secretary, Mr. W. Yardley—all of whom are members of the British Roller C.C. The following were elected committee: Messrs. Hawcliffe, Lockwood, Young, Staples, Osborne, Wilson, Holmes, and Drust. The annual subscription is fixed at 3s. 6d. Decided, to ask Mr. Walton (secretary Leeds Roller C.S.), specialist and judge, to attend meeting fixed for February 25th, at 7.30 p.m., at the Anchor Restaurant, 119, Cleethorpes Road, Riby Square, to explain the songs of the birds present, when all fancier friends are respectfully invited. W. YARDLEY, Hon. Sec.

The Cage Bird Union and Its Future.

SIR,—I enclose a copy of a circular letter which I am forwarding to all societies which were affiliated to the Union last year, and to all previously in the Union, and I would be glad to have same published in your next issue.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE.

(Copy of Circular.)

At the annual meeting of delegates of the Union held at the Crystal Palace on February 4th (a report of which appeared in CAGE BIRDS the Saturday following), the following resolution was passed:—"That the latter part of Rule 22 be deleted for the present, but that words be added to the effect that the Union will not undertake to look after the interests of any exhibitors at shows not held under C.B.U. rules." That is to say, the restrictive portion of Rule 22 is to be suspended until such time as the delegates agree to its being again put into operation. It was also decided that a feeling of societies be obtained as to what support will be given to the Union with the rule altered. Unless considerably more societies support the Union, it would hardly be possible to carry on. Last year had 73 societies affiliated, the subscriptions from these not being sufficient for working expenses, and the Council would be glad if you would kindly submit this for your members' consideration, and intimate whether your society will support them in continuing the work of the Union, with the Rule 22 held in abeyance, or with any other rules as may be suggested. I am no longer secretary to the Union, but the Council will appoint one pro. tem., in accordance with the Rules, whose name will be published in due course, and to whom communications should be sent. The other amendments to the rules passed at this meeting were: That the annual meeting of delegates be held in July, alternately in the South, Midlands, and North. That the Associates' fee be reduced from 2s. 6d. to 1s. per annum. Provision to be made for appointment of a treasurer to the Union. That District No. 7 be divided, the Counties of Derby, Nottingham, Leicester, and Northants being formed into a separate district. Add to Rule 4, That members of an affiliated society at September 1st, will be considered members until the end of the society's year. That where more than one person shows birds from the same place of residence, they all show in the same section, either champion, amateur or novice as eligible.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE.

LOCKERBIE P.P. AND C.B.A.

Meeting held Feb. 16th, to make arrangements for our forthcoming show. We have fixed it for 23rd November. We are giving about 30 classes for cage birds, and intend getting popular judges, and have been promised good support from the surrounding district. President and chairman, N. Muir Stewart, Esq., Underwood.—H. Davidson, Sec.

BELFAST CREST, NORWICH AND YORKSHIRE C.C.

For some time past the membership was open to the whole of Ireland, but by a resolution passed at the general meeting, held 7th January last, it was decided to curtail the membership to Ulster only, the reason of the change being that it gave too much extra work to the secretary; but still to allow old members outside of Ulster to retain their membership. After due consideration, it was decided to lower the subscription from 10s. to 6s. per year, with entrance fee of 2s. for each new member, and a charge of 3d. for each bird entered at show, which would allow members to show 16 birds for 10s. Any fanciers wishing to join can get any information they require from the Secretary, Mr. S. Bamford, 13, Adelaide Avenue, or any of its members who will be only too pleased to welcome them. The club meetings are held in the Clarence Place Hall on the first Saturday in each month at 8 p.m., the next being on 4th March, when it is earnestly requested that all fanciers wishing to become members will attend and bring their friends—there's a welcome for all.—Walter Connell, Hon. Treasurer, 24, Bloomfield Avenue, Connswater, Belfast.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Annual general meeting held Duncan's Rooms, 71, London-st., Glasgow, Feb. 14, the president, Mr. R. B. Gibb, in chair. After the adoption of the balance sheet, the secretary, Mr. Bowman, submitted his annual report which showed the Yorkshire Canary was progressing by leaps and bounds in Scotland. Unfortunately, however, the balance of cash in hand was considerably smaller than last year, and as it was felt that the "pairs" and "first feather" shows had been too much of a drain on the club's funds, it was agreed to allow these to lapse for this year at least. The president then presented the prizes to last year's winners as follows: club's challenge rose-bowl and medal to Mr. G. MacRobbie, Mr. Penman's medal for runner-up to Mr. J. B. Paterson; President's prize for third most points to Mr. A. Girvan. In the novice section Dr. Syson's medal went to Mr. G. Crichton for most points. Mr. Penman's special for runner-up being won by Mr. W. Sanderson. The following were the winners of the small rose-bowls presented by the club for most points at each show:—Messrs. McRobbie, Paterson, Girvan, Heggie, Sanderson, and Webster. After the president had intimated that he did not seek re-election, and Mr. Bowman (much to the regret of all) had resigned the secretaryship on account of the pressure of business, the election of office bearers was gone on with. Result: President, Mr. T. Penman; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. P. Paterson and F. Bowman; hon. sec. and treas., Mr. R. B. Gibb, 96, Middleton-st., Ibrox, Glasgow; committee, Messrs. McDougall, McKenzie, Girvan, Anderson, Forrest, Mac Robbie, Sanderson, Hendry, Young, and Cochrane; auditors, Messrs. Barron and Webster. The rules were under consideration, but with the exception of a slight alteration of the wording of Rule 2, the provision of proxy voting in Rule 3, (and the adding of a new rule to read, "Club specials can only be competed for in standard cages," were left. It was also agreed to hold a club show in connection with an open show, particulars to be settled later. Owing to the lateness of the hour, no more business could be done, but I trust to see a large attendance at our next meeting which will be duly announced, as there falls to be considered such important matters as the "confined to Scotland" clause, club judges, etc. I appeal to all Yorkshire fanciers in Scotland to join us. It will readily be admitted, I think, that the present satisfactory position of the Yorkshire in Scotland is entirely due to the efforts made on its behalf by the club, and it seems only fair that those who are reaping the benefit of increased classification, etc., should do a little to assist the club. Annual subscription only 2s. 6d., and I will be pleased to give any particulars required to intending members.—R. D. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE SOCIETIES' ANNUAL DINNER AND PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.

The Prize Distribution Committee met on Feb. 16th at the Market Tavern, Bradford, to make final arrangements for this great annual event. Mr. D. Sunderland occupied the chair, and the following business was duly transacted:—The engagement of the following artistes for the social evening was endorsed: Mr. J. E. Stafford (baritone), Mr. M. Speight (tenor), Mr. A. Smith (humorist), and Mr. A. Gledhill (accompanist), and as these are all talented artistes, a splendid musical programme is likely to be sustained throughout the whole evening. Correspondence dealing with invitations issued to the guests was then read and accepted, and a resolution was carried unanimously that, as before, the president or chairman of each specialist club should present their own prizes. The secretary was instructed to get tickets printed for the winner, and these can be obtained from each specialist club secretary, or of any member of the committee, of Mr. Sunderland, or myself. The following sub-committee was appointed to arrange the musical programme, etc.: Messrs. Sunderland, J. Greaves, F. Hammond, and H. Hill. For the benefit of those desirous of attending the dinner and prize distribution, may I say that all who intend to be present at the dinner would do well to send on their names at once, as a large number are expected, and it is necessary to have an idea as to numbers, in order that all may be catered for, and to avoid disappointment. The dinner will be held at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, on Saturday, March 11th, at 4 o'clock prompt, followed by the social evening and prize distribution at 6 o'clock. It would facilitate business somewhat if all those who have prizes to receive would make an effort to get well to the front of the room, in good time, so that others are not disturbed any more than is necessary, when each recipient is called upon to receive his prize. If all will try and follow the wishes of the committee in these respects, the affair will be a tremendous success, and a vast improvement on previous years. Secretaries of the various specialist clubs should be in attendance at 2.30 to arrange all the prizes. These would be best arranged in the same order as the specialist clubs were balloted for in the prize presentation, with CAGE BIRDS' prizes in the centre position. From left to right of the platform they would then be in the correct order of presentation. Don't forget to send in names as early as possible.—H. Hill, Secretary, 15, Settle-terr., Thornton-lane, Bradford.

Acknowledged the "BEST EVER"

BY A HOST OF DELIGHTED READERS.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL FOR 1911.

The most marvellous Handbook ever issued to the Bird World for the popular price of SIXPENCE.

REMEMBER: Last year the whole large edition was sold clean out in less than a month. Many would-be readers suffered disappointment. The 1911 Annual is also selling like hot cakes. It cannot be reprinted. Be wise: order at once.

Many of the articles included therein are by themselves worth the price asked for the complete work, and amongst those that stand out in this Year-Book are:—

HOW TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL BIRD BREEDER.
By Claude St. John.—This article represents the author at his best. The subject matter leads the would be aspirant step by step from the rock-bed of his hobby to the very zenith of success. No bird breeder can afford to miss this highly instructive contribution, written as it is by such a popular and true hearted fancier as Mr. Claude St. John. Read it before embarking on the business of the 1911 breeding season, and it will both help you to cut down your expenses to the minimum (by avoiding waste) and to breed young birds with greater ease and certainty.

BRITISH BIRD-KEEPING FOR THE WORKING MAN.
By W. J. Pitcher.—The experiences of a Yorkshire working man. The author shows in a most interesting way that it is not always the one with the big aviaries that derives the most pleasure, but often the working-man, whose only hobby after a day's work is his birds. He advises the various kinds of birds that lend themselves to the requirements of the working-man hobbyist, and how they should be fed and cared for.

HOW I PRODUCED MY WINNING HYBRIDS.
By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his sytem of feeding, management, etc.

BUILDING AND FITTING AN OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.
By Henry Meeds.—Advising the cheapest and best methods to adopt in building and fitting up an outdoor bird-room or aviary. Giving full dimensions for same, and how the internal fittings should be put into place to the best advantage. The article is accompanied by a photograph of an ideal type of out-door bird-room, which enables the reader to more easily grasp the subject matter of the article.

THE TREATMENT OF, AND MEDICINES FOR, AILING CAGE BIRDS.
A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels—telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING.
By T. F. Morgan.—Emphasises the point that even "cheap" canaries can be, and are, made to pay. The article explains in detail how a cheap breeding-cage can be made and fitted out, how the canaries should be fed and managed, and closes with a few "Don'ts" that are very timely hints.

FAMILIAR FOREIGN SEED EATERS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.
By J. H. Booth.—Dealing with some of the foreign hardbills commonly imported into this country, and their management.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.
By H. Norman.—The author gives it as his opinion that wild bird life flourishes in our fields and woods as it does in no other European country.

SOME DISEASES OF BIRDS, AND HOW TO RECOGNISE AND TREAT THEM.
By G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S.—An article from the able pen of Mr. Yates which is of permanent value for reference purposes. It describes in concise, and so far as possible, unconventional terms, the causes, symptoms, and diagnosis of the commoner departures from health affecting the inmates of our cages and aviaries, together with appropriate medicinal treatment. It is a real book in itself and well worthy of the price paid for the whole "Annual."

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY MANAGE A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.
By W. A. Dickins.—This article should be read by the secretaries, officials, and members of all cage bird societies, dealing out to them, as it does, many helpful hints on the successful management of a society.

The Most Reliable Authority on Bird Culture.

In addition there are numerous art and other illustrations of the peerage of 1910 in the Bird World. A lovely Coloured Plate of the sensation of the season, the Dartford Warbler, claimed at the Palace for 12 Guineas. Calendar, Postal, and other information, Standards and Descriptions, Lists of Judges of Cage Birds and their addresses, Officials, Cage Bird Societies, etc.

Price 6d. on order from all Newsagents; or 8d. post free.

Secretaries of Societies, Bird Dealers, and others engaged in communication with Birdkeepers, should take up an Agency for retailing our Publications. WRITE FOR DETAILS.

SPECIALIST clubs are now holding their meetings to square matters up in regard to the winners of the various competitions, and to make arrangements for purchasing the prizes to be all in readiness for the Annual Amalgamated Social, March 11th. Will all those who intend being there for the dinner please send in their names in good time, as I hear there is likely to be a rush. Remember, over 170 sat down last year, and were well satisfied; 200 is the minimum I prophesy for this year's event, with twice that number for the social evening. All are welcome.

THE display of prizes will be a treat to see, and a revelation to many. The number and value, not to mention the usefulness of many of them, ought to stir the fanciers to a recognition of the great possibilities in the Fancy, and if they bring their better halves, should go a long way towards getting help during the bird breeding season. It will make the ladies look forward to the time when they will have something to fetch.

OPEN Norwich Plainhead Club have fixed the date of March 11th as the time for their annual general meeting, to be held at the Market Tavern, at 2.30 prompt, so as to get business over before the time for dinner. It is arranged for this date so as to give members from a distance the chance to attend, and to be there for the annual prize distribution also.

SKIPTON'S newly-formed society held their first members' show on Saturday last, and as a first venture it was a decided success. The British section, I hear, was excellent. The Yorkshires were very nice, and a few good greens were to be seen. Some years ago this district was well represented in the Fancy, and had a good society; but somehow the reins got loose, and the thing went smash. Let us hope to see the open shows as of old, and by what I know of the fanciers there, it should not be long before they are as strong as ever; and, what is more, each section has someone to uphold it, and take care of its requirements.

A NOTED Bradford fancier nearly got into the British trade last Saturday night; he nearly bought a Hawfineh, or, as one friend jokingly calls them, Hawf-inch, but this was no hawf-inch bird; it was all there.

Prizes of 1s. and two 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners-up.

*A Chaffinch's Return.

A Chaffinch used to come to our house every time snow fell. My mother used to feed it until it became quite used to coming. When summer came it went away from my mother; it went into the fields to feed. One day the first snow-fall came, and I saw the Chaffinch sitting in the garden waiting for his usual feed. —Sent by Norman Nicholson (age 10), 6, Weardale Place, Grange Estate, Stockton-on-Tees.

*A Strange Nesting Place.

An extraordinary place was chosen by a Thrush for its nest in the Holy Trinity Churchyard, near Huddersfield. The bird built its nest on one arm of a cross—a very high one based on three steps. There was no shelter from the wind, and it was in full view of the passers-by. Five eggs were laid, and the Thrush seemed perfectly happy sitting upon them, and in full view attracted much attention. The cross is made of stone to imitate blocks of wood cut from a tree trunk, with flowers trailing over it. These help to make a firm foundation for the nest.—Sent by Albert Edward Armes, 1, Eugene Place, Ladywood Road, Birmingham.

A Lark's Tomb.

In the walls of a humble cottage in a Devonshire village there was to be seen, many years ago, a fine brass plate, on which were engraved the following lines:—

Within this wall there lies a Lark,
Whose age, I think, well worth remark;
Take fifty-five from seventy-three,
And there exact his age you see.
And in remembrance of his age,
These lines were writ beneath his cage.

The peasant whose pet this lark had been, delighted in showing this poem to all visitors. The bird had come into his possession when it was fully grown, and must therefore have been quite 19 years old at the time of its death. Sent by Wm. Allen, aged 13, 26, Mount Street, Cleckheaton, Yorkshire.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Meeting held Feb. 9th, Oldham Hall, Mr. J. H. Isaac in chair. There was a good attendance. Two new members were elected and four others proposed. Pair show: 27 good pairs were staged. Mr. S. Had- judged and gave every satisfaction, afterwards explaining questions relating to the birds shown.

BRIGHTON C.B.A.

Pair show held headquarters, Auction Rooms, Bond Street, February 8th, there being a nice lot of birds present. Mr. Leach had a fine evenly balanced pair of Norwich, and Mr. Dandride a good pair of Yorkshires. The Mules were of good quality, also the British birds. There were, as usual, many members present, also lady members. Mr. A. Burtenshaw (Worthing) judged.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 2nd, Wentworth Cafe, the President (Mr. T. Flemming) in chair. Mr. A. Hobson (secretary) gave a statement of the society's financial position; which was subject to audit. Several items of correspondence were dealt with. Mr. Memmott was elected on committee in plac of Mr. P. Walsh (resigned), whom we are sorry to lose, though we still have him as a member. Mr. Furniss gave notice of motion that we resign from the Cage Bird Union, to be decided at next meeting. The subject of the shows was left in the hands of committee. A very good matched pair show of Nor. was held, some very smart birds being on view. Mr. Furniss commented on the winning pairs, the various points being dealt with. He also gave us a very interesting paper on the Norwich, which was well received. He dealt with the various questions in a very able manner. Members kindly attend next meeting, as very important business must be transacted; also pair show for Mule and Hybrid breeding. Judge, Mr. J. Scott. A vote of thanks to Mr. Furniss brought a very instructive meeting to a close.

REIGATE AND REDHILL F.A.

Thirteenth annual members' show held Mutton's Hotel, Redhill, February 13th. Mr. Martin Crnst judged, and gave satisfaction. Over 100 birds were staged, and the quality excelled any previous year's; which facts go to show that members are on the right track. Yorkshires were very good, some excellent birds being cardless. A very fine show of Borders turned up, and of Lizards (an almost new attraction in this district). A number of ladies and gentlemen visited the show, and their remarks were very encouraging. Altogether it proved a success all round. Mr. Bacon won special for best British, with his Chaffinch, which makes it twice in succession.

LEITH O.S.

Annual table show and judging competition held Liberal Club, Hope-street, February 11th, when about 50 birds were forward in seven classes, this being slightly under last year's total. But what was lacking in numbers was made up for in quality, some of the late season's winners being entered. Mr. J. F. Dewar again judged, and after finishing sealed his results in an envelope and handed it to a neutral party. The members then tried their hand at judging, and when the last had finished the seal was broken and the points totalled up, when the winner was found to be Mr. Geo. N. Barclay, with 63 points, he thus holding for a year the silver cup presented by Mr. Dewar. Mr. J. Milne was second with 58 points, and the President, Mr. Lumsden, third, 55 points. All over, the results were very close. At the close of the show Mr. J. Lumsden, our respected President, was presented with a gold appendage as a mark of esteem in which he is held by the members. A gold brooch was also presented to Mrs. Lumsden. Mr. Miller (Criterion Bar), one of our worthy patrons, in handing over the gifts said it gave him much pleasure to assist the Society, and he hoped when another year came round every member would make an endeavour to bring one or more birds to such a function, as it helped to make the members better known to each other. He also very generously presented the winner of the competition with a handsome briar pipe; also one to the lowest scorer. The afternoon proved very enjoyable to all, and much chaffing and good-humoured banter amongst the members brought a well-spent time to a close.

SITTINGBOURNE AND MILTON.

The Sittingbourne and Milton Cage Bird fanciers held a highly successful show Feb. 15, in a room kindly lent by Mr. Noakes, of the "Globe and Engine." Messrs. C. Elliot and H. F. Ambrose officiated as judges, and gave great satisfaction to all. The secretarial duties were efficiently carried out by Mr. B. Tidy, who announces that there is a probability of a society being run in this district. Twenty-four entries were staged—some of the finest birds the judge had seen on a local show bench.

BANGOR.

Members' show, held Old Museum, the birds being well staged, and shown to the best advantage. The secretaries, Messrs. F. Milliard and W. Aitken, carried out the arrangements well from start to finish, ably assisted by a staff of good stewards: Messrs. R. Hughes, W. Evans, W. R. Roberts, and several others of the committee. The quality of the birds was of a high order in some of the classes. The entries totalled 95. Yorkshires were well to the fore in quality and numbers; Norwich had only one class, but the winners were well up to the standard of excellence and purity. Goldies made a good display. Mr. T. Owen (Llandudno Junction) made the awards. One special only was given for most points in Goldies, which was won by Mr. E. Jones (Carnarvon) with his well-known team.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly table show, held Feb. 14th, when the variety was Yorkshires. Our old friend and late secretary, Mr. Steeple, judged. He also gave us lecture on same, and I think his awards met with the approval of all. We had a good number of birds, but I should be pleased to see more at our British show, Feb. 28.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Pair and British bird show held Feb. 15th, Boot Inn, by the kind permission of the vice-president, Mr. S. Whitlow. 26 pairs were staged, and the awards of the judges, Messrs. S. Whitlow and F. Wright, gave general satisfaction. The Yorkshires were a strong class, and the Norwich very good. British birds and muling pairs though few in number were of good quality. A very good attendance of members and fancier friends was present.

Mr. Meiris won novice special with 1st Yorkshire, and the judging competition was won by Mr. A. Fielding, who placed nine correct awards. Arranged that at next meeting a smoker should take place. Two new members elected.—W. H. Knowles, Hon. Sec.

DARLINGTON C.B.S.

Pair show, held Half Moon Inn, Feb. 18, and was one of the most successful we have ever held. The Yorkshires were a superb lot. Norwich, too, were far in advance of previous shows, both in number and merit. The muling and hybrid pairs and the British birds were a nice collection, in splendid condition. The society had a good balance to bring forward from 1910, and they give a cash special for every class. Mr. W. Rutherford judged, his awards appearing to give every satisfaction.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

Members' pair show, held Feb. 16th, headquarters, Leysian Mission Hall, City Road. This is the first show held at headquarters, and the hall lends itself in every way for a bird show, being very spacious, lofty and well lighted. If necessary, 600 birds could be staged. It was quite encouraging to the committee to see such a number of birds, some 123 birds in all being staged by the members (the secretary's hearty thanks to all). This is one of the largest shows of its kind the L. and P. O.S. have held of late years, and goes to prove that the members are ever ready to rally round if the necessity arises. The committee wish to express their grateful thanks to all who so kindly contributed to the success of the evening. Our old friend Mr. J. Dobson was once again amongst us, and received a very warm welcome from all. A very fair sprinkling of visitors were present, including some eighteen ladies, whose presence seemed to brighten things immensely. Mr. T. Heath judged the Canaries and Mr. Allen Silver the British birds and Mules.

Mortlock; the class of mules, too, were all exceptionally good, but the winner, shown by Mr. Ramsden, stood easily first, and the Siskin Canary shown by Mr. Crabb easily topped the remainder.—Chas. W. Law.

WETHERBY.

Wetherby F.S. 16th annual show held Old Post Office, Feb. 16th. The room set apart for the cage birds was a nice and cosy one, with plenty of light, being free from draughts. Mr. Taylor makes an ideal secretary. He kept everything in first-class order, and was ably assisted by a committee of real hard-working fanciers, who were most polite to every question asked. Dr. Wilson came down with a team of real good British, his noted Waxwing being the feature of the show. The bird was in the pink of condition, and as steady as a rock. Mr. Scales judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

YORKS. GRANTHAM C.B.S.

Although its existence extends over a period of only a little more than two years, the society is gradually growing. On Feb. 11th the last pair show of the season (for members only) took place in the Co-operative Hall, and there was a record of 69 entries. The exhibits were shown in very good quality, but the best class was that for Siskins and Linnets. Norwich pairs were a very creditable lot, and the winning birds ought to hold their own in good company. Mr. W. P. Barnes judged, and sent a collection of seven Lizard Canaries not for competition.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Very successful pair show held Feb. 13th, at the Broadway. The backbone of the show was the Yorkshires, and of these there was a grand display. The class for champions contained no less than 23. The novice class contained 19 pairs, Mr. Tebbs being the fortunate owner of the leaders. The Norwich were not so plentiful, but were of the right stamp, particularly the hens. Mr. Owen and Mrs. Thynne were the principal winners in the Borders, and the latter also staged some really tip-top Crests, the leading pair, a C.-B. cock and Cinnamon-marked hen attracting a lot of attention. The show was held in a nice comfortable room, and as usual was ably managed by Mr. H. Smith, assisted by Messrs. Stoakley, Thynne, Whittome, etc. There was a numerous company. Mr. J. Robson judged.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Annual pair show, held Mr. Johnston's Rooms, 6, The Broadway, Feb. 20, and eclipsed all previous efforts, not in number of entries certainly, but in the superb collection of birds, which probably beat any similar show held in and around London this season. It goes without saying that all this is due to the untiring energy of the honorary secretary, Mr. H. Smith, whose splendid services to the Society are appreciated by the members. Entries numbered 194, exactly the same as last year. Yorkshires were a splendid lot. Crests were particularly fine in quality. The Norwich were undonbtedly the best ever seen at a Wimbledon pair show, both in number and quality. Mr. J. Robson judged. CHAMP. SECTION: NOR.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Dixon; hc, c, Mrs. L. M. Thynne. GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Committee meeting held Feb. 7, Duncan's Rooms, 71, London-st., Glasgow, the president, Mr. R. B. Jarvie, occupied chair before a large attendance. Secretary gave a detailed statement of accounts, which, unfortunately, showed a loss on show. The committee decided that a general meeting be called for March 7, in Duncan's Rooms, at 8 p.m., to consider what means shall be adopted to cover this loss, all members to receive notification of same, along with an official balance sheet. It is expected that every member will endeavour to attend. Secretary instructed to write a number of fanciers who had promised their financial support, so there is every prospect of the deficit being reduced by date of general meeting. Mr. Andrew Muir was elected an auditor in place of Mr. McFarlane. Will donors of specials who have not already done so, forward these on as soon as possible, as there are quite a number not yet to hand.—Fred Bowman, Sec.

GRANTHAM & DISTRICT C.B.S.

A short opening ceremony took place at the show for pairs held Feb. 18, and was performed by Ald. W. Lee, who said that he was very pleased with the display. He was sure if they continued to have such shows their association must grow. Mr. W. P. Barnes, the judge, moved a vote of thanks to Ald. Lee, and said the high standard of the exhibits was a great credit to the members. He hoped they would persevere in their hobby, and that the society would increase in membership, and at some future date be able to have an open show with a reputation similar to those held in years gone by. Mr. Ward seconded the vote of thanks, and Ald. Lee having replied, handed to Mr. Barnes, on behalf of the members, a pipe in case, subscribed for in recognition of his services as judge. Mr. Barnes suitably acknowledged the gift.—W. E. Allen, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting Feh. 13, at Church Institute, Paddington-st., Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. The Rev. H. A. Soames was elected a member. The following candidates were nominated:—Mrs. Giddens, Mrs. Soames, Mrs. Stevens, Mr.. T. L. Sayer, and Mr. A. H. Bradley. Out of 58 special prizes at the recent pair show, no less than eight resulted in ties; it was agreed to decide them by a process of draws. Prize money and specials, amounting to £10 9s. 10d., and other specials, won at the recent pair show, were awarded. Miss Rose Sheppard and Mr. A. W. Curtis returned their prize money to the Commemoration Benefit Fund. A vote of thanks was accorded Miss Nellie Wilson for a gift of a set of silver-plated teaspoons and sugar tongs for competition at young bird show. Result of ballot for judges: Annual show: Canary section, J. Robson, British, etc., C. Prior; Young bird, Canary section J. Robson, British C. Prior. For three meetings, from inevitable causes, the "Old Folks' Fund" (Mr. George Gardner's little work of practical sympathy) has had to be postponed, but in order that it should not suffer, the sum of 10s. was advanced to him, and took place at the last meeting, resulting in a collection of 11s. 6d. Mr. G. Crabb then continued his lecture on "Birds I have met." At the close questions were asked by Messrs. W. Page, C. Prior, W. Prance, A. W. Curtis, and V. Wynn, all of which were satisfactorily answered. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Crabb was enthusiastically carried, and was replied to in a very breezy spirit.—V. Wynn, Hon. Sec.

SWANSEA AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held Feb. 14th, Mr. J. W. Ford in chair. Secretary read correspondence received from judges whom he wrote to. Decided, to accept Mr. Battye's services as judge of the Canary Section, and Mr. A. Silver's for the Mules, Hybrid, and British. Date of open show, Nov. 8th and 9th. Mr. D. A. S. Longden offered to start a subscription list to buy a solid silver cup or rose bowl, to be competed for at open show by members. He headed the list with £1 1s., and said he would not himself enter into competition for it. Mr. J. Steers gave 10/6, and our chairman 5/-. All members present gave various sums, and when the list was closed for the evening over £3 was received. This speaks well for the future of the society, everything pointing to a most successful year. Classification for next table show made as follows:—Dk. Goldfinch Mule, Linnet Mule, A.O.V. Dk. Mule, A.O.V. Light or Dk. Mule, Bullfinch, and A.O.V. hens; Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch cocks, house-moulted. Matched pair show was not quite a success in numbers as on previous years, but the birds shown were of the highest quality, and with a little luck ought to produce some excellent youngsters for the bench. The Yorkshire section of the table show produced a new comer in Mr. J. Steers, who staged a magnificent pair of Yorkshires, and it was the opinion of breeders in that section that he ought to be able to produce some good youngsters. I hope our next table show will boast a larger number of exhibits now we have been given two specials for the exhibitors who gain most points during season.—S. H. George, Sec.

KENT COUNTY C.B.A.

Annual meeting held Barton Road, Boys' School, Dover, Feb. 8th, which was well attended. A very good average of ballot papers was sent in by those unable to attend personally, others sending letters of apology for non-attendance. Arthur Burr, Esq., was unanimously elected president for 1911; Messrs. Broad, Birch, Campany, Gibbs, Woresfold, and Dr. T. A. Bowes, vice-presidents; committee (headquarters), Messrs. Lockett, Austen, Abbott, Eade, Hendry, Hunt, Osborne, and Chapman; (county) Messrs. Brett, H. Taylor, Heritage Mead-- Wick-ham, W. H. Thompson, E. J. Wood, Jordan, Wraith, Weaver, and the Revs. H. A. Soames and C. Sales. The retiring chairman and vice-chairman (Messrs. E. C. Rayner and J. Reeve) were re-elected unanimously. The hon. secretary presented his report and balance sheet for 1910, which had been duly audited and signed by the auditors, Messrs. Birch and Osborne, and after some discussion was unanimously passed. The accounts disclosed a balance in hand of £2 13s. 10d., and the hon. secretary reported the association entirely free from debt. The following are the winners of bowls, cups, etc.:—Norwich P.H., Mr. H. E. Taylor; Yorkshires, Mr. C. Lockett; Borders, Dr. T. A. Bowes; Lizards, Mr. E. J. Wood; British, Mr. L. A. Brett; the Ashby tankard, Mr. C. Lockett; and the challenge shield, Mr. F. J. Gibbs. Mr. F. J. Wickham's motion was carried by 18 votes for and 3 against. Messrs. Abbott and Hendry were scrutineers, the ballot papers being ordered to be destroyed at the close. The hon. treasurer, Mr. H. Sargeant, was re-elected for the third and the hon. sec. for the 5th year in succession.—George Sanderson, Hon. Sec., 17, Beaconsfield Avenue, Dover.

MORPETH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Feh. 18, Earl Gray Hotel, when a good attendance turned up to elect judges for show to be held October 14th. Mr. J. C. Barnes was elected to judge our Norwich and Yorkshire sections, and Mr. A. Hay the Border Fancy and members' classes. Will all members take note that our next meeting will be to discuss first feather show, March 18?—J. Nichol, Hon. Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 18, Mr. M. Armstrong in chair. Moderate attendance of members. Decided to hold open show Oct. 28, and that the secretary write a few judges for terms. We hope to elect the latter at next meeting. Our social on the 3rd inst only turned out very moderate. Decided, to pay 4d. per entry in members' classes for our last open show. Members having prize money to draw please attend next meeting for same. Two new members enrolled.—J. Lindsey, Hon. Sec.

BATHGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 18. We had a very successful table show of matched pairs for breeding—Nor., Yorks., Mules, and Hybrids. Some capital pairs were staged, which should produce something that will do credit to their owners when the show season comes round again. Mr. R. Baird won special in Mule and Hybrid pairs, Mr. T. Steven being runner-up, and wins novice medal. Messrs. R. Cruickshanks and Ashworth were the principal winners in the Canary classes. Agreed, to hold another table show March 18, of field-moulted specimens. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought a very pleasant meeting to a close.—A. Nicol, Sec.

BURY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, held at new headquarters, the Y.M.C.A., Rock Street, Feb. 14th. A very comfortable room was provided. It is right in the centre of the town, and should prove a big improvement to our shows financially. After the ordinary business, Mr. J. Perry (President of the Heywood Society), a successful exhibitor of British birds, gave us a very interesting lecture on British birds, speaking over an hour on the Bullfinch, Goldfinch, and Linnet, in their wild state. Their nests, nesting places, and eggs were dealt with, also their foods. He urged that as much of their wild foods as possible should be given them in captivity. He also spoke of the best time to buy birds, and likely specimens for show purposes. He mentioned the Redpoll and Siskin, but time would not permit him to go on any longer, so we had to bring one of the most interesting lectures to a close; it was, without a doubt, A1. A vote of thanks was accorded.—H. Jameson, Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

At the pair show held Feb. 20, the annual meeting was also held, but only the most formal business was taken, the more important matters, such as the election of officers and the revision of the rules being held over for the adjourned meeting March 6th. One new member was made, and a lady and a gentleman were nominated. Secretary announced result of the last judging competition: Mr. C. Taylor 11 points, Mrs. C. Taylor 9, Mr. E. Gibbs 8, Messrs. S. Wright, E. J. Whittome and F. W. Owen 7 each, Messrs. P. Rorke and T. Brown 6 each, Messrs. L. G. Owen and A. J. Shipton and Mrs. Whittome 5 each, Mrs. M. M. Owen and Messrs. F. P. Found, R. N. S. Tebb, G. W. Baker and F. Whiting 4 each, Mr. A. A. Tutty 3. He also announced the competitions for the whole year had resulted in Mr. F. W. Owen and Mr. T. Brown tieing for first place with 47 points each, the other principal scores being Mr. L. G. Owen 46 points, Mrs. M. M. Owen 45, Mr. G. Baker and Mr. P. Rorke 42 each. The Chairman said the prizes would be presented at the March meeting. Mr. G. J. Warley presented the cup given by him to the exhibitor of the best unflighted Canary at the annual show, which was won by Mr. Chalfont.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

First annual smoking concert and prize distribution held Lockhart's Cafe, top of Bigg Market, Feb. 16th, when 36 members and friends sat down to supper. The event was a signal success, and it is to be hoped this is the beginning of many such socials amongst fanciers in the Northern district. There was abundance of talent, musical and recitative. Mr. Weaver kindly gave us a splendid pianoforte solo; Mr. Prest sang two songs, his "England" being very much appreciated. Our good friend Mr. Currah again convulsed us with his readings and recitations. Mr. Wilson sang and was appreciated, while Mr. Walton brought down the house with his comic songs and recitations, two of which were his own composing. Mr. G. Taylor was warmly applauded for his rendering of "Asleep in the deep," and Mr. Atkinson gave us songs which were warmly applauded. Mr. Tudah recited and sang. Mr. Adamson delighted us with some good old songs, whilst last, but not least, our good friend Mark Potts gave us a good comic song. After supper the Chairman, Mr. T. C. Crawhall presented the cups and medals to the successful winners who were present, and those who were not amongst the successful ones vowed that by all fair means they were all going to have a real good try next year. Mr. Tomlinson was especially congratulated upon his success of not only capturing the novice cup, but also the challenge cup for best young bird bred by a member. Eleven o'clock came all too soon, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the artistes and friends, especially to Mr. Bryden, who had undertaken all arrangements, the company went home to dream of next year's winners (to be).

THE STOCK BOOK.

"Cage Birds Breeding Room Register" is framed on novel lines and contains many entirely new departures. Is absolutely indispensable to everyone interested in the hobby.

COMPILED BY G. E. WESTON.

MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Well-known fanciers have said of the "Stock Book":—It makes bird breeding easy."...This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred.

NOW IS THE SEASON YOU NEED IT.

This "BREEDING ROOM REGISTER & BIRD KEEPER'S ACCOUNT BOOK" (copyright) offers in a handy form a means of keeping—

- The complete pedigree and description of every bird in one's room.
- A full record of the season's breeding experiences.
- An account of every young bird reared, and how it was disposed of.
- A register of one's doings at the shows (the most complete and useful yet devised).
- A cash account for the year.
- A profit and loss account of the season's proceedings, and a balance sheet showing how much one has invested in the hobby.

A Series of Registers will thus furnish a concise record of the career of a fancier as a breeder and an exhibiter from year to year, or over any number of years.

Many useful Emergency and other Hints of great value during the Breeding Season will also be found in its pages.

Price 6d. from any Newsagent, or 7d. (postal order), post free from THE MANAGER, "CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous Issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

"WHY BE HUMBUGGED?"

"3, York Road, Newport, Mon., Feb. 18, 1911.—Dear Sir,—Permit me to express myself highly pleased at the excellent manner in which you have dealt with my small order. I at first wondered whether your very low prices would be indicative of poor quality, but I am pleased to say that I have agreeably found that you give the best quality at the lowest prices, and this being so, I cannot refrain from acknowledging your good terms. I myself have only just entered into the Fancy in a small way, and therefore will be unable to have the pleasure of forwarding you any further orders just at present, but I will not fail to bring your name before any friends who may have orders to pass along. Again thanking you for your kind attention, and also for the excellent way in which my small order was packed.—I am, Faithfully yours, Wm. E. Sturley.—Mr. Wm. Pimm, Birmingham." YORKSHIRES, NORWICH,

CRESTS & CRESTBREDS, SCOTCH FANCIES, BORDER FANCIES.

For value in any of the above varieties I defy all competition. I have some clinking stock birds that are bred from winners, and also a few actual winners for sale. But see what others say. These are specimens of hundreds recently received, and filed for the inspection of my visitors:—1, Ross-st., St. Helens, 22nd Feb., '11.—I received birds all well and safe this morning. I think that you are a working man's friend. I could not have picked better birds out myself.—J. T. Nicholls to Joe Thomas, North Road, Royston, Barnsley, 20th Feb., '11:—I beg to thank you for safe arrival of birds, and might say the same have far exceeded my expectations.—G. Brown to Joe Thomas, 5, Cardegar Row, Ystradyulais, 23rd Feb., '11:—Please accept my best thanks for sending me such a nice bird. He was singing within ten minutes of reaching the house.—T. W. Thomas to Joe Thomas, 1, Lady Menzies Place, Edinburgh, 22nd Feb., '11:—The Crest-bred cocks arrived safe, and they give me every satisfaction.—A. Wilson to Joe Thomas. I could print hundreds similar did space permit.

Remember, I do not stand in the dark. I offer an open invitation to any fancier to come at any time but Sunday and inspect my stock. My birds will speak for themselves. I send every bird on seven or ten days' approval, and guarantee all pairs unrelated.

YORKSHIRE COCKS, grand, length birds, full of type and quality, and in full song, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each upwards; erect, racey, close-feathered hens, 3/-, 4/-, 5/6, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/- each; properly matched pairs, guaranteed unrelated, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- upwards.

For Best Results in YORKSHIRES

and most honourable treatment, by the old reliable breeder. Read following, and remember I send every bird on a full week's approval at my sole risk. 43, Walpole-road, Bromley. 27/2/11.—"Received birds in good condition; delighted with them, and pleased to tell you I won 1st and 2nd in pair class at L.P.O.S. show. Shall always recommend you, as I have got good value for money for every order placed with you.—C. R. Bullen to L. Dykes." Another from same district — Chatterton-road, Bromley, 25/2/11. — "I am pleased to tell you the pair of Yorkshires have won 2nd, three 4ths, vhc, and two specials, at Crystal Palace, etc. Thanking you for same, and wishing you success.—W. C. Fleet to L. Dykes." 1431, Mulberry-street, Reading, U.S.A., received here 27/2/11.—"The birds arrived in splendid condition, and give every satisfaction. The way they were packed reflects great credit on you. I am pleased I have at last found a man I can trust with my orders, as I sent several orders during the past few years to other advertisers in your district and received nothing but rubbish. You will receive further orders from me, and you can publish this testimonial, and shall be only too pleased to recommend you to anyone requiring good birds.—H. Shell to L. Dykes." I have some real good pairs and odd cocks and hens, that for price, type, quality, and length cannot be beaten. You can pay more money, but to buy better is an impossibility, and every pair is most carefully selected by me to give best results.

Champion Yellow Cocks, at 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; Buff Cocks, at 5/6, 5/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/5, 15/-, 20/- each; fine racy hens, in high breeding condition, Yellows, 4/-, 5/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; extra good Buff Hens at 3/6, 4/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; matched Pairs at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-; and a few extra good pairs at 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair; travelling cages, 3d. Clears, Ticked, Marked, and Clear Pink-eyed, Colour-fed, or Natural Colour, and all Cocks on full song, and 7ins. long (some over); all guaranteed cold-room bred and kept. A few specially selected songsters, day and gaslight singers, at 6/-, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6. I invite you to come and inspect my stock at any time, and judge for yourselves who has the largest stock of high-class birds. Easy payments arranged with genuine fanciers. This is a genuine offer to those requiring good birds, and not able to pay full cash with order; state wants; stamp reply. Illustrated price list and copy of winning testimonials, post free. I shall esteem it a favour if you will deposit money with Editor, and allow me to send on approval against any others.

Who is the champion? This honour is claimed by many. My wins this season at all leading shows include 72 firsts, 49 seconds, 49 thirds, 27 fourths, 40 specials, 2 cups, several gold and silver medals, several cructs, etc, and have sold over 50 winners to my customers this season. Place your orders with the old reliable breeder and exhibitor, who breeds his own winners, and avoid disappointments.

Foreign orders receive prompt attention and safe delivery guaranteed.

OH! WHAT A

pride you will have in your birds, and how your friends will congratulate you on their high quality, yet you will have the satisfaction of knowing they were low in price. You have no need to pay fancy prices. I have had a lot of experience breeding and selling birds, always breeding from the best of stock birds and winners, and selling the birds at reasonable prices within the reach of all. My matched pairs of Yorkshires and Norwich at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair are unequalled for style and quality, and are birds that will do you good. No breeder can show more and better unsolicited testimonials than the thousands of originals I have open for your inspection. I do not show one bird and sell another; every bird I have is for sale. See my advertisement under Rollers for unsolicited testimonials, when you have read the following samples: 23/2/11, 17, Beechwood-avenue, Chorlton.—Duly received Yorkshire; am very pleased. Will write you again.—H. York to L. Storey. 24/2/11, Sheffield.—Norwich arrived in good condition; gives every satisfaction. Am very pleased.—J. Hill to L. Storey. 23/2/11, 29, Church-row, Seaton.—Received Norwich safe and sound; am well pleased. E. Share to L. Storey. 24/2/11, South Shields. Thank very much for bird you sent me; it gives every satisfaction. No man could get a better, especially at the money.—E. Small to L. Storey. 24/2/11, Pine-street, Bacup.—Received birds, and am well satisfied with them.—E. Fogg to L. Storey. Send a postcard for my illustrated price list. 2, Rose-street, Kirkintilloch. 24/2/11.—Received bird in good condition; well pleased with it. You will receive my future orders. Have instructed "C.B." to pay you deposit.—J. Todd to L. Storey. Call and inspect my stock. You will be convinced. I have the best pure bred Yorkshires, that cannot be beaten for type, size, and quality; feathers like wax. Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/, 4/6, 5/- each; matched pairs for breeding, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; extra fine cobby Norwich cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched breeding pens, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. Send a postcard for my illustrated price list. Neat travelling cages, 3d. each. All birds carriage paid on seven days' approval at my risk: E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

AMBLER'S YORKSHIRES. THE OLD BRADFORD FIRM

The finest strain of Yorkshires in the world, and the most reliable. See our winnings for 30 years, also championships for best Yorkshires in show, Crystal Palace, two firsts, two seconds, 3rd and 4th Palace 1911. We have for sale a few real toppers, long, racy cocks, perfect type, full of style, and quality, also some grand shm stylish hens, full of breed and figure, feathered like silk, just the sort to breed champions; pairs mated to breed winners, from 15/- to 60/; single birds proportionate; the highest possible breeding and the study of a lifetime; satisfaction guaranteed; stamp reply: Messrs. Amblers, 29, Sefton-rd., Morecambe.

THE BLOOD THAT TELLS

Having won the Amalgamation 25 guinea challenge trophy, the Yorkshire Union 50 guinea challenge trophy, the Yorkshire 20 guinea challenge cup four times out of five, the Naylor challenge cup twice in succession, the Cinnamon Marked trophy, I have also won in two successive years at the Palace 13 1sts and 16 specials; also 3 championships for best Yorkshire, and 2 championships for best Cin. marked bird, and have concluded the season by winning at London C.B.A. and Palace Shows, 5 1sts, 3 2nds, 3 3rds, 2 4ths, and championship for best yellow-marked bird; also 1st in "Cage Birds'" competition. Can spare a few pairs at 20/-, 30/-, 40/-; also a few clinking pairs at reasonable prices; stamped address for reply: Shackleton, Melrose House, Lytton-rd., Girlington, Bradford.

OGDEN BROS.

Who is the champion breeder? We never miss a summer breeding several of the best living. We have won more prizes at Crystal Palace, 1911, with birds bred by exhibitor than any other exhibitor, 2 1sts, 2 2nds, 1 3rd; all these we have bred ourselves. Our trio of buff cocks have won 26 1sts this season, all 3 standing 1st on the same day, at classical shows, where the keenest competition were Leicester, Harrogate, Brighouse; these 3 we have also bred. Thirteen times this season we have won special for best Yorkshire; 3 championship diplomas at the biggest shows in England, Gateshead, L.C.B.A., and Crystal Palace, also winner of the £10 Yorkshire Union trophy, the Y.C.C. Sandiford cup, valued 5 guineas, Carl's competition for most points, 589, gained at Yorkshire Union's shows, winner of Cinnamon-marked trophy with unflighted birds, must be bred by exhibitor. We have won more firsts than any other exhibitor in this variety this season, and the last ten years we have won competitions, cups, trophies, medals, etc., that will stand a record for some years. We don't buy 3 or 4 of the best living and trade on their reputation, and them 3 or 4 not for sale; we have 30 all 1st prize winners, practically any of them for sale; one of our winning buffs, matched to a clinking hen, £7 pair; properly matched pairs from 15/6 to 60/; certain to breed winners; buy the blood from the fountain-head; all those wanting honest dealings come and select for yourself or send cash to editor, and we will send you on approval the best value it is possible to get in England; stamp reply: Dudley Hill, Bradford.

Who is the Champion IN YORKSHIRES, 1910-11?

Read below, and judge for yourself. With 153 entries I have won 61 1sts, 23 2nds, 20 3rds, 15 4ths, 24 spls., making a grand total of 143 prizes. I have also won in the very keenest competition shows; have won Yorkshire Union 30-guinea challenge trophy, which makes it twice in succession, also Naylor Challenge Trophy, also twice in succession, and Ramsden 6-guinea cup, which makes this twice in succession, and now becomes my own property; also Y.C.C. 7-guinea challenge trophy, and the cinnamon marked competition prize for the man who has bred his own winners. Have also won three gold medals, few cage birds prizes, and colour food prizes too numerous to mention, and last, but not least, with 8 entries at 1911 Palace Show, capturing 5 1sts, 1 2nd, 1 3rd, 1 vhc, and championship diploma best cinnamon marked birds. I think this will convince you that I hold the plums in the Yorkshire Fancy. Have still a few 20/- pairs and some pairs extra good at very reasonable prices; stamp particulars: Bailey, South View-ter., Sandy-lane, Allerton, Bradford.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. usual quality singing contest King's Head, Shannon Street, Feb. 25, when 18 o. the best birds in England sang for three prizes Visitors from Sheffield, Morley, Halton, etc. 1, J Green; 2, W. Sissons; 3, C. Ward. Judges: Messrs J. Naylor, W. Naylor, J. Mehan. Also on Feb. 26, when 21 birds entered for four good prizes. The room was packed with visitors from all parts of England, the birds singing to the delight of all; the winner was so good that the oldest of fanciers said it was years since they heard a bird like it. Many tempting bids were made for it. 1, W. Sissons; 2, J. Bland; 3, A. Richardson; 4, T. Stead. Judges: Messrs. T. Summers, W. Naylor, C. Cooper. Next Saturday, first bird up 2.30.—Wm. Sissons, Hon. Sec.

Skinner's Arms Linnet F.A., Buslingthorpe Lane, usual quality singing contest, held Feb. 26th, when 17 birds competed. We had, as usual, a good attendance. A few fanciers from other clubs brought their birds, and some good singing was heard. Competition was keen. Result: 1, J. Green; 2, A. Butler; 3, Wm. Lunn. Judges, Messrs. C. Biss and J. Simmons. Also on the above date Canary contest held—a poor entry, only 5 birds competed. Result: 1, C. Ward; 2, H. Beeston; judge, Mr. J. Green.—Wm. Lunn, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Weekly Linnet singing contest held Fitzwilliam Hotel, Milford-street, Attercliffe Common, Feb. 25th, when 14 birds entered. 1st, Thompson, 83sec.; 2nd, Shimwell, 76sec.; 3rd, Brown, 62sec.; Thompson, 47; Watson, Thompson, Williamson, 43; Brown, 42. Feb. 26th, when 21 birds entered (2 minutes' time singing). 1st, Brown, 80sec.; 2nd, Shimwell, 68sec., 3rd, Thompson, 66sec.; Baker, 64; Thompson, 53; Brown, 53; Williamson, 35. Contest every week end. New members wanted to join. Whitsuntide club going strong.—A. Brown, Sec.

GLASSHOUGHTON.

Open Linnet sing, held at Rock Inn, Feb. 26th, when 24 birds sang. Result: 1, Kirk; 2, Papworth; 3, Dobson. On March 5th we shall hold our first members' sing. All fanciers invited to join.—A Longfield, Sec.

GLASGOW.

City of Glasgow Linnet S.C. weekly contest held Mr. A. Muir's Saltmarket, Feb. 25. Result: Mc Millan, 1; Nelson, 2; Pullan, 3. Contest next Saturday, 4 p.m.—W. Ross.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual quality Linnet singing contest, held Prince Albert Hotel, Feb. 26th, when 19 birds competed for three good prizes. Result: 1, Farrar; 2, Soloman; 3, shared by Farrar and Chip. Judges: Messrs. C. Lorriman, A. Binns, and J. Smith.—J. Smith, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn quality Linnet S.A. (headquarters Old Red Lion, Snig Brook), usual Linnet contest for quality, held Feb. 25th, when 17 birds competed:—1st prize, W. H. Topping; 2nd, J. Dobson; 3, G. Hayhurst. There was also a meeting to elect a new president. Mr. J. Dobson was unanimously elected.—Rd. Hayhurst.

WARRINGTON.

Grand Linnet singing contest for time and quality, held Royal Exchange, when some nice singing was witnessed. Quality winners were: 1, J. Statham (Leigh); 2, R. Holcroft (Leigh); 3, W. Parry (Wigan). Time winners: 1, R. Leyland (Wigan), 105; 2, G. Randalls (Warrington), 94; 3, Yates (Leeds), 64. J. and W. Mather.

Warrington Linnet S.A. open contest for time only will take place at Mersey Hotel, Mersey Street, March 11th. Entrance fee 1s. each. First pair birds to be hung at 2 p.m. o'clock. Entries taken until 3 p.m. Prizes given according to entries.—C. W. Corbett, Sec. Advt.

HULL.

Hull Linnet F.A. weekly contest held headquarters, Grapes Tavern, Brook Street (opposite Paragon Station), where 17 of the best birds were entered: 1, Hainley; 2, 3, 4, McConnell. Judge, Mr. Fred Allen; timekeeper, Thundercliffe. This club is open to all comers; everybody welcome.—Fred Allen, Hon. Sec.

I note in last week's issue that Mr. Green, of Leeds, is willing to sing any bird in Yorkshire, my bird preferred. Will Mr. Green deposit £10 with Editor of "C.B." and I will promptly cover it? I will sing him in Leeds for £5, and him to sing me a return match in Hull for same amount.—Fred Allen (Hull).

Club Reports.

HIRST UNIVERSAL C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 25th, Universal Social Club. Five new members joined, bringing our total membership to 22. We decided to open our radius to the whole County of Northumberland, and to hold our first feather show on July 1st, 1911.—R. Middleton, EAST HAM C.B.A.

General meeting held headquarters, February 23rd, when the chairman, Mr. J. H. Paxman performed the pleasant task of distributing special prizes won at the pair show. In the unavoidable absence of the secretary (Mr. Fred. Fox), Mr. H. B. Rout read a full report of the show, which financially was well on the right side. A series of "Questions and Answers" have been arranged for the next general meeting, March 23rd, with Mr. W. Hainmans in the chair.—B. C. Smith (Club Reporter).

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held headquarters, Feb. 21st, Mr. J. Stenhouse (President) in chair. Secretary reported donation of £1. The following judges were then elected: For Scotch Fancies, Mr. C. Berwick (St. Andrews); for Crests and Crestbreds, Mr. W. Paul (Uphall); for Norwich Plainheads, Mr. W. Hampton (Biechin); and for Mules, British, and Foreign: Mr. A. W. Watson (Edinburgh). Agreed, to leave over the Border, also the Yorkshire judges till next meeting. Agreed, to hold club show last Saturday of January next year. Meeting was closed with a vote of thanks to Chairman.—A. Dickson, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held club-house Feb. 25th, Mr. A. Foulds in chair. Eight new members were enrolled. Some very interesting lectures are promised during the summer months—Mr. Tom Routledge on "Bird Organs"; Mr. Massey, on "Getting Birds up for Show"; Mr. A. Foulds, "Training and Managing Young Birds." A good muster of members attended, and it was passed that we have a dinner and social evening at our next meeting night. All members wishing to attend are requested to send in their names to Mr. A. Percival, hon. sec. There was a good discussion on the "Koller" by the members; this tour seems to be an interesting subject. Mr. T. Routledge was appointed to report the meetings to the Press, as an assistant to Mr. Andrew Percival, Hon. Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting and table show, held College Inn, Feb. 25th, when Mr. W. Ducker presided over a very good attendance. We made five new members in Messrs. T. Twigg, R. Thompson, J. Webster, W. Hinchcliffe, and J. Vernon. Decided, that we only have a members' show this year, to be held Dec. 2nd. After all business, it was decided to let the members not having any birds at table show, judge, and Mr. W. Bagnall won with a nice pair of Nor; then we got Mr. Webster to give us a discussion on the birds there. He spent a nice half hour showing us different points, especially with the winning pair. We are holding a table show for British birds next meeting, March 25th. Will anyone desirous of joining the society please attend? All will be welcome.—B. Bailey, Sec.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

Fourth annual general meeting, held headquarters, Feb. 18th, Mr. Perkins occupying chair. A good muster of members was present. Balance sheet submitted, and after hearing report on same was accepted with great satisfaction. Twenty-three new members were nominated during past year, bringing total up to 62. Mr. Dibley, one of our hon. secretaries, had reluctantly to resign his position, owing to pressure of business. Members' prize money and specials were paid out. Following officers elected:—Pres., Rev. Bailey; vice-pres., Mr. Mallett; chairman, Mr. Hartland; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Perkins; treasurer, Mr. Lyons; auditors, Messrs. Pawley and Miller; committee, Messrs. Hazel, Wood, Hall, junr., Shrivelle, J. Smith, Juley, Brett, Newnham.—Meades and Woolgar, Hon. Secs.

WEST STANLEY AND DIS. C.B.S.

Annual meeting held February 25th, headquarters. After the balance was read the election of officers took place: Pres., J. Langsdale, Esq.; Vice-Pres., Drs. Charles, Dewar, and Presteil, and Messrs. A. Dunn, W. Shield, W. Wilson, and M. H. Lindon; Chairman, W. Butler; Vice-Chairman, E. Atkinson; Committee: Messrs. J. Emmerson, W. Boyd, M. Crosby, S. Foster, T. Burdon, W. Fox, J. Calvert, and J. Forsyth; Auditors, Messrs. T. Burdon and W. Fox; Treasurer, J. Hunter; Assist. Sec., Mr. R. Peart; Secretary, Wm. Elliott. Nest Feather show will be held June 24th, and the annual show on January 26th, 1912. Ten new members were enrolled: Messrs. W. Knowles, R. Coates, J. Boyle, J. Hetherington, J. Robson, J. Hunter, jun., J. Weirs, G. Sanderson, W. Yettes, and W. Thompson. During the evening an open field-moulted Linnet show (six miles' radius) was held. There was a splendid turn-out of young birds; 32 faced the judge, Mr. J. Shepherd (Newcastle), who gave his four awards as follows: 1st, J. H. Elliott; 2, R. Peart; 3, G. Lane; 4, J. Hunter. The hall was crowded with fanciers, and we saw many familiar faces from a distance. Decided, to give three silver cups for competition at annual show.—W. Elliott Sec.

GRIMSBY AND CLEETHORPES ROLLER C.S.

Monthly meeting held Anchor Restaurant, Feb. 25th. There was a good attendance of members, several of whom brought birds. Three new members were elected. It was announced that his Worship the Mayor of Grimsby (Councillor J. Whiteley Wilkin, J.P.), had accepted the presidency. Several vice-presidents also expressed their acceptance of the office, and other names were suggested for the position. Letters were read from the secretary of the British Roller C.C., and the closed rings of that club were ordered to be obtained for the use of the members. The routine business having been transacted, a sub-committee was appointed to draw up rules for submission to next meeting. The principal feature of the evening was the acceptance of our invitation by Mr. Walton, of Leeds, to address the members on the song tours of the Roller Canary, and giving an illustrative description of each as the birds sang, which was much enjoyed and highly appreciated. As the birds sang very freely this gave Mr. Walton the opportunity of an extended description as each tour was given. A good deal of interesting criticism passed, the utmost satisfaction being expressed, and a hearty vote of thanks accorded Mr. Walton on the proposition of Mr. D. Robinson, one of the vice-presidents. Next meeting fixed for March 25th, 7.30 p.m.; interested fanciers heartily welcomed.—W. Yardley, Hon. Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.A

Adjourned meeting held 22nd Feb., headquarters, and it proved another stride towards the success so well assured. Six more members proposed and accepted, making total 24. Mr. Milmott (chairman) soon had the members busy passing rules, and it was decided to allow any dealer the privilege of becoming a member. Committee elected: Messrs. Wright, Perks, Murray, Constable, Herding. Decided, to have an interesting debate at next meeting, March 8, with some well-known expert to open same; all were cordially invited to bring birds. We have secured the services of that well-known judge and breeder, Mr. Russell, who has consented to make the debate interesting and profitable to all. We invite members to bring a friend.—J. Sheppard.

BOURNEMOUTH & DIST. C.B.

Adjourned annual general meeting held Albert Restaurant, Feb. 16th, sixteen members present. Mr. G. W. Jones occupied chair. Unanimously resolved, to hold an open show at Central Hall, Nov. 7th and 8th, Mr. J. Robson being elected judge. An animated discussion arose on the question of classes. It being very generally felt that the number offered in previous years were too many, it was decided that with a few exceptions the open and members' classes be combined, and that the total be about 40. Decided, to apply for the patronage of the specialist clubs. The Cage Bird Union question was introduced, reference being made to the deletion of Rule 22; unanimously resolved, not to re-join the Union. Three new members were elected, viz., Messrs. Colin R. Maggs, H. Matthews, and Mrs. Julia Lydford. A discussion on the feeding and rearing of young birds was on the agenda, but the hour being late it was decided to postpone this for another meeting, a busy evening closing with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—W. O. Brooke, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Committee meeting, fully represented, held headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, Feb. 21st. The chief item of discussion was an attraction for the novices, viz., at our meeting on March 7th a table show will be held for novices only, of matched pairs of Canaries for breeding, all varieties. "What coustitutes a novice?" is: "Not to have won a first prize in open competition at any show, or two 1sts in members' classes, with Canaries," as per Rule 10. Prize money, 5/-, 2/6, and 1/6; no entry fees. Now, you novices, make up your minds to have a good show and bring as many pairs as you can. Also decided, that any members joining that night, providing they come under the heading of "novice," can participate in the table show. The table show will be followed by a lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, by Mr. W. Mundell (of Bradford). Allotting of cups to be won by members. Decided, to give one cup to each section, viz., Yorks, Nor., Crests, Brit. and Hybrids, and For. birds, 5 cups in all. Each cup will be accompanied with a medal, which will be the property of winner. Decided, that we cater for the patronage of all the specialist clubs for our all-England shows, to be held Cutler's Hall, Nov. 3rd and 4th, as we intend to make this one of the largest shows in the provinces, when every consideration will be shown to the exhibitors. A vote of thanks to the Chairman (Mr. T. Dawn) brought the meeting to a close.—John A. T. Woodall, Correspondent.

DUNFERMLINE AND DIS. C.B.S

Meeting held Co-operative Hall, 25th Feb., when the president, Mr. J. Rankine presided over a large turn-out of members. Secretary read letter from the members of the "Guthenburg"; enclosed with this was £5, which was granted to the society with which to purchase a trophy for annual competition. Secretary instructed to convey the members' thanks to this body for the very handsome gift. Agreed, that the condition of entry be, each member should nominate six birds for same, and to be won three times before it becomes his own property. Election of office-bearers: — President, Mr. Rankine, vice-presidents, Messrs. W. Cullen and A. Howie; secretary, Mr. R. T. Campbell, 7, James Place; treasurer, Mr. B. McLaren; committee, Messrs. G. Rae, H. Hogg, J. Sneddon, H. Henry, W. Campbell, F. Baxter, A. Bowman, W. Rolland, and W. Malcolm. At next meeting (last Saturday in March) Mr. W. Cullen agreed to give a washing exhibition. Preceding this meeting a breeding pairs show was held. CREST: 1, Bowman. NOR.: 1, 2, Prentice. YORKS.: 1, Campbell. BORDER FCY.: 1, 3, Meddon; 2, 4, Campbell. MULE PAIRS: 1, Howie; 2, 4 Campbell; 3, Bowman. HYB.: 1, 4, McLaren; 2, Hogg; 3, Rantine. Mr. Cullen took Canaries, and Mr. W. Malcolm the Mule and Hybrid class; the former had rather an easy time, but the British bird judge had all his work cut out for him. Both bird judge had all his work cut out for him. Both acquitted themselves well, and gave every satisfaction.—Robert T. Campbell, Sec.—(Please write on one side of paper only.—EDITOR.)

CREWE O.S.

Members' show held Co-operative Hall, Feb. 25th, when over 100 birds were staged, which was considered good, while the quality in some of the classes was of the highest order, especially Norwich. some splendid specimens were on view in these classes, full of quality and grand type, some of which have done a considerable amount of winning in open competition. British birds were very fine, indeed, about the best lot we have ever seen at their members' show. Not only were the birds excellent specimens, but the condition in which they were staged was delightful. The point specials in the champion sections resulted as follows:—Messrs. E. Cooper, 14. In the novices, Messrs. H. Greenwood, 15; E. Jaycott, 9; G. Trigger, 7. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood judged.

Under the White Rose.

COMMITTEE of the Yorkshire C.C. met at headquarters on Saturday evening last to hear the secretary's report of the year's competitions and a general outline of the financial side of the club. The competitions have been very keen; indeed, in several cases ties will be noted, and this is a thing that does not often happen. Then, financially, the club is "all there." A good number of prizes are to be given away on March 11th; then all accounts will be squared up, and work started for another year. This club never aims at having a balance in hand, all that comes in is given out in prizes, so that those that pay the piper shall have a chance of calling the tune. It was decided at this meeting that a whist drive should be held at a near date, with the hope to raise a little towards working expenses, so that still more prizes can be given.

EAST Bowling and Dist. Society appear to be making great headway. Some time ago they removed their headquarters to the St. John's Schools, Paley Road, a right good move. They have a splendid room for the members' shows, lectures, socials, and meetings, etc., and the members attend better, show better, and pay better. At the last two shows they have had big entries, about 130, and a large attendance of people.

THE ballot papers of the Yorkshire Union are now in the hands of the members; those not having received one had better apply at once to the secretary, when one will be forwarded. Those who have changed their addresses, and not notified the change, will probably not get one.

FOR the post of vice-president, we have half a dozen nominations, all good men and true, so you can't vote wrong: then, for secretary, Mr. H. Hill stands unopposed. We have six trustees to choose from, including the two retiring officers, also for the auditorship plate we have the two old ones and four "new runners." Amongst the alterations of rules we have, first, "that no delegate's travelling expenses be paid." The present year is the first time this has been working, and I have seen no report as to the efficiency or otherwise of the system. Next follow three items in regard to judges. No. 2 is to be looked at in two ways. It reads, "That those societies not holding an open show, and not paying their proportion of judges' fees, shall neither nominate nor vote for the Union judges." This is all right from the standpoint those that hold the shows should appoint the judges; they have them to pay. But, on the other hand, what about the exhibitor who is a member of a society that does not hold a show?—he wants to have a word on the subject.

WITH regard to catalogues, this is simply a matter for those societies that are to hold open shows, and should be looked into. Is it worth the expense? Next we have a rule that has never been carried out; therefore, surely, out it ought to go Following we have that vexed question the limit of price in the novice classes. This now stands at £5 5s., and it is proposed that it be advanced to seven guineas, or, in the alternative, that there be no limit. Now, ye great and mighty novices, you have it in your own hands to make it any way you like. Don't forget to send in your voting paper. The rule re sending the entry forms and slips to the Union Secretary after the show is very useful. Many times the entry forms are wanted by the various specialist club secretaries, and when all are at one place it is most convenient. The winners of several competitions have had to be decided on the marking of the entry forms. Last year it was passed that no reporter be allowed to judge a Union show; this year it is proposed to modify it a little, that no "regular" reporter be allowed to judge. Where does a regular reporter end, and an irregular reporter begin? A regular reporter has only to miss reporting one show, and nobody can class him as otherwise than an irregular reporter. Let us have something definite and clear to work upon.

THE rule in regard to the First Feather Shows (52) reads that there shall be six First Feather Shows. Where were they held? Here we have two proposals—first, that this rule be put into force, and that the last six societies holding open shows shall come forward and take the first feather shows: and, secondly, that this rule be deleted. Many would like the First Feather shows, and many would like the rule deleted. Which will win?

WE have eight proposed new rules, and the first one contains an idea to keep up the interest in the competitions right to the finish of the season. No. 2 is in regard to the judging of the novice classes; they are not satisfied that their classes should be always the last to be judged, and propose that at alternate shows they should be taken first. No. 3 is the "hardy annual" in regard to the holding of members' shows during the hours that an open show is in progress, and No. 4 also deals with this, with the addition of £1 1s. fine for violation. I have heard it held, however, that the members' shows are the life of some societies, and that the rule does not leave much time for them during the best part of the show season. In No. 6 we have the proposal that all societies shall pay their share of the judges' fees! Then the 7th proposes that all affiliated societies shall have one uniform rate of membership fee. No. 8 is also on the same subject, but only to apply to those societies within five miles of the Bradford Town Hall. Why the private working of the societies should be tampered with some fanciers seem very sore about, and say that if a society can work on a small subscription, and pay its way, it should be left alone, as there are many working-men fanciers who can pay a certain sum, but this, if it were doubled, would be too much, and the society would probably lose a member and a good worker.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. McLAREN (Stirling).

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. G. Hislop (Stirling), of the death of an old and respected fancier of this district, Mr. John McLaren, for many years secretary of the Stirling and District O.S. It came as a blow to the fanciers here, owing to his short illness. He was buried before many knew about it. Much sympathy is felt for his sorrowing wife and family.

Mr. W. Bishop, secretary of the Stirling and Dist. C.B.S., also writes:—"Johnny," as he was familiarly called, had been a member of our society for over 20 years, a good few years of which he was secretary. Of a very quiet and unassuming nature, he was very much respected by all who knew him. He leaves a widow and three sons to mourn his loss, for whom much sympathy will be extended in their sad bereavement.

Mr. J. DICKSON (Kirkintilloch).

The West of Scotland was sorely stricken by Death's fell hand on the 15th February, when Kirkintilloch and District C.B.S. sustained a great loss by the death of their secretary, Mr. John Dickson, at the age of 33 years, writes Mr. J. M'Lay (Kirkintilloch). Unassuming, yet energetic, he passed away in his prime, and in the first blush of his successes as a Plainhead and British bird exhibitor. His remains were followed to their last resting place, Campsie Kirk Yard, near his native home, by a few well-known fanciers. Many tokens of regret were extended to his young widow and three children.

Mr. J. FERGUSON (Glasgow).

I regret to inform you of the death of that well-known Norwich fancier, Mr. John Ferguson, of Glasgow, which took place at the Western Infirmary on February 22nd, writes Mr. P. Houston (Glasgow). I am sure the sympathy of a large circle of his friends in the Fancy will be extended to his widow and family in this their sad bereavement.

Mr. J. M'Lay (Kirkintilloch), also writes:—As a Plainhead exhibitor and judge, there was not a better known or more respected fancier than Mr. Ferguson. He was better known amongst his intimate acquaintances as "Honest John," a very fitting name, as I know he has dropped the acquaintance of some of the foremost exhibitors in the West of Scotland for what he considered shady acts, or unfancier-like actions. Leaving the sea some 18 years ago, and being a carpenter by trade, he was encouraged by the writer to try his hand at cage making, and was presented with a couple of Plainheads. As a cage maker he rapidly came to the front, winning medals, etc., at most of our principal exhibitions, where cage classes were given. Also as a breeder he rapidly came to the front, and was reckoned one of the hardest nuts to crack in the exhibition arena, his strain being in great demand throughout Scotland. As a judge, too, he stood in the front rank. Fearless to a fault, he treated friend and foe alike, and was greatly respected, as was shown by the handsome floral tributes that covered his remains, which were followed by a large number of fanciers to Queen Street Station, and thence to Clackmannan Cemetery, the following fanciers going the long journey: Messrs. Smeaton (Musselburgh), Smith (Edinburgh), Flower (Possil Park), M'Lay (Kirkintilloch). He was interred facing due East, in sight of the cottage where he first saw the light, 53 years ago, in the old-world village of Kincardine-on-Forth.

Mr. F. Taylor, secretary of the Glasgow and West of Scotland N.M.B. and F.B.C., also writes, expressing the sympathy of his fellow-members with Mr. Ferguson's wife and family.

Mr. H. W. NAYLOR (Bradford).

All members (especially the older ones) of the Yorkshire Union, writes "Straight 'Un," will be deeply sorry to hear of the death of Mr. H. W. Naylor, who, for many years, acted as secretary. He had attained the ripe age of 76. His end, unfortunately, was greatly hastened by an accident. It appears that Mr. Naylor had a nasty fall in the early part of January, and fractured his thigh, and the effects of this did much to cause the general breakdown that ended in death. The novices of to-day little know what hard work Mr. H. W. Naylor had to get his schemes going for their advancement. To him, indeed, must be credited much of the success that the Yorkshire bird has attained. As a worker, conscientious and strictly to rule, he would be hard to beat. No matter on what subject he was tackled, he always worked to the rules of the club he had at heart.

It is with great regret, writes Mr. J. W. Dunnett, secretary of the Cardiff C.B.S., that I have to record the death of our old friend and true fancier, Mr. A. Fryer, who passed away on February 22nd, after a very long illness. All members will deeply deplore this sad news, I am sure; also other Yorkshire fanciers will join me in sympathy with the widow and family. I have also to record the death of Mr. Dallimore's daughter, and of Mr. Sampson's (late secretary) brother-in-law, who has suffered greatly.

BY A HOST OF DELIGHTED READERS.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL FOR 1911.

The most marvellous Handbook ever issued to the Bird World for the popular price of SIXPENCE.

REMEMBER: Last year the whole large edition was sold clean out in less than a month. Many would-be readers suffered disappointment. The 1911 Annual is also selling like hot cakes. It cannot be reprinted. Be wise: order at once.

Many of the articles included therein are by themselves worth the price asked for the complete work, and amongst those that stand out in this Year-Book are:—

HOW TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL BIRD BREEDER.
By Claude St. John.—This article represents the author at his best. The subject matter leads the would-be aspirant step by step from the rock-bed of his hobby to the very zenith of success. No bird breeder can afford to miss this highly instructive contribution, written as it is by such a popular and true-hearted fancier as Mr. Claude St. John. Read it before embarking on the business of the 1911 breeding season, and it will both help you to cut down your expenses to the minimum (by avoiding waste) and to breed young birds with greater ease and certainty.

BRITISH BIRD-KEEPING FOR THE WORKING MAN.
By W. J. Pitcher.—The experiences of a Yorkshire working man. The author shows in a most interesting way that it is not always the one with the big aviaries that derives the most pleasure, but often the working-man, whose only hobby after a day's work is his birds. He advises the various kinds of birds that lend themselves to the requirements of the working-man hobbyist, and how they should be fed and cared for.

By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his sytem of feeding, management, etc.

BUILDING AND FITTING AN OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.
By Henry Meeds.—Advising the cheapest and best methods to adopt in building and fitting up an outdoor bird-room or aviary. Giving full dimensions for same, and how the internal fittings should be put into place to the best advantage. The article is accompanied by a photograph of an ideal type of out-door bird-room, which enables the reader to more easily grasp the subject matter of the article.

THE TREATMENT OF, AND MEDICINES FOR, AILING CAGE BIRDS.
A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels—telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING.
By T. F. Morgan.—Emphasises the point that even "cheap" canaries can be, and are, made to pay. The article explains in detail how a cheap breeding-cage can be made and fitted out, how the canaries should be fed and managed, and closes with a few "Don'ts" that are very timely hints.

FAMILIAR FOREIGN SEED EATERS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.
By H. Norman.—The author gives it as his opinion that wild bird life flourishes in our fields and woods as it does in no other European country.

SOME DISEASES OF BIRDS, AND HOW TO RECOGNISE AND TREAT THEM.
By G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S.—An article from the able pen of Mr. Yates which is of permanent value for reference purposes. It describes in concise, and so far as possible, unconventional terms, the causes, symptoms, and diagnosis of the commoner departures from health affecting the inmates of our cages and aviaries, together with appropriate medicinal treatment. It is a real book in itself and well worthy of the price paid for the whole "Annual."

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY MANAGE A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.
By W. A. Dickins.—This article should be read by the secretaries, officials, and members of all cage bird societies, dealing out to them, as it does, many helpful hints on the successful management of a society.

The Most Reliable Authority on Bird Culture.

In addition there are numerous art and other illustrations of the peerage of 1910 in the Bird World. A lovely Coloured Plate of the sensation of the season, the Dartford Warbler, claimed at the Palace for 12 Guineas. Calendar, Postal, and other information, Standards and Descriptions, Lists of Judges of Cage Birds and their addresses, Officials, Cage Bird Societies, etc.

Price 6d. on order from all Newsagents; or 8d. post free.

☞ Secretaries of Societies, Bird Dealers, and others engaged in communication with Birdkeepers, should take up an Agency for retailing our Publications. WRITE FOR DETAILS.

Early Starlings.

On Monday, February 20, in passing along Hampstead Lane (writes Mr. W. J. Roffey to the "Daily Chronicle"), I was attracted by an unusual chattering from the large tree at the corner of Bishopswood Road. After a few seconds there came from out the fork of the tree four young starlings, sufficiently advanced in age to fly to the adjacent bough, and, after a rest, to a neighbouring tree. Is not this exceptionally early, even for starlings?

Norwich Plainhead Club.

I have sent a list of members of the Norwich Plainhead Club, and a voting paper for the election of officers for 1911, to every member, so that any member not receiving one should inform me at once. I should be glad if each and every member would vote. As stated on the form, I am now booking advertisements for the year book, and should be pleased to hear from anyone desiring such an advertisement.—Jno. Hopkins, Hon. Sec.

Midland Counties Yorks. C.C.

Please allow us to call the attention of Yorkshire Canary fanciers in the Midlands to the above club, which fills a long-felt want, though, notwithstanding this, it does not receive the support it should do. Membership is open to fanciers residing in the counties of Worcester, Warwick, Stafford, Northampton, Leicester, Nottingham, Derby, Huntingdon, Bedford, Salop, Radnor, Hereford, Rutland, and South Cheshire. We shall be very pleased to hear from fanciers wishing to join; subscription, 2s. 6d. per annum, and 1s. nomination fee.—Beck and Andrews (School House, Rookery Road, Handsworth, Staffs).

Twitterings.

Mr. Alex. Donnelly, the Lizard fancier, has joined the Walkden and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Howard, the secretary.

I am compelled to sell most of my stock, including several good winning specimens, writes Mr. G. Edwards (Leominster).

We are holding our Pair Show on March 11th, writes Mr. J. H. Elwell, Hon. Sec. of the Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S.

Skipton C.B.S. report in the Goldfinch class should read Mr. Pickles 1 and 2, and not Nicholson, as reported.—R. Roberts, Sec.

I have received my CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and I must say that it improves with each publication.—T. H. Tiffen (Ormskirk).

All special prizes won by members of the Border Fancy Canary Club have now been sent out, writes Mr. M. Jamieson, the hon. secretary.

The date of our annual show has been fixed for 22nd November, write Messrs. Urquhart and Sutherland, joint secretaries of the Inverness O.A.

Our annual contest will be held on December 8th and 9th; will secretaries please note? writes Mr. J. Netherwood, secretary of the Wakefield Roller C.C.

Mr. J. Jones, (17, Cranburne Street, Brighton) would be glad to hear where he can buy palm nuts for parrots, if some reader can give him an address.

Allow me to thank you for CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, I received last week. It is a very good book, with plenty of valuable information.—E. Folkard (York).

Kindly note that I have removed from Castle street, to 4, Ash Grove, Gargrave Road, Skipton, writes Mr. R. Roberts, hon. secretary of the Skipton and Dis. C.B.S.

Kindly note that I have removed from Dargai, Hatherley Road, to 21, Hatfield Road, Gloucester, writes Mr. J. R. Houghton. Will show secretaries and others kindly note?

Kindly note my change of address from Westwood Road to 81, Ena Avenue, Snenton Dale, Nottingham, writes Mr. J. Bunn, secretary of the Nottingham and District Permanent O.S.

Kindly note that I have been appointed secretary (pro tem.) to the Littleborough C.B.S., and that all communications should be sent to me, writes Mr. J. R. Mayers, 7, New Road, Littleborough.

I must thank you very much for the drawing of my yellow Norwich Plainhead hen in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, this week, writes Mr. Arthur Wake (Middlesbrough). She has won a great many first prizes, etc.

I consider the coloured plate, "Gems of the Finch Family," the best that has ever appeared in CAGE BIRDS, and I intend to have mine framed. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it deserves.—William P. Bell (Edwinstowe).

I was so pleased to see the picture of my Nightingale in CAGE BIRDS, and think it is a great honour for the bird, which was shown for the first time at the Crystal Palace, writes the Hon. Mrs. Bourke (Portman Square, W.)

Mr. P. Drinkwater having resigned the secretaryship of the Altrincham C.B.S., all communications for the society should, in future, be addressed to me as secretary, writes Mr. C. C. Blackshaw, 39, Elm Road, Hale, Altrincham.

A splendid price list of special Coronation medals and souvenirs (reproduced in colours) has been issued by Messrs. Fattorini and Sons, Ltd. (Kirkgate, Bradford), and we anticipate that this famous firm will experience a great demand for the very beautiful goods they have prepared.

Messrs. J. H. Roe and J. Bailey have been elected to judge Leeds Open Show on October 14th, writes Mr. W. A. Wilson, the hon. secretary. We are holding pair show on March 4th, 6 classes, 5 good specials; judges, Messrs. C. E. Hall (Yorkshires) and J. Chambers (Norwich and British).

I have taken your paper, CAGE BIRDS, from the first issue, and have found it very useful and instructive; and I have always had the best of results through the medium of your advertisement columns. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—Harry Lohr (Carmarthen).

Mr. J. Walsh has resigned the secretaryship of Blackburn Society, through pressure of business, and I have been elected in his stead, with Mr. Proctor assistant secretary. All communications in future to be addressed to me, writes Mr. J. Cook, 6, Charlotte Street, Blackburn.

Just as we are going to press, we are informed by Messrs. De Von and Co. (the noted importers, of 114, Bethnal Green Road, London, E.), that their huge consignment of Gouldian Finches, Parrots, and other Australian birds (including some very rare species), has reached England, per ss. "Miltiades," and will be in London this week-end. There should be a fine sight awaiting visitors at the Bethnal Green Road establishment.

Mr. Jeffreys, one of our members, has a nest of five young Norwich, and they are three weeks old and all doing well, both parents being 1910 birds, writes Mr. B. Tidy, hon. secretary of the newly-formed Sittingbourne and District C.B.S.

Mr. R. B. Gibb, secretary of the Yorkshire C.C., of Scotland, writes:—In the report of our annual general meeting, which appeared in your last issue, I inadvertently included the name of Mr. Webster as having won one of the club's small rosebowls. This is incorrect, as the winner was Dr. Syson.

The Scottish National C.B.S. begs to thank Mr. Brunskill for the great care and trouble he has taken in arranging the various excursions from over the Border for our show, also the guidance for visitors when in Edinburgh. We trust he will accept this, our sincere thanks.—A. W. Watson, secretary.

Exhibitors to the recent Haverfordwest show who have not been paid their prize money, writes Mr. J. Lloyd Edwards, the hon. secretary, will have same shortly, as the committee are holding a drawing on a large scale at the end of March, after which they hope to be in a position to settle all accounts.

The members of the Ashton-under-Lyne and Dis. O.S. will be photographed on Sunday morning, March 5th, at Buckley Hall, writes Mr. J. R. Colville, the secretary. All members are very earnestly requested to meet at "Lee's Clock," Stamford Street, at 10.30 a.m. Remember, Harry is leaving us; all please turn up.

I should be glad, writes Mr. John Tyson (169, Sloan Street, London, S.W.), hon. secretary of the Crested Canary Club, to learn the present addresses of the following gentlemen, viz.:—Messrs. Norwood Bros., Sutton-in-Ashfield; and Mr. W. Glasscock, late of Norwich. Communications to their previous addresses have been returned.

£1,000 IN PRIZES!

in our next issue.

The Sensation of all time in the Cage Bird Fancy.

For the benefit of fanciers who live in the immediate district, permit me to state that the Onward Hall, Ardwick (our meeting room), is in Ashton Old Road, opposite the Chancery Lane, writes Mr. J. Spencer, secretary of the Ardwick and Dis. C.B.S. Meetings are held every first and third Tuesday in each month. If anyone desirous of joining will write me at 193, Palmerston Street, Manchester, I shall be only too pleased to forward them all particulars.

Your printer has let me in for a fine thing, writes Mr. H. H. Towers (Crosshills). Last week I advertised my winning clear yellow (a drawing of it appears in your excellent ANNUAL), and I placed the price at £7 (which I think is reasonable enough for a bird like this), but the price was printed as £1. The letters are rolling in, and I rather fancy I am in for a lively time! I shall only be able to explain to those who enclose a stamp, so I must ask you to make a note of it. (We have to express our regret at the mistake.—Ed.)

The February issue of "Bird Notes" is specially interesting as containing a description and a report by the Editor, Mr. Wesley T. Page, of the foreign bird section of the recent Crystal Palace show. It contains also no fewer than eight full-page illustrations on art paper, three of them being from originals by Mr. H. Goodchild. The contributors include Mr. H. Willford ("My Waders' Aviaries"), Mr. W. Shore Baily ("My First Season"), Mr. H. D. Astley, M.A. ("Bourkes Parrakeets"), Mrs. A. Mahon ("Breeding White-eared and Red-whiskered Bulbuls, Shama, and Pekin Robin").

I have been appointed secretary of the Stamford and Dist. F.A., and all communications should, in future, be addressed to me at 7, New Street, Stamford, writes Mr. A. Harrison. Owing to pressure of business our late secretary (Mr. A. W. Ludlow) was compelled to resign his office, but is remaining with us as chairman and treasurer. We are badly in need of increased membership, and I shall be glad to receive names of any fancier in the district willing to join our society. The subscription is 2s. 6d. per annum, and we have decided to accept any person under the age of 18 at half rate, viz., 1s. 3d. per annum.

We have altered our name to the Dinnington and District Cage Bird Society, as we thought the poultry section would not be a success, and we now have our headquarters in the Middleton Institute, Dinnington. All our members are readers of CAGE BIRDS, and will not have any other. We are much interested in the Cage Birds League, especially as all birds in this district are protected the year round. At our annual meeting we had a very good washing exhibition by Mr. C. W. Marshall, of Sheffield, very instructive to all. Election of officers:—Mr. C. Marshall, chairman; Mr. W. Flint, treasurer; committee, all members.—Geo. Lunter, secretary, Laughton Road, Dinnington, Yorks.

Convicted by a Parrot.

A man who was charged at Berlin on February 24th, with stealing a Parrot, stated (says the "Daily Express," that the bird had been his for ten years. The Parrot convicted him by announcing the name of the man from whom it had been stolen.

In Asia Minor.

Mr. John Frostick, the well-known British and Foreign bird expert, of Balham, recently showed us a letter he had received from Smyrna, in far-away Asia Minor, which evidences, he says, the world-wide circulation of CAGE BIRDS. It contains an order for Mr. Frostick's insectile food, etc. Here is an extract: "Your excellent little book, 'Meating-off and Feeding Softbills,' has found its way even to this part of the world, and I can assure you that I have found the hints therein of much practical use. The difficulties of keeping Softbills over here are great, ants' eggs, etc., being unheard-of, quite unobtainable. For years I have been obliged to get my small requirements from England. . . . G. Mitsiargs."

Pairing to Produce Exhibition Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries.

By
J. C. BARNES
(Sheffield).

One of our leading present-day judges and breeders gives readers of CAGE BIRDS the benefit of his long experience in the production of winning Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries.

In the course of this article, I shall endeavour to place before my readers as clearly as possible the methods I follow in pairing my birds to produce exhibition Norwich Plainhead and Yorkshire Canaries. Allow me to put before you at the commencement a motto which my old schoolmaster used to keep repeating to his lads: viz., "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

The Norwich Plainhead.

Taking the Norwich Plainheads first, the four great essentials are: Type, quality, colour, and as much substance as possible. What I like to observe in a Norwich is a good, bold, round head, possessing a wide entrance that rises nicely from a short beak, a clear round eye (not at all browed), a short thick neck, a broad expanding chest, as deep as possible, a nice straight back (not "roached" at all), short wings and tail, legs well set back, and not at all stilty, and the bird clear cut away about thighs and vent, jaunty in carriage (not sluggish), and possessing soft silky texture of feather, close and compact, with colour of good depth and brightness (not bricky), also with rich undercolour. The unfortunate part about things is that the majority of birds fall short of the above merits; still, the description is such as one should endeavour to breed up to, or as near to as possible.

The Right Stuff.

To produce up-to-date specimens, you must make sure that you are commencing with right stuff as stock birds. If the blood is right, results will be right; if the blood is bad, results will be far from satisfactory. It is better to start with one good pair, than with a dozen inferior pairs.

I like the cocks to have substance in them, with as much colour as possible. Size and colour are, as a general rule, obtained from the male side. In the hens I must have type and quality of feather. Good hens point to good breeding. Without such you stand but a remote chance of producing "classy" progeny. I much prefer a medium sized damsel to a large hen for show bird production, for as a rule the former are better feeders, and not so lazy as their larger sisters, and, therefore, see to the wants of their progeny better during the breeding time. I always contend (and no doubt if the question were put to any old practical breeder the answer would be the same) that a young bird well fed during the first few days of its existence has been greatly helped towards making up into a good specimen. I can conscientiously say that my best results have been obtained when the union has been that of a large cock bird and a medium-sized hen.

Many times have I been asked what I thought about pairing two medium-sized birds together. The answer has been "not much." My reason is that no matter what variety, the majority of the young will be poorer in substance than the parent birds. All old breeders know this to be a proved fact; and they endeavour to off-set this by having extra substance on the cock side.

Of course, I don't wish it to be understood that there are no odd cases where the progeny excel in substance over their parents, because such cases crop up at times. There is an old saying that "Like produces like." That may be so to a certain extent, but should you pair together a couple of show birds and expect to rear from them almost all show birds, your expectations will be rudely shaken. The offspring in nearly every instance will be smallor, and not up to present-day requirements. The best show birds are produced from the best stock birds, without doubt.

The Good Breeder.

A good breeder is one who loves a bird, and is constantly using what brains he has to improve whatever breed he cultivates. A fancier, to be successful, must study his stock, get to know by careful observation the good points and the bad points, the likes and the dislikes of his pets, and act accordingly. For hours have I sat quietly in my bird rooms, and watched keenly the habits of my stock, and by so doing I have been able in most instances to satisfy their whims and so forth; and I have been a gainer by this method.

Again, a good breeder breeds two ways. One is that he is always endeavouring to produce good stock stuff, and the other that he is always keeping his eye upon producing specimens for the show bench.

To produce suitable stock birds, he has in view substance. The method I have followed out, with excellent results, is as follows:—Supposing your birds are somewhat inclined to be on the small side; choose from your stock a few of the best feathered buffs (both cocks and hens). The sort of buffs necessary for the purpose are those that are "waxy" in feather, of rich colour, and carrying as little frosting or mealing as possible. Pair up buff cock to buff hen. But be sure and counteract their failings. For instance, should the male bird be good in head and neck, and lacking in body properties, see that the hen possesses a good, deep chest etc.

By pairing up birds in this way, you will obtain progeny of good frame and bone. You may also have some of the young ones somewhat free in feather; but don't mind that, so long as they are silky in feather, as you will be able to rectify it afterwards, in later breeding.

Double-buffing also tends to shorten the wings and tail, and provides good broad heads and short, thick necks. Many a tip-top specimen has been bred by this procedure. At the same time, I don't wish it to be understood that I advise anyone to overdo the "buff-to-buff method"—only on occasions when more size is required in your birds.

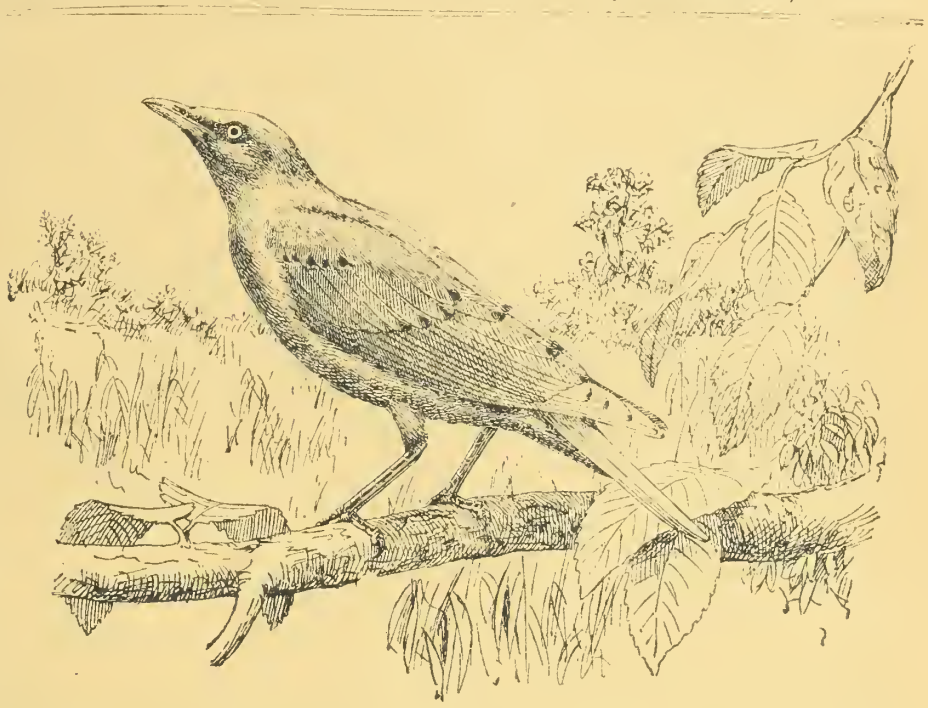
Utilising Double Buffs.

Now, these double-buff birds, to answer your purpose satisfactorily, must be paired up to the very smoothest and best coloured yellows that have been bred in the orthodox manner, viz., by the mating of yellow to buff. At times, maybe, you will have to double-yellow, but I should only advise you to do this when you are hampered with too much superfluous feather in your stock. Double-yellowing reduces quantity of feather, but has a tendency to produce open or waxy feather, which is not good. So only double-yellow for the purpose I have just mentioned, viz., for toning down birds too free in feather. Double-yellows can often be paired up to the double-buffs with good results.

Don't on any account use the crest-bred for lifting your stock up in size. Many a fancier has utterly spoiled and ruined his stock by experimenting with such a bird. Crest-breds throw a tremendous lot of feather, spoil the outline of a Norwich Plainhead, and ruin the colour. Some fanciers think that to use a crest-bred is by far the quickest way to obtain frame. Yes, it is a quick way to obtain size, but look at the drawbacks you get—abundance of feather, coarse, browed heads, loose feather carriage behind, and colour killed altogether. These great blemishes will take a lot of eradicating. It is better by far to move slowly in the matter of size production, and gradually attain success, than try to be a rapid worker with the Crest-bred, and reap disaster. Double-buffing has answered well for me whenever I have required help as regards substance, and I can with every confidence recommend such breeding to obtain satisfactory results as regards size.

Concerning Green Blood.

Green blood, I have not the least hesitation in saying, as I have proved it over and over again, is the "fountain head" of colour production. You must have colour, by all means, in the Norwich, although on many occasions I have been convinced that colour has been given far too many points, and has wrongly overruled type and quality. Colour is a very great essential, that is admitted; still, it must be accompanied by type and quality for a bird to be a typical show specimen. A bird that is known in the Fancy as one "full of fire," or "a blaze of colour," but which lacks type and quality, is really an eye-sore to me. I would much prefer to see a cobby, thick-set, bird, well feathered, even though behind somewhat in colour, than a bird "red hot" in colour and of bad shape. The former I should always lean to on all occasions, either on the show bench or in the breeding cage.



Nevertheless, keep your eye on colour, and endeavour to produce good shape and quality at the same time; for should there be two birds of equal merit, with the exception of colour, the one possessing the best colour would assuredly be given the preference. And so it should, as it naturally possesses an extra point of merit.

A breeder who produces his own winners could not possibly (not for any length of time, anyhow) do without variegated birds, or green blood, which are practically the same thing. You only need to observe for yourself at any show, or in any good breeder's room, which birds possess the greatest depth of colour, and you will invariably find that those birds are more or less marked. At times you may run up against a clear bird that possesses an abundance of colour, but should it be possible for you to get to know how that bird was bred, in the majority of cases it will turn out to have been bred either "off" or "closely to" variegation. Therefore, green blood is "inside," though absent (so far as markings go) on the surface. In recent years (on five occasions) I have been able to add to my collection of trophies three silver cups and two medals for hottest fed birds in the show, and on every occasion my representatives have been marked or variegated specimens. Take my "tip," and use green blood judiciously.

What I mean by judiciously is this: Don't overdo the thing. Don't pair up variegation to variegation, and expect clear and ticked progeny. If you do, the youngsters will be mostly heavy greens. Use marked or variegated cocks to clear hens. By so doing you will get deeper colour. If you should at any time find out that you are producing more dark stuff than you require, use the variegation on the hen side, as the hens breed out the markings far quicker than do the cocks.

To acquire high quality of feather is of very great importance, and should always be a study with breeders. Selecting your best feathered birds year by year, and judiciously pairing these together, is the surest way to fix up this great feature. By quality of feather I don't mean that all birds must be very short feathored ones. Still, I much prefer a good quality short-feathered specimen to a good quality long-feathered bird, for the simple reason that the short-feathered ones are not so apt to appear untidy, especially around the thighs, if flustered at all by being moved from one place to another, which is often necessary when specimens are at a show. Many of the winning birds of to-day, especially the buffs, are birds that possess a fair amount of feather, but carry it rightly, tight and compact.

THE PAIRING AND BREEDING OF BORDER FANCIES.

Lecture before the Ashington and District C.B.S. by Mr. J. Graham.

At a meeting held Jan. 28th, at Mr. Rowley's, Station Road, Mr. Jas. Miles presided over a good attendance. Decided, not to alter present club radius. Two new members were proposed and accepted. After the usual business Mr. Jos. Graham (Newbiggen) was called upon to read his paper on the Border Fancy, of which the following is a synopsis:—

You have asked me to give you a few hints on Border Fancy Canary breeding. Well, I get a good pair of birds from a reliable breeder. The first thing is to see they have good round heads, nice free necks, good breasts, and wings, and nice pipe tails, with good quality as well.

When I first started, about six years ago, I got a pair from a reliable breeder. From this pair I bred several. One clear buff from this pair was second at Morpeth, and was fairly successful at other shows, and in the same nest I had a yellow wing-marked hen, which was first at Morpeth and did well as a stock hen. Also I had an even marked, which proved another good stock bird, and another clear buff hen, from which I bred my Cinnamons. I got a variegated yellow cock from the same breeder to pair to the clear buff hen. They bred me a three-pointed Cinnamon hen, which won for me six firsts, also a Cinnamon variegated hen, which did very well for me. Then I parted with her to Mr. Whittaker, of North Shields. I bred an even yellow hen, also, from this pair, which bred me last season a clear buff cock that took firsts at Morpeth, Ashington, Gateshead, Carlisle, Haltwhistle, and fourth at Alnwick.

The next pair I will mention is the clear buff cock, for which I bought a hen from the same breeder. From this pair I bred the hen that I have been showing in the pair classes so successfully. I have shown her four times, and I split the pair and showed them in separate classes at Haltwhistle, where they stood first in their respective classes. I have shown them under Messrs. Robson, J. Patterson, T. Dixon, and A. Brown.

Next I draw your attention to flat heads and bad wing carriage. If you breed from birds having bad heads, you will always find them failures; and the same applies with regard to birds with bad wings.

Concerning marked breeding, I generally pair a clear buff cock and a yellow marked hen together. Both should be from a marked breed. Or you can pair a yellow cock to a buff hen. Also I generally put two lightly marked birds together, that is, when I get birds lightly marked, such as one feather in each wing, and ticked eyes. I have bred seven even this last season, breeding several very lightly marked, such as a tick on each eye, and one marked feather in one wing and two in the other.

You must stage your birds in the pink of condition, as they must be very clean. It is useless putting them on the show bench in a dirty condition.

My general feed is plain, best Spanish Canary seed, and a little German rape once a week, also a little hemp once a week. A bit of apple between the wires, or a bit of carrot answers the purpose of green food. In the breeding season I feed on bread dried in the oven and crushed down; and eggs and a little sugar damped down with new milk. I generally put a little maw seed in it, and see that the birds don't waste any. I give them, in a separate vessel for green food, whole hemp to feed young with. I give young dandelion leaves the first round, and chickweed after, when it is nice and seedy.

The lecturer then offered to answer any questions to the best of his ability, which he did with every satisfaction.

Some Questions and Answers.

Do you get Green and Cinnamon marked young from the same parents?—Yes; as a rule I get from a Green marked cock and a Cinnamon hen, green-marked cocks and Cinnamon hens.

Do you think it an advantage to use Cinnamon blood?—Yes; I get better colour, and certainly better quality through using Cinnamon blood (here the lecturer stated that he was this year putting up three pairs of pure self Cinnamon Borders).

How do you make egg-food?—A very good egg food I have been in the habit of using is made as follows: take 3 eggs, a bit of salt, a bit of lard, and some flour; put into a slow oven, and when dry crush up as much as required at a time and moisten with new milk.

Do you not think that double yellowing breeds thin necks?—Not if you know how they are bred. I sometimes pair back to double-buff. If you get a buff from double yellows, this is the mainstay of your stock in any breed.

Do you not think there is a lot of chance or luck attached to even marked breeding?—Not if you know your strain. From one pair I had a buff cock and Cinnamon marked hen. I had three even marks in each nest they had.

What is your experience as regards green food?—I use young dandelion shoots the first round and nice seedy chickweed after that. As regards the former, I find that it is too nourishing, as it brings on the hens for their next nest too soon; but I think it a good thing for hens that are backward.

What is the nearest you go in inbreeding?—Cousins to cousins.

What, in your opinion, is the best time to pair?—About the 20th of March if the birds are in trim. I find that a bad feeder the first year generally turns up to be a good feeder the next year.

Last season Mr. Graham put up 14 pairs, lost 3 hens and about 60 young first round through the bad weather; but he bred 96 young from the remainder. Mr. Jos. Miles moved a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer and hoped it would not be the last time he would entertain us.—Fred Barron, Sec.

The Dartford Warbler; The Rarest Exhibit of the Past Show Season. . . .

. By . JOHN FROSTICK (Balham.)

A fine portrait in colours of this "sensation of the show season" is given in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL for 1911 [post free 8d.; or 6d. through any newsagent].

'Tis a strange world we live in, my friends: the unexpected frequently happens. A couple of years ago I had never seen a living example of the subject of this article—the Dartford Warbler (Melizophilus dartfordiensis)—though I had been a keen field naturalist and a student of bird life for thirty years and more. I was not alone in this respect, for how few of us have ever had the privilege of seeing this very rare species in its native haunts; of finding its nests of eggs or young, and studying its amazing antics on the tips of its favourite furze bushes, where, on quivering wing it shoots up into the air after some passing insect and with lightning rapidity returns to its perch, cocks its tail bolt upright with a sidelong jerk, erects the feathers of its pretty little head in the form of a crest, utters a few bars of sweet song, and darts off after another member of its gang as quickly as if shot from a gun, giving vent to its characteristic scolding note "cha-cha-cha'—chasing one another the live-long day—the emblem of action in their every movement?

In fancy I am again out on the moorlands that are covered with the purple heather, and dotted here and there with the golden blooms of the furze. It is a lovely spring morning and Nature is at her best; every living thing seems bent on obeying the Biblical injunction to increase and multiply; and the busiest of that busy throng is the Dartford Warbler.

As we lay on the mossy bank the better to observe their doings, these gems fly within a yard of us, hovering over the bushes more like butterflies than birds—their every action full of grace and nimbleness.

Singularly Appropriate.

A friend on seeing my caged specimens exclaimed "They are well named Dart-ford, because they do dart, and no mistake."

Their extraordinary vivacity has, of course, nothing to do with their name which was given to them by Latham in 1775 when they were first discovered by him at Bexley Heath, near Dartford, in Kent

To get back to the beginning of my story. I told the members of the London Cage Bird Association, in a lecture on the feeding of insectivorous birds, that I had kept every species of British cage birds proper, and many other kinds not recognised as such, with the single exception of the Dartford Warbler, of which I had never seen a living specimen (two-and-a-half years ago), and which was practically extinct in these islands Needless to say, it had never been exhibited at any bird show, while the skin of a dead bird would bring a long price from a collector, but a living bird would be worth its weight in gold many times over—its fortunate possessor would reap a golden harvest of first and special prizes. When I told them these things, little did I think then that I was so near to reaching the height of my ambition, and that good fortune had in store for me such a pleasant surprise, or that my words were so soon to be put to the test and be proved true in every particular.

Bird fanciers, aviculturists, or bird lovers—call them what you like—have one thing in common with collectors or connoisseurs of old china, antique furniture, stamps, coins, or curiosities. We all belong to the same genus: we all strive after that which is most difficult to get, and in our efforts to excel we prize most highly that which is the most rare.

Most Rare of All.

The most rare of all British cage birds is undoubtedly the Dartford Warbler, which, unlike many rare birds, is beautiful as well, and its manners are as attractive, whilst its song is an additional charm that leaves little to be desired.

After years of fruitless search it has at last fallen to my lot to have the proud distinction of being the first person to exhibit and introduce to the British avicultural world this delightful little atom of bird life. The first sensation of being possessed of such a unique acquisition is one of intense excitement that can only be compared to the feeling of the explorer when he has accomplished the object of his life-long search, for since the days of Montague there is no authentic instance of any other Englishman having kept and moulted the Dartford Warbler.

"The sensation of the season," as it has been named by CAGE BIRDS, finished the round of the shows (ending with the Great National at the Crystal Palace) by winning the first and three special prizes, including the Championship Diploma and silver medal for the best British bird in the show, at the Palace, where it was claimed at the catalogue price of £12 10s. (which is probably a record price for a small insectivorous bird) by Mr. Theodore Martin, of Huddersfield. The "Daily Mail" commenting on the event, says: "The 3,500 birds in the show comprise 510 British examples, among which are many which even to lovers of birds are known only by name. The king of this section is undoubtedly the rare Dartford Warbler, belonging to Mr. J. Frostick—the first specimen ever exhibited in this country. A charming little fellow in plumage of soft shades of swede and brown, with a long slender tail delicately poised, and fluttering about his cage with a lively grace. He had many admirers."

At five other London shows the bird has won as many firsts, and every special prize open to it.

Its Wild Life.

According to Howard Saunders, the Dartford Warbler is known to breed in nearly all the Southern counties from Cornwall to Kent inclusive, especially in Hampshire, Surrey, and Sussex; sparingly in the valley of the Thames, and perhaps in some of the Midland counties; while it has been observed in Cambridgeshire, and undoubtedly nests in Suffolk and Norfolk." With this long list before us, it seems strange that we should have heard so little about it, but the fact is that the bird is now only found in a few out-of-the-way favourite resorts, though in years gone by it nested so near London as Blackheath, Tooting, and on the Wimbledon Commons: but the jerry builder has driven it further afield, and, to-day, its numbers are greatly diminished, not by the hands of the bird-catcher and the egg-collector, but by a far more deadly enemy—the extensive common fires which devastate yearly great tracks of country and destroy numbers of these birds. Another reason may be the scarcity of hens, as the great majority of specimens I have seen have been cocks—even the South Kensington Museum's fine collection of "skins" consists mostly of those of cocks.

A friend of mine, a life-long observer of bird life, and the greatest authority on Dartford Warblers living—to whom I am greatly indebted for what little I know of them—tells me they are one of the earliest birds to pair up, and that they nest early in April, and again about the end of June or the early part of July—two nests a year: he has found nests of young as late as the 21st August. The nests I have seen were placed in the heather about a foot from the ground, and I was the first one to place this fact on record. All other writers state that the nest in England is built in the middle of a furze bush. Howard Saunders says: "The nest in this country is placed among the branches of the thickest furze; but on the Continent, especially in the South, broom and heather are selected."

The nest is composed of the long stalks of goose grass, and these are entwined with the young and tender branches of the furze; the outside is ornamented with what at first sight look like little balls of wool, but on examination I discovered they were the silvery-coloured silken bags that spiders make for the reception of their eggs. The eggs are greenish-white, with olive or reddish-brown markings, and are very similar to those of the Whitethroat.

Yarrell says: "On the European Continent this bird does not go up so high as Germany or Holland; it is found in France, but is most plentiful in Provence, Spain, and Italy."

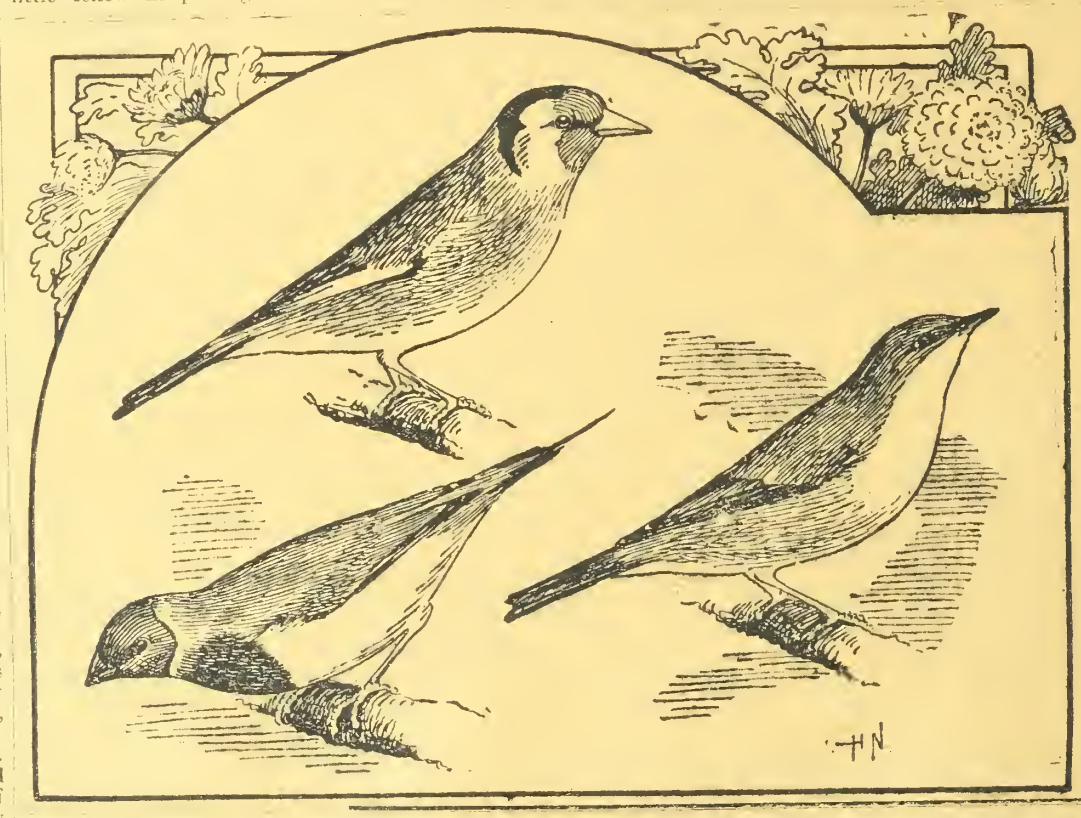
He describes the bird faithfully as follows: "The beak is slender and nearly black, particularly towards the point; the edges of the upper mandible, and the base of the lower mandible, reddish yellow; irides, reddish; head, cheeks, neck, back and upper tail coverts, greyish black; the wing coverts, wing and tail feathers, blackish brown, with rather lighter coloured edges; the chin, chestnut brown, with specks of dull white; throat, breast and sides, chestnut brown; belly, white; under-surface of the wings, under-tail coverts, and under-surface of the tail feathers, slate grey; the tail in shape cuneiform, the outer feather on each side being three-eighths of an inch shorter than those in the middle. Whole length rather more than five inches, the tail feathers alone being nearly half the whole length of the bird."

In a state of freedom the Dartford Warbler's food consists, for the most part, of insects—flies, spiders, grass-hoppers, moths, small beetles and caterpillars; but in autumn wild fruits are added. This knowledge, and a cognizance of the fact that the Dartford Warbler is a resident species, give us little difficulty in catering for its requirements in captivity. My birds have wintered in a cold bird-room with no extra attention than what I extend even to the hardiest species; but, in common with other birds, they love the sunshine, and on sunny mornings they splash into their tepid bath, and pour out their little song for all they are worth. The usual note, "pit-it-chou" has given them their French name Pitchou.

The Menu.

My birds are kept singly in comparatively large waggon-cages, plentifully supplied with conveniently placed thin perches, and are fed on my own specially prepared insectivorous birds' food, which is composed of a judicious blend of preserved insect and animal matter. This is mixed daily with sufficient grated raw carrot to make crumbly moist; then I generally add a tiny portion of hard-boiled egg (first pressed through a fine sieve). In addition, I give some sort of soft ripe fruit daily, and, in my opinion, this is the great secret of my success in keeping these birds always in the "pink" of condition. With me half their food consists of fruit, such as William pears, elderberries, split grapes, bananas, etc.

As dainty tit-bits, I supply, as I am able to procure without undue inconvenience, house flies, spiders, caterpillars, and the larvæ of the clothes' moth, the latter being readily propagated and much relished by the birds.



Mealworms (except when they have just cast their skins and are soft and white, when they can be given with advantage) are not suitable for any of the tiny Warblers; well-scoured gentles might be good, though I never use them myself. What I consider as the best possible live food is fresh ants' cocoons, which I supply during the summer months ad lib.

In Appearance Only.

The above looks, in print, like a formidable list, but in reality it is nothing out of the way for any keeper of insectivorous birds to provide. The more varied we can make the food of any bird, the more likely are we to succeed in keeping it, if we take Nature as our guide, and regulate the diet according to the different circumstances of freedom and captivity.

All these things are not necessarily given at one time; far from it: they are mentioned as they occur to me, and are to be given just when we are best able to get them. The Dartford Warbler is not by any means a delicate bird, but, on the contrary, quite a hardy species if treated intelligently.

Having accomplished my long-felt desire to keep and exhibit this delightful bird with the assurance that my name will be for ever associated with the most beautiful of our British Warblers, I am anxious to place at the disposal of my fellow fanciers what little information I possess, and if the foregoing article achieves its object, it will not have been written in vain.

Spring Bird Song.

The spring song of birds is one of love and defiance. All birds are either courting, or have wives and homes to defend, which they are quite ready to do even against much stronger adversaries.

Food for the Jay.

The Jay is one of the most general feeders we have, and there is very little that he will actually refuse. He is undoubtedly especially fond of birds' eggs, and young birds; also of insects of all kinds, nuts, seeds and even some portions of vegetable.

Tree and House Sparrows.

The Tree Sparrow, although uncommon when compared with the House Sparrow, so nearly resembles it in plumage and form, that it is oftentimes overlooked by those who have not had the opportunity of comparing the two together. The most striking differences are the smaller size, chestnut coloured head and patches of black on the cheeks. Although these birds breed with us in many localities, great numbers of them are migratory, and visit our shores from the Continent.

Wild Birds in London.

Mr. F. J. Stubbs, speaking just recently at the Working Men's College, St. Pancras, said that London offered great opportunities to the student of bird life. Lately he and a friend noticed a grey Wagtail calmly sleeping amidst the road of traffic in the Mile End-road, on a Saturday night. Many students had never seen a heronry, but in Richmond and Wanstead Parks there were two of the finest in the country. Bluetits were common in his own garden, and the Nightingale, whose song he considered inferior to that of the Thrush, he had frequently heard on Wimbledon Common. In Richmond Park and Epping Forest the Kingfisher was to be found.

Nest-Boxes and Pans: How to Make and Fix them.

By H. NORMAN ("Cage Birds" Artist-in-Chief).

Previous illustrated articles in this series have dealt with the making of breeding cages (single and double) and travelling cases.

In the hobby of Canary breeding it is the little matters that make the difference between success and failure. The haphazard breeder—who allows his birds to do anything and go on anyhow—will frequently do well for a time; but he who pays proper attention to all the small details of this delightful pastime will, in the end, be the man to have a good record of successful seasons. When we consider what an important part the incubating hen plays in the season's work we need not fear our friends calling us "faddy" if we go into the matter rather fully and carefully weigh up the different methods adopted both in the past and at the present time to assist her in her efforts to propagate her kind.

When I first commenced the breeding of Canaries and Mules, the only receptacle generally used by fanciers for the hen to build in was the wooden box, the measurements of which were somewhat about four inches square, with a depth of two inches. This box was constructed of wood, but after a time a perforated zinc bottom was used by some as an improvement. One advantage of these boxes is that no Canary refuses to build in them. Hens will frequently take to them when, for some reason or other, they object to the ordinary nest pans.

The fancier who has succeeded in making his own cages will have no difficulty in constructing one of these boxes. Fig. 1 gives an illustration of two kinds—the plain box and the box with one end larger than the other, having a hole near the top to enable you to hang the box on a nail anywhere in the cage.

The best way to make these boxes is to nail the sides together first; then cut out a perfectly square piece of wood for the bottom, and nail it on. If made in this way it will be exceedingly strong, will stand scrubbing in hot water, and will last for years.

The one great drawback to these boxes is that they are rather inclined to be infested with red mite, but if the joints are pasted up with a little fat, and plenty of insect powder put in the bottom, this pest will be kept within check.

There is another kind of nest box that is used by many for hanging on outside the cage at the opening for the end door. This was at one time largely used in the north when open wirework cages were in fashion for breeding purposes. This consists practically of a square box with a felt nest let into a wooden floor. The illustration (Fig. 2) shows it with a flat roof, but it can be made with a sloping roof, as shown by the dotted line at D. This style of nesting box has its uses, and is not simply an idea. For nervous hens that like seclusion it is invaluable, and where small cages are in use it does not curtail the space.

The interior should not be less than five inches square, with a height of six inches. The floor should be 6½in. in length, so that a small portion of it projects into the doorway of the cage, forming a kind of platform for the birds to alight on. A little fillet of wood (c) enables one to dispense with hooks, etc., for the purpose of keeping it in position. The platform is attached 2in. from the bottom so that the nest does not touch the floor when the box is taken off for inspection. The roof is wired over, so that the fancier can easily peep over the top to see how matters are progressing, without unduly upsetting the birds.

The platform nest (Fig. 3) is another method that has been in use for a number of years. It consists of a platform made of wood, about 7in. in width, running from the back to the front of the cage, and resting upon a fillet of wood (b) at the back, and wire crossbar at the front. A circular hole receives the felt nest or pan.

One advantage of this style of nesting arrangement is that young birds when dragged out of the nest do not, as a rule, come to much harm, and do not get chilled quite so quickly.

All these methods have, of late years, given way to the earthenware nest pans, as these are considered to be more sanitary than the old wooden nest boxes, and not so liable to be troubled with red mite as the platform arrangement. The nest pan is usually suspended at the back or side of the cage by means of a wire holder (Fig. 5G) and a screw or nail.

Now, in the placing of this nest pan there is a right and a wrong method. It is not sufficient simply to hang it up anywhere in the cage and trust to everything going on merrily. In the first place, the sitting hen likes shade; she very much objects to sitting in the strong light, as she plainly shows us by turning her back to it when we are not in the birdroom. We have only to consider the actions of wild birds to give us a correct idea of what is required. The sitting bird constructs her nest in some quiet shady nook surrounded by the natural foliage of the tree in which she is building. This gives her ample protection from the fierce sunlight and the cold wind, and completely shields her from the eyes of her enemies. Canaries have been bred for generations in captivity, but they have not quite lost all the wild instincts; therefore, we should first humour them in this matter and place the nest pan upon the shady side of the cage.

In the early stages it should be hung as shown in Fig. 4 (E); that is, just above the perch (AA). The reason for this is that the sitting hen will first hop on to the edge of the nest and then down to the perch. If when she rises, one of the chicks is nestled into the body feathers, it will drop back into the nest as she alights on the edge. If she went straight from the nest to the perch, she would take the young one with her and drop it on to the floor of the cage, when, unless it was found, it would soon die of cold and hunger.

When the young have their eyes open, the pair should be moved below the level of the perch (F); the hen will then frequently feed from the perch. The young of some breeds, such as Yorkshires, stretch a long way out of the nest when clamouring for food, and the hen cannot feed them properly from the edge.

Many fanciers fix the nest pan between the perches (Fig. 5). The only advantage of this is that it is opposite to the door, and is therefore easily taken down for inspection.

Fig 6 shows a method I have used for a great many years with success. It consists of a wire stand into which the nest pan is dropped. This is placed upon the floor of the cage (generally in one corner), and I have never had any difficulty in getting the birds to take to it. This method has many advantages. It is firm, clear of the floor and sides, red mites (if you have any) cannot reach it, and there is no need to remove it from the cage to inspect the contents, as being placed on the bottom of the cage it is easy for one to glance in while attending to the birds. I do not claim that this is superior to others, but as I have found it serviceable myself, I have continued to use it; and, after all, whatever system succeeds with us we should continue to use.

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS," re exchange light Mule for Yorkshire; I had so many offers I could not reply to all.—H. Wills (Wadebridge).

Through one advt. in "CAGE BIRDS" I have sold practically all my stock (between 20 and 30 birds); I received so many letters that am afraid I have not replied to all....I hope to be excused if I have overlooked anyone, because nearly all sent a stamp for reply.—F. Faulkner (Redruth).

THE BIRD CHARMER OF PARIS.

An interesting personality of the "Gay City" talks of his bird friends and his method of acquiring their confidence.

M. Henri Pol, the famous bird-charmer of Paris, has been decorated with a medal by the French Government. M. Pol is really quite one of the sights of the city. The guide points him out to visitors just as they do the Eiffel Tower and Notre Dame. The way he has made friends with the vagabond Sparrows and Pigeons of Paris is extraordinary.

Every morning he goes to the Tuilleries Gardens with his pockets full of bread and cake. The minute he arrives he is surrounded by an eager, chirping flock of Sparrows, and other small birds, all clamouring for crumbs. They perch on his hat, on his shoulders, on his arms. He has only to hold out his finger, and two or three of them will try to hop on it at once. They will even steal crumbs out of his pockets! He has given them all names, and each one flutters forward when it is called, and perches on M. Pol's hand.

"There is Philippe now," the bird-charmer will say; "I have not seen him for several days. Come here, Philippe, you little rascal! Where have you been all this time?"

And Philippe, a very plump, dark-brown Sparrow, with a sly look, will fly out of the little crowd of birds on the path, and perch on the man's finger. M. Pol will stroke him gently, talk to him, ask him all sorts of questions, and feed him with crumbs. He says that you can make friends with birds much more easily if you talk to them while you offer them food. Some of the birds have English names, and M. Pol speaks to them in English.

Several of the birds have become so tame that M. Pol has taught them little tricks. There is one called "Mlle. Clara, the danseuse," which will hop round on the gravel in a delightful quaint imitation of a ballet dancer. And quite a number of them perform what M. Pol calls his "ballet." He dances to and fro, and the birds hop along, trying to follow his movements in the most amusing way.

M. Pol started his friendship with the birds about thirty-five years ago, in the simplest way. He was then employed (says "Mother and Home") in the Central Post Office, in Paris, and used to walk through the Tuilleries Gardens on his way to work every morning. Occasionally he would take a few crumbs in his pocket, and throw them to the Sparrows hopping about on the paths. Presently he found that the birds got to know him, and waited for him every morning. Some of them used to actually follow him as far as his office. When he retired on a pension, about fifteen years ago, M. Pol made it his great hobby to feed these birds. Every morning, at about the same time, he would go to the gardens with his pockets full of crumbs, and sit there patiently, coaxing the birds to "come and be friends." At last the keepers got annoyed, and refused to let him come into the gardens and feed the birds. But M. Pol appealed to higher authorities, and the keepers were ordered not to molest him any more.

"During nesting-time," he says, "it is delightful. Instead of remaining in one place, I move about the gardens; for then, of course, my 'pensioners' are at their nests, scattered all over the place. I call out, and the bird that has heard its name flutters down from the tree and perches on my hand to take crumbs. The mother-birds, when they see me, come down from their nests to get crumbs for their little ones. A few days later, when the young ones are learning to fly, they bring them and 'introduce' them to me."

It is not an easy thing to make friends with birds to such an extent as this; and some people say that M. Pol must have some sort of hypnotic power over the Sparrows. But he says it is simply a question of kindness and patience—and crumbs.

Wild Bird-Life.

Early Nesting Birds.

The month of February has been quite exceptional as regards the weather. We look upon it as one of the most severe and wintry months of the year, but it has been particularly open and mild. A cold February keeps both vegetation and birds in check, and prevents the premature growth of the one, and the nesting of the other until the spring is actually with us. Some species are, of course, naturally early, and no matter what the climatic conditions are like, they are sure to start nesting operations about the same time, unless we have real wintry weather, and then they simply wait until it is over and then hurry up to make up for lost time. The Rooks commence their courting early in the year, and are now busy about the old nest repairing, patching and relining, and otherwise making good the damage caused by the winter's storms. This work goes on chiefly upon quiet, fine days, when the material is easily carried and manipulated. On fierce, gusty days when the nest sways roughly in the wind the birds almost forsake the trees or only visit them during the morning and evening.

Another early nester is the quiet little Hedge-Sparrow, who, just now, is looking his very best. The grey head and neck are more pronounced than ever, and the brown backs seems exceptionally bright, possibly because the black stripes are blacker than at any other time of the year. All the winter a pair of these dainty little birds have visited the writer's garden. He has handled them more than once, as they will persist in entering the outside bird-house in search of Canary seed whenever the door is left open for any length of time. This last week only one of the pair has been seen, and knowing how early they commence housekeeping, it is not at all improbable that the lady is busy incubating a clutch of bright blue eggs in some sheltered nook. The squeaky song of the cock bird has been heard all the winter. It is not a very tuneful or melodious trill, but very welcome during the dark days, when bird notes of any kind are scarce. Writing of bird music reminds one that the Song Thrushes are now performing in no half-hearted fashion; each morning they can be heard before daylight, and until well after sunset. The Skylark, too, is carolling gloriously; he also can be heard before the light is hardly visible in the east.

Feathers in a Tit's Nest.

Wild Swans at Norwich.

It is said that the Whooper Swan still visits the River Yare, within three or four miles of the City of Norwich.

The Goldfinch in Devon.

A visitor to the Crystal Palace Show says he was quite startled to see a whole flock of Goldfinches settle in his garden a few days ago. He has lived in his district (Devon) for many years, but has seen only an odd Goldfinch occasionally. He was enraptured with them, and described them as "feathered jewels."

The Marking of Canaries.

SIR,—I want to mark my Canaries, I don't like rings, I have often had to remove them owing to inflammation in the bird's foot. Sometime ago some of the suffragettes poured some liquid into a ballot-box—a fixed dye. I think that would meet my needs, but I can't remember the name of the fluid—it was black. This could be used in marking tails and wings with dots. Can any reader help me to get at the name of the liquid? It was given in the papers at the time.

A Roller Club for South Wales.

SIR,—At a meeting of Roller fanciers, held at the Cricketers' Hotel, Llanelly, on Saturday, February 18th, it was resolved to form a Roller Club in the town. Having seven members of the British Roller C.C. here, we thought it high time to thus further the interests of the Roller Fancy in South Wales. Being the first club to be formed in the principality, we hope all Roller fanciers will line up and give it their hearty support. It was decided to call it the South Wales Roller Canary Club. A meeting will be held at the above-named place on Saturday, March 4th, when all intending new members are heartily invited to attend.

The Feeding of Insectivorous Birds.

SIR,—I have read with great interest Mr. W. E. Teschemaker's articles on the Nightingale. I should have been pleased if he had given his method of feeding small Softbills in detail. For instance, he hints that the usual method adopted by the average keepers of delicate Softbills is far too expensive for the larger Softbills. How would he feed the latter? Or are we to take it that sponge cake and gentles are all that are necessary for the successful keeping of all Softbills? I should like to see the Softbills taken up more by novices. I have no doubt they would be if they had good advice in the first place from such a practical Softbill keeper as Mr. Teschemaker. The majority seem to keep something back in their method of feeding. I hope this may induce someone of these fanciers to supply the information.

A NOVICE.

The Recent Show Season in Ireland.

SIR,—He is surely "An Irish Straight 'Un" who gave us a review of the show season in Ireland in last week's CAGE BIRDS. Evidently he is a Yorkshire breeder, and a member of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, and deserves some credit for his many suggestions, which, I am sure, would benefit the Fancy. The above-mentioned society, I see by their financial report, have a balance on hand of £11 15s. 4d., which reflects great credit on the management. The Ulster O.A. (Belfast), I am sure, would pride themselves if their balance-sheet had shown as many shillings on the right side as this unapproachable society have pounds. Their shows are always a failure; one of the reasons for this is the local members are always at loggerheads with one another, and many of them will not exhibit their birds, through jealousy. They have no rule to prohibit members showing borrowed birds. Is it true that several members knew of borrowed birds being exhibited at their last show? It is alleged, too, by members of the Norwich, Crest, and Y.C.C. of Belfast that there were birds exhibited at their show which were not bred by the exhibitor, but were the property of another member of this society who was not exhibiting. It is also alleged that another member of this society exhibited borrowed birds at Sligo Show, and it is all the more regrettable to have to state that it is one of the officials of this society from whom it is alleged they were borrowed. Fanciers can only hope that these alleged happenings will be inquired into at their next meeting. It would be interesting to know why the membership is now confined to Ulster; surely it cannot be on account of the only member outside of Ulster winning the cup? Our correspondent refers to Bangor Show, but the officials have surely admitted they were in error by not taking up the challenge given them.

AN IRISH EXHIBITOR.

SIR,—In reading the letter in the last issue of CAGE BIRDS, signed "An Irish Straight 'Un," I was much surprised at some of the accusations he brought against two of the Belfast societies, viz., the O.A. and Norwich Crest and Yorkshire Canary. I cannot understand anyone asking advice, and giving advice, or any other information for the good of the Fancy under a nom de plume, but to make accusations that have no foundation I cannot see anything "straight" about. First, he says O.A. was not the success that the committee prophesied. I know of no such prophesy. "Straight 'Un" is confident it never will be a success; well, all I can say on that matter is that the O.A., during its existence, which runs over some years, has always kept out of debt, and with a balance at the bank. I think that speaks for itself, as far as the success goes. Then "Straight 'Un" goes on to mention the alleged practice of members showing borrowed birds, and says it is surprising the way the committee evade discussion on this most important subject. All I can say is that I have been connected with both societies, and only missed one meeting in seven years, and I know of no such evasion. I defy "Irish Straight 'Un" to give one instance where any discussion in either society on any subject was evaded. He hopes that some member "will have the courage of his convictions and demand an inquiry." It is a pity that "Irish Straight 'Un'" lacks the courage that he hopes to find in another. What some of the members think are not always "facts," and we know there is always "one fool in a fair." I say, to bring these accusations without a shadow of truth is not for the good of the Fancy, but to throw discredit on the two societies named. If "Straight 'Un" can give me one instance of anything being cloaked I can assure him I for one have the courage that he is looking for—but I could not hide my identity under a nom de plume for fear of one being asked a few questions. Oh, no; truth and daylight are what I like, and I hope in his next letter he will be able to give details so that the whole of the Fancy can judge the two societies on their merits, for I say the accusations have no truth in them, and I hope to see what proof "Irish Straight 'Un" can give to CAGE BIRDS readers at his earliest.

WALTER CONNELL.

(We cannot, of course, allow "Irish Straight Un" to make in our columns accusations, which may or may not be well-founded, but which, in any case, would lay both himself and ourselves open to an action for libel. Charges of this serious nature should be first investigated and decided by the officials of the society concerned. —EDITOR.)

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Northowram.

SIR,—A few fanciers of Northowram have decided to start a cage bird society. We have decided to hold a meeting at the Queen Victoria Inn, Northowram, on Friday, March 3rd, at 7.30. Will those fanciers wishing to join kindly attend? If unable to do so, if they will send their names to me we will be pleased to enrol them.

The Chaffinch-Greenfinch Hybrid.

SIR,—With reference to Mr. G. E. Weston's reply to "Perseverer," anent the Chaffinch-Greenfinch Hybrid, I would remind him of a correspondence I had with him some years ago regarding a Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid which I hatched out, but which, unfortunately, was a weakling, and did not survive. The Chaffinch laid all her eggs in a nest in a box attached to an ordinary cage. But she had a failing for new laid eggs, and I found she ate them before I had a chance of removing them. I then cut a round hole in the bottom of the nest, and placed a bag underneath; in this way I got a few eggs, but only the one proved fertile. The two birds mated just as Canaries do, and her cry was very similar. Having proved the possibility of the Chaffinch-Greenfinch Hybrid I would like to hear of someone's success.

W. JEFFREY.

To Cure a Bird that "Twirls."

SIR,—I think a good cure for a bird which I call "turns its head" (a common thing amongst some birds) is to get a piece of cage-wire the length of the perch you want. Then get a round piece of wood for the perch, and bore a hole right through the middle with a piece of wire a bit stouter than the cage wire; or get a long, straight clay pipe and break the stem off. Put the wire through the wood or pipe stem, put it in the cage as a perch. The stem or the wood should work round on the wire freely. When the bird gets on and turns his head back (twirls) he falls over into the bottom of the cage. It will cure a bird in about three days.

Canary Rearing on a Railway Journey.

SIR,—Your readers may be interested to hear of some strange happenings with a pair of Canaries and young ones. The particulars are as under: A young man called on me the other day and told me he had four young Canaries which he had brought with him—when they were only two days old—all the way from Glasgow—a journey of over three hundred miles by rail. He thought that surely they could not live to see the journey's end, but the hen sat close the whole way. When he got to Keith he opened the wrapping, and fed the hen, when she immediately went and fed the young. He had then to set out on foot for three miles through a drifting snow. When he reached his journey's end the young were all in the cage bottom. Not to be done, he warmed them and put them back in the nest, when the hen again took to them. He now tells me they are doing fine, and are, at the time of writing, two weeks old. Has any of your readers, I wonder, heard of such a case?

G. GRANT.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

The Early Birds.

SIR,—I have a Norwich Canary that hatched two young Canaries last Wednesday, Feb. 22nd, and both are doing well. I would like to hear if I am the first for the year?

The Earlestown and District C.B.S. Re-formed.

SIR,—I beg to inform you that the Earlestown and District Cage Bird Society has been reformed. Last Wednesday Mr. F. Longworth gave an interesting and instructive washing exhibition. Our next meeting will be held at the Coffee Rooms, Oxford Street, Earlestown, on March 16th, at which Mr. R. Knowles has kindly consented to give us a lecture on "Selection and Breeding," and any fancier will be welcome. Commence at 8 p.m.

H. A. WADDINGTON, Hon. Sec.

The Black-throated Hangnest at the Palace Show.

SIR,—Mr. Wesley Page's reply in your last issue suggests one blamed him; on the contrary, I endeavoured to assert he was about the only person who got beyond "black throat." I have been studying my bird, with his descriptions in my hand, and for the life of me I can't say which it is—though probably No. 1. Anyway, it has no semblance of white on it, and the black on throat rather resembles a large black ace, than extending to "middle of breast." Could you not produce a drawing? If Mr. Townsend will supply you with a photograph I will do the same—Pro bono publico.

Keeping Birds in Small Cages.

SIR,—Can anything be done to prevent dealers from torturing birds by keeping them in cages so small that they can hardly turn round? I was in a shop in London the other day, and saw two or three dozen Goldfinches; each was in a little wooden cage about 6in. x 4in.; the cages were piled in a stack on top of each other, and were the ones in which the birds had evidently been imported. They were Siberians, and had, of course, been imprisoned in these cells ever since they were started from that country. Even if it is necessary to pack them so close for the journey, it is downright wicked to keep them in these miserable things after they arrive where they can hardly move. I don't suppose anyone has any idea of what birds (and especially birds that have been bred and reared in absolute freedom) must suffer from such treatment. And it is abuses of this sort that prejudice the public against bird-keeping in general, and may eventually lead to its being made illegal to keep birds in cages at all. I hope you will be able, through the medium of your interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS, to do something to put a stop to this particular form of cruelty.

A BIRD LOVER.

The Construction of Breeding Cages.

SIR,—A few weeks ago I had the misfortune to be presented with a copy of CAGE BIRDS. Many years ago (too many) I kept a few birds in a small aviary—kept them until a too much interested relative left the door and the window open, and they all flew away. My interest in birds did not die by any means, and I never could pass a bird show without investigating the contents of the window. After reading the presentation copy of "C.B.," I found myself a pretty regular and always interested subscriber and began to wonder if I could find time to attend to a few birds. Then followed weekly visits to our local bird market just to see what was there. One Saturday, Bramblings were strongly in evidence. "Here y'are, fine cock Bramblings, 1s. each, two for 1s. 6d.," I heard. Then (seeing I was captivated), "Here, take 'em, two for a bob." I had no cage of any kind, so I went to a bird shop, bought a wooden cage for 3d., a wire-fronted one, 18in. by 12in., three pennyworth of Capern's Finch mixture, and returned to the market. I parted with the 1s., departed with the Bramblings, and became a fancier on the spot. Arrived at home, I spent a busy afternoon adapting my 18in. by 12in. cage front to a box I had in my mind when buying it. The Bramblings have done well so far, and, having experimented a few weeks and ascertained by experience what bird-keeping means (as regards time and attention required), I intend to go a little further into the pursuit. An afternoon at the recent Palace Show gave me some idea of the possibilities of the Fancy. From the first I determined to make my own cages, as that is a branch of the cult which rather appeals to me, and it is on that point that I take the liberty of asking the kind advice of readers. (I have been interrupted at this point by the addition of a Greenfinch to my small stock. An errand boy said there was a tame "Bullfinch" in the back-yard, so I went round and found a Greenfinch, that allowed me to approach very closely. It appeared healthy, and could fly. It flew over a wall into the next garden, and we induced it to fly back again. Then we opened the back door and indicated our wish that it should enter, as it most obligingly did, and was soon in the cage with the Bramblings—the only cage I had at hand. The bird has every appearance of being an escaped one, as it immediately began to pick up seed from the bottom of the cage.) To return to the subject of making cages, I have Mr. Norman's book on Aviaries, etc., and have been reading his article on "How to make a practical breeding cage," which is concluded in your issue of February 18th. Although well aware that "fools rush in where angels fear to tread," I purpose, with your permission to criticise the design on one (I think) very essential point, and before doing so would like to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Norman for many useful hints in his book and article. The failing in the design (and many others) is, in my opinion, in the sand drawer. Several writers in CAGE BIRDS have advocated a depth up to 2in., and one writer somewhere advised zinc drawers. Cleanliness to avoid "red mites" (I have not procured a sample yet) is insisted upon by every writer, and I think metal sand trays should invariably be used, and be at least one inch deep, to prevent grit, sand, dirt, etc., getting into the corners of the actual bottom of the cage. For my own home-made cages, I have two enamelled wooden bottoms, which I use alternately. In my ideal cage, which I hope to construct, I have thought of putting a bead round the inside of the cage to overlap the turned up edges of the sand-tray, to prevent sand or sawdust from getting over the edges and back of the tray. Another defect in the design is that there is only one door into the cage, and I think Mr. Norman has elsewhere insisted on the necessity of a second door through which to reach the nest for removal of eggs, etc. I should be glad if some experienced reader would kindly give advice on the construction of metal sand trays for large cages, single-breeders, and larger—information as to make, material, strength (gauge), depth, cost, etc. Is it better to enamel or not?

SCRUTINEER.

The Oswestry (Salop) and District C.B.S.

SIR,—The first meeting of the above-named Society was held on February 20th at Mr. Hughes, Salop Road, with success. Several fanciers were unable to attend, but have promised their support. The above name was decided for this new Society. Meetings to be held on the first Thursday in each month at the Oswestry Castle Refreshment Rooms, Bailey Street, at 8 p.m. Mr. George was elected chairman also treasurer; and Mr. E. J. Evans was elected secretary, Dr. Peploe Cartwright to be asked to stand as president. The election of other committees to be held over until March 2nd, the society's next meeting. The rate of subscription decided and rules will be 4s. per year; entrance fee 1s.; subscriptions may be paid monthly, but all subscriptions must be paid up by July 1st in each year, at the rate of 4d. per month, to July 1st of this year. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Hughes for his kindness in granting the society (at our initial meeting) the use of a room. Meeting closed at 9.30 p.m. The radius is eight miles from Oswestry. I hope to hear from fanciers who would like to become members.

Breeding Birds Aboard Ship.

SIR,—I daresay it would amuse some people to think of the idea of breeding Canaries on board a steamer, but the captain bred 27 Canaries on board the "Serula" (one of my firm's) last year. My own cabin is in a warm place, free from draughts, and plenty of fresh air, and there is nice room for three double breeding cages, and one or two small cages. I made all my own cages, mahogany stained and French polished, to match the furniture, so that they are ornamental as well as useful. I got my Canaries at Ghent, bred at Mechlin. The cock is a Saxon Roller, and a most sweet singer—not loud. I have also a splendid Goldfinch, which I got at Ghent; it cost just twice as much as the ordinary Goldies. I have a big hen Canary for him, both in the one cage. I have also a fine Linnet, so expect to have my hands full by and by. One hen has been sitting on three eggs for eight days at the time of writing, and another is making a nest. I use Spratt's egg food; I have no time to prepare hard-boiled egg, etc. I hope to get some Linnet and Goldfinch Mules. The birds are in good and lively condition, and have never ailed anything since I got them four months ago. I wish I had seen CAGE BIRDS years ago; it is a splendid paper. No matter how long you keep the copies, you can always pick any one of them up and read it over and over again, and find it most interesting.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

A Shoal of Letters of Appreciation from Our Readers.

It is a matter of great gratification to us to see our idea of an association of bird-keepers received with a really wonderful outburst of enthusiasm. Even at this early stage we feel we can safely predict that "Cage Birds League" is going to be a huge success. A number of letters in excess of our most sanguine expectations has been sent us, and we print a selection of these below. No doubt the views expounded therein will bring us still further expressions of opinion as to the lines upon which the League should be run. We specially ask that our readers will send us their views on these vitally important matters. All will receive the fullest consideration, and in our next issue we purpose dealing with the points raised by our correspondents and giving our own views concerning them. We want our friends to bear in mind, however, that (as we stated last week) "Cage Birds League" will not aspire to be a governing or controlling body, and that it will not interfere or conflict with any club or society at present in existence. Some of our correspondents appear to have overlooked this. We tentatively defined the objects of the League as:—

(1) To form a bond of good-fellowship and union between bird-keepers all over the world.

(2) To inculcate the principles by which birds suited to captivity may be kept under humane and proper conditions.

(3) To act as a league of defence and protection.

Sir,—I heartily agree with the proposals set forth in last week's CAGE BIRDS, and personally I think that a League of this description would do a great deal of good to our Fancy, both as regards the business and the friendship of exhibitors. I wish Cage Birds League every success.—W. PILGRIM (Mountsorrel).

Sir,—I was pleased to see your notice of forming a "Cage Birds League," as I think it quite time something was done to protect fanciers and bird-keepers of all classes from some of the faddists who know nothing of what they talk or write about, and I am sure that once the League is started, their fads will be put a stop to. I feel sure, too, that there will be plenty quite ready to join. I am sorry to say we have no society here now, but I shall be pleased to do all I can to get others to join the League. I wish good old CAGE BIRDS every success; I have not missed it once since it was started.—CHAS. HY. DOWNING (Raunds).

Sir,—What a pleasant surprise for readers of CAGE BIRDS I saw when I opened my copy and noticed therein a suggestion to form a "Cage Birds League." To my mind it is the very thing that is wanted among fanciers. I am sure some of us travelling in company as strangers could be made acquaintances with a glance at the tie, coat or chain, and be friends; and many a tiresome hour could be made pleasant through the League. I do hope that this Cage Birds League will become an established fact. One that will offer himself as a member is—WILLIAM NISBET (Musselburgh).

Sir,—I am delighted to see that you intend to organise a "Cage Birds League." This I consider a most desirable step in the right direction under present-day circumstances. If a strong society, such as you intend to form, can be organised and worked at about one shilling per annum per member, a great deal might be done in helping to stop the tyranny and persecution of cage bird lovers by such fanatical and ignorant killjoys as are banded together under the magnificent titles of Royal Society for the Prevention of this, that, and the other and Wild Bird Protection Associations. These societies are all right in their places, if their affairs are properly administered, but their officials have not scope enough for their zeal, and are tyrranising cage bird lovers for want of other cases. They might, if they would, find plenty of scope for "zeal" if they were to prosecute some of their own supporters such as some of their lady members, who adorn themselves in their great coats of squirrel skins and in hats trimmed with the bodies and feathers of some of our most rare birds and animals; and they might attack some of our greatest game dealers, who exhibit hundreds of dead bodies of Larks, Buntings, Woodcock, Snipe, etc., in their windows to please the palates of gourmands. If cage bird lovers, dealers, etc., would organise together for one common good, they would be astounded at their financial strength, and they would be able thus to fight against any tyrannical force brought to bear upon them. Fancy! from 40,000 to 50,000 cage bird lovers alone banded together in one brotherhood, determined to defend one common cause, each contributing one simple shilling per annum. This small amount from each bird lover would realise over £2,000 sterling. What could you not do with this amount? Study it one moment. You could defend every case against a bird lover brought to the courts, and beat them at the game. How many bird men lose their cases through want of counsel?—nine out of every ten, because they are poor and can't afford experts to defend them. Then there is the trouble with railway companies—birds delayed on their ways to shows; birds returned home which have not reached the shows; lost prize money, entry fees, carriage; birds arriving home dead through delays; birds stolen in transit; and a hundred other things which are never brought to light. Bird catchers who are prosecuted for catching birds ply this trade as their only means of existence (perhaps through no fault of their own), and catchers who catch merely for the sake of getting a pet bird or two, or who do it perhaps for a day's sport now and again—all these, as a rule, are men who can't afford to buy a bird, and they need never again pay £2 and costs for catching birds. Then there are dealers who have honestly bought their birds, ay, and tamed them, too, and kept them in the best of condition for perhaps three or six months, who are prosecuted for offering them for sale. Of course, you should class the members of the league; for instance, a dealer who is making a trade of catching or selling wild birds should pay a larger premium than an ordinary possessor of one or two wild birds—say, 2s. 6d. or 5s. per annum. Then there are fanciers who have mishaps, such as fires, by which they lose all their birds; such a man's case should be studied, and he be set up again if a member. And other unfortunate cases might be considered. I, for one, shall be glad, to the best of my ability, to help you forward with your proposals, as I recognise that this is a society we have long been wanting to help all bird fanciers in a time of need. I hope you will have all the success you deserve.—J. THOMAS, hon. sec., Otley Ornithological Society, Yorks.

Sir,—I was much taken up by your announcement to try and establish a Cage Birds League. CAGE BIRDS is a paper I always look forward to with joy, as there is always something interesting in it. The first portion of the suggestion is, I think, grand—to form a league of good fellowship amongst birdie men. The second part is also a very important subject, and the third object—to act as a league of defence and protection—is much to be admired. I have no doubt a great many will become members of the Cage Birds League. The badge will enable us to know one another at our shows; if we do not know each other's name, we shall recognise by the badge who are League men.—G. F. HENSON (Manchester).

Sir,—It is with great interest I read in CAGE BIRDS the announcement of an Association of Bird Lovers—a Cage Birds League. I hope it will make speedy headway. I myself will only be too pleased to help and assist in getting fanciers to join, hand-in-hand, to bring into existence a society, or league, that will bring about good fellowship between one fancier and others, for a society of this kind is urgently needed for the welfare of our pets. I consider the objects of the society to be splendid, and trust that the Cage Birds League will become a success. I think the society should consist of a general secretary and an assistant, and, if possible, a secretary for each town or district, the whole to be under the management of the general secretary. A suitable place to be arranged as headquarters would, of course, have to be decided on. Then each town or district secretary would need a good working committee. I also think there should be an annual subscription of say 2s. 6d. Then there would be rules to draw up. Of course, this is only my idea. But if worked on a good sound basis, I don't see why a society like this should not prosper. I wish the League every success. —J. M. WING, secretary of the Ambleside and District F.A.

Sir,—I hasten to congratulate you on the excellent idea or forming a League of all lovers of cage birds, and I agree with you that the time has come when such an organisation is absolutely necessary for the welfare of Canary breeders, and more especially mule breeders and British bird exhibitors. We have had many valuable ideas given us through the columns of your splendid paper, CAGE BIRDS, during the past ten years, but I venture to say that the new "Cage Birds League" will be considered by old and new fanciers as your crowning bit of work. In my humble opinion, it is certain to appeal to bird lovers the world over. And now, Mr. Editor, how is this to be done? The object of the League should be to enrol as a member every individual who keeps a caged bird, whether he (or she) belongs to a cage bird society or not. I take it, all members of societies and readers of CAGE BIRDS will welcome your suggestions with open arms and become members of the League. But what about the thousands of others who keep a single bird in a brass cage in the front room, or something more modest in the kitchen? These are the people the League should get hold of, and on reading your announcement in last week's CAGE BIRDS my idea was spontaneous, and I leave it to you to put before your readers if you care to do so. I suggest that one or more shows be held each year at different large centres in the British Isles under the auspices of the League and in connection with the fixture of the local society. That society to have control of the show, with the help of the League Committee. Such a fixture would be very valuable, and also a great honour to the fortunate society under whose auspices the show was held. Imagine, for one moment, a huge show, well supported by members of the League (on the same lines as what we see at the Horticultural Hall and the Crystal Palace) being held at Birmingham, Manchester, Bradford, Edinburgh, Dublin, Cardiff, and other large towns in their turn. What would be the effect upon those individual lovers of cage birds who do not belong to any society and probably have never even heard of a cage bird society? It is the greatness of things that impresses the public mind to-day, and as you cannot get the British public to go and see the large shows in London, you must bring the shows to them. Take the Royal Agricultural Show, our great Welsh Eistedfodds, and many other different organisations, why do they move about the country year after year? The answer is obvious. Is it not to promote the welfare and interest of the different objects which these large societies have in mind—for the lifting-up and improvement of their ideas? In this way you will be carrying the war into the enemy's camp, where the strength and greatness of the combined forces of "Cage Birds League" should very effectually blot out in the particular district where the show is held those few sentimental faddists who are doing so much harm to our humane, interesting, and harmless hobby of keeping caged birds. Let it be clearly understood, please, that my idea is not to do away with any shows whatever, nor to increase them, but to honour one or more shows each year with the patronage of "Cage Birds League," and so enable the League to distribute their badges of membership to every lover of cage birds throughout that part of the country. There are, of course, many points to consider, but this, I think, will do for the present, and I leave it with you and your readers to think over. Whatever you may decide to do, my one wish is: "Success to Cage Birds League."—E. J. BANKS (Cardiff).

MR. ARTHUR EMERY (Burton-on-Trent) and Challenge Bowl won by his birds.

The challenge bowl was won by me in 1910, writes Mr. Emery, and belongs to the Burton-on-Trent C.B.S., and is for the most points gained with four birds of the year in one class at the Nest Feather Show and two classes at the open show. Last year was the first stage in the competition for it, and I was lucky enough to win. I am now emigrating to Sydney, N.S. Wales, so I have returned the bowl to the secretaries. I embark at Liverpool on the ss. "Dorset," on the 18th of March, and am taking four of my Norwich with me, and hope to get them safely over to make another start in Australia. I am sorry at leaving, for I have many friends amongst the fanciers, especially those who are the workers in our society.

Sir,—I am delighted with your idea of a Cage Birds League. It is, I think, just what is wanted. I shall be pleased to join, and will do all I can to help. Have been a birdy man for forty years. I wish good old CAGE BIRDS still greater success.—S. J. COLES (Halstead).

Sir,—I think your scheme for a League a very good one. It is time all bird-lovers had something to fall back upon in case of need and to protect our hobby from those faddists who think it is cruel to keep birds in cages and are trying to stop it. It would show them that there are not only one or two, but many thousands who find happy hours in which to study their little friends' wants. It would also be a great help to the novice at the shows; it would give them a sort of introduction to one another if they were wearing the badges, and they could talk with and learn a great deal from the "old hands." It would be a means of the shows being patronised more, as half the novices will not show their birds for the lack of knowing how to stage them. I should also recommend each member to pay a small sum, either weekly or yearly, for the benefit of those who undeservedly get into "trouble." I hope the scheme will catch on among old fancier friends.—G. KNIGHT (Lowestoft).

Sir,—In reference to your proposed scheme for the establishment of an Association of Bird Keepers for the mutual interest and bringing together in the bond of good-fellowship of those having interests in common and a mutual pastime, and thereby aiding in some degree in elevating and purifying the Fancy and binding fanciers together in a union of friendship with sufficient strength to combat and withstand the insidious dangers which are slowly but surely being directed against their hobby, allow me to say that I sincerely hope all readers of CAGE BIRDS will show their approval of the scheme by forthwith signifying their intention to join the scheme, and to "catch a pal" until every bird-keeper in the country is bonded together in a union which must and will mean strength to protect and guard their interests. At the present time, I take it, you simply want suggestions and ideas on which to found some definite "plan of action." In that case, I would offer the following suggestions for what they are worth in addition to, or to combine with, the propositions in your announcement last week:—

1. You, sir, would doubtless accept office as President of the League—or Principal and Founder in which case some well-known and influential person in the birdie world should be prevailed upon to act as president.

2. A certain number of similar well-known names should be appointed as vice-presidents, and ditto for a council, which would have the principal control of the affairs of the League.

3. The council to have power to appoint local representatives or committees as, and when, and where, required to meet and deal with any particular local question that may arise, investigate matters, report to council, etc.

4. Vacancies on, or additions to, council to be filled by votes of members. To simplify matters, and keep working expenses low, the names of those nominated to be given in CAGE BIRDS, and members asked to send their votes in a given time on post-card.

5. Hon. solicitors should be appointed, who would undertake to advise poor fanciers after investigation by a local committee on legal points when they fell in the clutches of the law.

6. Admonitory measures should be taken, and members (or, maybe, non-members too) warned and given caution if discovered breaking any just laws, or Society rules or regulations. It should be made clear that the League has no intention of running counter to any just laws or morals, and would not countenance the wilful breach of them.

7. A small annual subscription and entrance fee, too small to deter even the poorest bird-keeper joining, should be instituted—say, entrance fee of 6d. (and free until a given date), and an annual subscription of 6d. This to entitle a member to a small badge or card of membership. Larger voluntary subscriptions, and donations, to be accepted. Donations of certain amount to confer "life membership."

8. Working expenses to be kept as low as possible. But free leaflets might be issued for distribution, explaining doubtful bird laws or regulations, giving advice on certain matters as may be deemed necessary or advisable by the council from time to time. All surplus funds to be utilised as occasion offers to guard or protect the interests of fanciers, or defray the expenses of, and procure legal assistance for, poor bird-keepers who are unjustly prosecuted by misguided if well-meaning persecutors. Such a case as the Bennett case, now pending, is just such a one as the League might have taken in hand and fought to the end had it been in existence and had sufficient funds at its disposal.

9. The name should be "Cage Birds League," as you have it. It is terse, pointed, pithy, and not cumbersome (a great point), and will catch on. Therefore stick to it, and do not be tempted to name this child "An Association for the Propagation of Good Fellowship and Mutual Aid amongst Cultivators of Captive Specimens of Ornithology." No, not that! Name it "Cage Birds League."—CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Cannot Grow Tail.

W.E.F.—As the bird appears in good health and is otherwise in good plumage I should suspect some mechanical cause as the most likely explanation of its inability to grow a full tail before losing it again. You should first find out whether the bird plucks out the quills itself, or knocks them out by fluttering wildly about the cage or, if caged with others, whether the other birds pluck them out, or whether mice are probably the culprits when the bird is roosting at night. If none of these causes appear correct, cage the bird alone in a moderate-sized cage. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Three times a week for a month give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flour of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. On two other days each week give a similar quantity of a mixture of millet, inga, teazle, and maw seeds. Give a leaf of dandelion three or four times a week, and add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel to the water every third day for a month. If the half-grown feathers begin to drop out again, remove them all and carefully anoint the skin whence they spring with carbolised vaseline daily for a few days, and continue the above treatment. Shall be glad to hear result in a month.

A Clouded Success.

A Novice.—Your letter does not give sufficient details as to your feeding and management of the old and young birds about the time you separated them, but I think the solution of the mystery lies in some error of feeding. Did you continue to supply the old birds with egg food after you separated the young from them by a wire division, and also see that the young were provided with a perch or stand of some kind by the wire partition so that they could stand comfortably for the old birds to feed them through the wires. The cock would almost certainly have fed them if there was nothing to hinder him doing so. Then at a month old the young should have had access to canary and rape seed, and not been limited to egg food and crushed hemp. The hemp also might not have been good, in which case that alone would account for the deaths. As you are taking "Our Canaries," you cannot do better than adhere rigidly to the advice given therein in the coming season. I should certainly consider last season's old hen worth trying again this season, as she appears to have done her duty as well as could be reasonably expected. You could, of course, run the two hens with the cock, and thus increase your chances. Foster parents do not appear to have been necessary in your case last season. I never tried Mules as fosters myself, so cannot say from experience. Better address a query to our Mr. Weston on this point. There is no charge for these replies. Always glad to be of assistance.

Samples of Canary (E. H.).—Both samples are good, and quite suitable for feeding Canaries. No. 1 is the best of the two, being plumper and rather better ripened.

Roller in Aviary (Drewton).—It is doubtful whether the Roller would sing quite as much in a large aviary among a mixed collection of foreign Finches, and in such surroundings its song would be practically certain to deteriorate in quality very quickly. If you value the Roller's song, I would not advise you to make this change.

Tasteless Pepper (Colour).—Chemists and druggists do not stock the tasteless pepper used for colour-feeding Canaries, unless they happen to run a side branch of business to supply bird foods and fanciers' requisites, as many do in country places and very small towns. You should enquire at corn chandlers, or of general seedsmen who also deal in poultry and bird foods; or, better still, see our advertisement columns during the season, beginning about July, where you will find advertisers offering it for sale under the above name, or as "Red Feed" or "Colour Food," and can obtain it through the post.

Sleeping on Floor, Etc. (Spivinix).—(1) As the bird is quite well and lively, there is nothing to worry about at all, because he prefers to sleep on the floor sometimes. He perhaps finds that the cosiest place. If you have a light in the room after roost time, do not remove it or put it out too suddenly until you know the birds are all on the perches. Beyond this nothing else is required. (2) It would be quite safe to use sawdust during the breeding season. But you must keep up a supply of clean, fresh sand, as you suggest, and not use the same over and over again as long as it lasts, because the hens will probably pick it over and soon exhaust it of all calcareous matter for shelling eggs during the period of laying and just prior to it. (3) Give this hen a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with sugar every second day for a week, and on the alternate days add to the water four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of columba, and aromatic sulphuric acid.

Fertilisation (Spike).—Your query does not make it very clear what you really wish to know. If you mean what is the shortest time that can elapse between fertilisation and the laying of the egg, I do not know of any actual record. But in normal conditions the safe average period is between 30 and 40 hours—or, say, a hen mated on Monday afternoon, may be expected to lay a fertile egg on Wednesday morning. This is, of course, assuming the birds are both virile and in full vigour, and the hen in a sufficiently forward condition for egg-laying. Naturally, anything that tends to hinder the progress or final stages of development of the egg will increase the period that elapses between its fertilisation and deposition.

A Vicious Yorkshire ("Peck," Burnley).—The way your bird behaves is merely an indication of his tameness, and shows that he has lost practically all fear of you. He is simply challenging you to fight or play with him, and if you gently poked your finger towards him between the wires at the end of his perch you would probably find him apparently go in a rage and fight it with beak and claws quite vigorously, but without doing it any damage at all, and if you went on to offering it a hemp seed, or any tit-bit, between the thumb and finger he would quickly take it, and in a short time you could, by encouraging its confidences, have quite a charming pet that would come and perch on your hand. Probably few would wish to "break him of the habit," but if you still wish to do so, pay as little attention to him as possible beyond proper feeding and cleaning, and mate him up during the coming season.

Norwich Cock Moulting (Dartford).—The bird probably got a slight chill last moulting season which checked the moult and caused it to remain in abeyance until the spring was approaching. This is no very unusual circumstance when the check comes just as the moult is beginning. Keep the bird in a fairly warm place, quite free from draughts, and extreme fluctuations, and in addition to the staple of plain canary seed give half a teaspoonful of rape every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed stale sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet, and linseed. Two leaves of dandelion may be given about every second day, and in the drinking water give 20 drops of chemical food three times a week until the bird is quite over the moult. Sorry the previous letter you mention did not reach me.

Bad Colds (A.C.).—I suspect these birds have been treated injudiciously and exposed to draughts or damp, or both. You should now keep them in a comfortably warm, not necessarily overheated, but equable place, quite free from these causes, and feed and treat them as advised to "R.O.N." As regards breeding, you will probably get nothing but disappointment out of these hens, and I would strongly advise you to discard them, and replace with sound, healthy 1910 birds, which will bring you far more pleasure and encouragement. If your hens are really unflighted ones, as you call them, they, of course, are 1910 bred, which, in view of their present condition, only makes them so much the more unsuitable for breeding.

Terror of the Night (Devon Lad).—Satisfy yourself that the birds in the flight are not exposed to draught, or the one that suffers does not roost in a place apart from the others where it is draughty. Remove this one to a smaller cage and keep her in a comfortably warm but not overheated place, quite free from draughts, extremes of heat and cold, and impure or foul air, and feed and treat her as advised to "R.O.N.," except that you should give the eucalyptus mixture two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. If you value good sound healthy young that will "wear well," you will not breed with this hen.

Swelling under Eye (L.N.).—Your second letter puts rather a different complexion on the case. Continue painting the swelling sparingly with iodine about every second day, but cease doing so for a time if the skin becomes sore, until it is healed again. Prick the contents and evacuate swelling only when it gets full of fluid and appears uncomfortable. Each time this is done bathe it quite clean with a warm solution of boracic acid—a teaspoonful of acid dissolved in half a teacup of hot water—and anoint daily for a few days afterwards with carbolised vaseline. In addition to the staple seed diet give a small piece of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed twice a week, and for the next month give six drops of dandelion juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence in the water twice a week, and on two other days four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of columba, and aromatic sulphuric acid. Give a spray of chickweed or leaf of dandelion daily if obtainable.

Mating ("Nearly 16 now.").—(1) You have put the birds together too soon. Still, as they seem to be fairly forward, if the hen shows any signs of beginning to build in earnest by the time this appears, leave them alone, and let matters follow their own course, though you would certainly have done better to have left them apart until the end of this month. On this matter you should read the article in "Cage Birds Annual," on "How to Become a Successful Breeder." The lining of your nest pans should have been fixed in securely with paste, or a dab of glue or similar adhesive at the bottom and around the sides before you put them in the cage. You may do this now if the hen has not already built a nest. If she has made a good nest you can dispense with the felt lining. (2) It depends upon the forwardness and also the temperament of the birds how long it takes them to get settled and start to build. Some birds will settle down amicably almost in a few minutes, and, if sufficiently forward, commence building in a day or two. Others may continue more or less quarrelsome until incubation commences, and may be together three or four weeks, or even longer, before building. If kept apart until really ready for mating they will usually start building in a week, and have commenced sitting at end of a fortnight.

Gas and Young (Young Canary).—Provided a room is of fair size and well ventilated and the birds not hung near enough the gas burners to be affected by the heat from them when lit, nor above them, so as to be exposed to the fumes from the lights, I do not consider the presence of gas in the least degree detrimental to the health of Canaries kept in the same room. A nest of wild young—any of the Finches—taken and placed in a Canary's nest which has just lost its own young, or in a nest with only one or two youngsters of about the same size, would stand just as good a chance of being reared as a brood of young Canaries.

Wagging Tail (C. Alcock).—First see that all your seeds are quite sweet and sound, and as the birds often fly about the room all day you should see they have not access to pot plants, in the soil of which chemical fertilisers are mixed, as when birds have their liberty in this way they are very fond of digging about the soil of any pot plants they can get at. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give a half-teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. Three or four times a week give a little dandelion or watercress every second day. Add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and for the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of columba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Bare of Feather (Whitcinch).—Examine cage well for red mite, and if any are found thoroughly clear them out. Keep in a comfortably warm place, but not overheated, and out of reach of all draughts. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as staple. Every second day for a month give half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flour of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts inga, linseed, millet, and teazle. Three or four times a week give a spray of green food. In the drinking water give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a month.

Sneezing and Coughing (R. O. N.).—The birds are very likely exposed to draught or extremes of heat and cold. If so, you must see that these causes are quite removed. In addition to the staple diet of plain Canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape to each bird every second day, and on the alternate days for the next fortnight give a similar quantity of crushed stale sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Stop the egg food meanwhile. Three times a week give a young dandelion leaf or a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for one day only, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week.

Two Cocks (Torromont).—Glad to hear the bird previously enquired about is better. There is no reason why you should not breed with him this year. Give him a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a young leaf of dandelion, and 15 drops of chemical food in the water. This should suffice to tone him up and put in good condition. Feed the other on a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana. Give a young leaf of dandelion three times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and after this dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big in the drinking water, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a fortnight.

To Avert Failure (W. J. T.).—The London breeding cage is a most unsuitable and unhygienic contrivance, and you would do well to discard it altogether in favour of the modern type of box cage with nest pans to hang in when required. If you are particularly anxious to get young from these birds, you might, as you suggest, try again with the same three birds, running them together alternately as before, but also putting up two common German hens, which you could run with one cock and entrust the eggs of the other hens to these common ones to hatch and rear. If the other hens elect to sit at all this year, give them the eggs of the common hens to sit on in order to be on the safe side. This would be your best course, although it is just possible these hens might settle down better if the cock was left with them permanently. And if you wish to try that method, you could get a fresh cock for one of them. But even then I should advise you to put up the common feeders to be provided for any emergency.

Out of Condition (H. Hinkley, jun.).—You should have said how you feed and treat the bird, and in what way it is out of condition. You had better write again and give some particulars on these points, and meantime, keep the bird in a comfortable and equable place, quite free from draughts, and see that it is free from red mites. Meantime, feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Give a piece of bread and milk, the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a week, and twice a week on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Three times a week give a little dandelion, and in the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Young Norwich Unwell (G.W.R.).—The bird may have been temporarily exposed to draught these variable days. Take due care on this score. In addition to the staple of plain canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for a week a similar quantity of crushed stale sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. Limit the diet to this for a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six of each of glycerine, and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week. I take it the bird moulted properly last autumn.

Ailing Roller (Troubled).—As the ailment dates from the discovery of red mites, I have no hesitation in attributing the cause to one of two things—either the new cage in which you placed the bird is in a more variable or a draughty position, or you have been overdoing the bathing since then. I fancy the latter is the correct theory. Keep bird quite free from draughts and extremes of heat and cold, and allow it to bathe only on fine mild days, and in the morning. About twice a week will quite suffice until weather gets warmer and more settled. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part rape. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of sponge cake as advised to "G.W.R.," and twice a week on the alternate days give a spray of green food or morsel of banana, and on two other days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, and linseed. In the water give the same medicines as advised to "G.W.R.," but give the salts mixture for one day only, and continue the other mixture for a fortnight if necessary.

Cure for Pip (R.C.).—What is "the pip?" Unfortunately I do not know myself. It is probably one of those fictitious ailments which have no real existence. Some apply the term to a swollen or inflamed oil gland, others imagine it to be some mouth or tongue trouble. So you see you ought to have described what symptoms the bird shows and how you feed and treat it. Better write again and do this, and meantime give the bird a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a week give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a half teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet, and linseed. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week. If the oil gland appears inflamed, carefully anoint it for a day or two with carbolised vaseline. Do nothing else with it.

Canary Not Singing (John Morgan).—I rather doubt whether treatment will be needed for this bird by the time this appears. If he is still on this mortal plane, give plain canary seed only as staple. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a small piece of banana, and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts summer rape, maw, and gold of pleasure. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky and ten of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will mix for you, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another fortnight afterwards. Mixture: Two drams each oxymel of squills and glycerine, and one dram each chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, add six grains of iodide of potassium. Stop all other foods you have been giving; keep bird fairly warm and strictly avoid draughts.

Wheezy Norwich (Cobby).—If the bird has hitherto been accustomed to a warm room, you would do well to move him to a rather warmer room until the beginning of April. But see that it is in a fairly equable position—not too near a fire or burning lights, and quite free from draughts. If it has not been used to a warm room, you may let it remain where it is. In either case, treat it for a week or fortnight, as may appear necessary, the same as advised to "G.W.R." (2) Yes, groundsel, young and crisp, is good for Canaries. I prefer it, however, a little later on than this, and dandelion, chickweed, or watercress just now.

Failing to Hatch (Stonewall).—The very best way to equip yourself to avert all these little disappointments would be to get the part of "Our Canaries," already issued, which deals with all these details far more fully than it is possible to do here. I certainly would not advise you to give less grit. Follow the same course in these matters as last year, but when the eggs have been sitting twelve full days, immerse them (that is, on the thirteenth and fourteenth days) morning and evening, in a cup of quite warm water for a few moments. If they "chip" normally, leave them alone. If no signs of "chipping" on the morning of the fifteenth day, and the eggs bob about in the water, you may risk very carefully opening the large end to discover the position of the chick's beak, and then very carefully crack the shell round the smaller circumference crossing over the tip of the beak. Only attempt this when it is quite a matter of the chicks dying if left undone.

Yorkshire Plucking Itself (H. J. Smith.—First of all examine cage and bird carefully for insect pests—the cage for red mites and the bird for grey lice. If either are discovered eradicate as frequently described in this column. If neither are found, continue your present staple diet. Every second day for a fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flour of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled with maw seed; on the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seed. Give a leaf of dandelion daily, and allow it to bathe freely in mild weather. In the drinking water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week.

Room and Mating (G. F. C.).—If the room is free from damp and efficiently ventilated there is no reason why it should not do very well for breeding Rollers. If the window is made to open, this and a ventilator in the door, or at that end, might suffice, with the cages ranged on the north wall if it abuts on other buildings. The window would need to be fairly large to light all the cages, and it would have been a considerable improvement if it, or another one, had been in the south wall opposite the cages. Still these details do not make the room wholly unsuitable by any means. I should not regard a 1907 cock a good mate for a 1910 hen in Rollers. What one wants in breeding Rollers is a fair majority of cocks in the young, and you are not likely to get them by this mating. When there is so much disparity in the ages of a pair, as in this case, the youth should be on the male side when you want plenty of male progeny.

Mark your seed, etc., tins with our special labels. Sheets of twenty printed in red, on gummed-back paper, marked "Canary," "Hemp," "Softbill Food," etc. Price, three sheets for 1½d., six sheets 2d., post free.

Doubtful Sex (Stella).—I also "ha' ma' doots" of the German bird being a cock. If he has paid any such attention to his prospective mate as standing in a crouched attitude, with open beak and quivering wings, and squeaking at her, and occasionally calling to her and feeding her through the wires, it is just possible he may be a cock, but I am far more inclined to think he is not, and that if you put "him" up with a cock in good song "he" would soon present you with a bevy of baby Canaries.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

About a Bramblefinch (T.S.B.).—Follow the advice given "Fides" in this issue. The Bramble is a hardy bird, easy to feed and manage, and is no more difficult to moult (in my opinion) than a Linnet. One has trouble with some specimens, it is true; but, then, one has trouble with some Linnets.

Blackbird with a Cold (Jim).—Get a chemist to mix you one ounce each of glycerine, oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and stir fresh daily a teaspoonful of this into about three tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Keep the bird out of draughts and in an equable temperature. This remedy has been successful in a great number of cases.

A Barn Owl (H. G. Howard).—If you cannot undertake to supply the Owl with a reasonable amount of freshly-killed flesh food (mice, rats, Sparrows, etc.), I do not advise you to try to keep it. Other flesh (butcher's meat) can be utilised (the cheap portions, lights, etc.), while rabbit flesh and "innards," and the "innards" of fowls are excellent.

Pairing up a Chaffinch (W. P. Martin).—A cock Chaffinch has been said to have bred with a Canary, a Linnet, a Yellowhammer, a Bullfinch, and maybe other species, but the only generally-accepted Chaffinch hybrid is that between Chaffinch and Bramblefinch, of which a fair number have been seen upon the show bench. You can take your choice. The Chaffinch-Bullfinch, when it comes, will be pretty and very valuable.

Two Matters (Confederate).—(1) I cannot undertake to value birds without seeing them. Again, some people would pay more for a pied Robin than others. Even all-white Robins are not of very great rarity. I had two myself last spring. (2) A "jonque" Mule means a yellow Mule; a "mealy" is a buff. The same terms are applicable to Canaries, and have the same meanings.

Fly to the "Nutshells" (Sphinx).—The feeding, management, sexing, etc., of both Linnets and Goldfinches are fully dealt with in Cage Birds' "Nutshell" booklets, which I advise you to invest in (post free, 2½d.). Upon any special points I shall be glad to advise. Inga (or niga) seed is not "bad" for any bird providing it is used with discretion. A little given regularly to Linnets just after the moult serves to break them into song, and at this time of the year to bring them into breeding condition. It is a useful, stimulating, "rich," (oily) seed. With Goldfinches it can be used more freely (especially when they are newly-caught), but should not be given in the stock mixture.

Linnets (S.C.R.).—(1) Get a small quantity of crystals of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist, and in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water dissolve as much as will just cover a sixpenny-piece. Give fresh daily for a few days, and the watery, offensive nature of the Linnet's excrement will soon change for the better. (2) The best stock mixture for your Linnet is canary and teazle two parts each, best summer rape one part; by way of variety add occasionally a light sprinkling of charlock or linseed (not both at the same time). For full list of "tit-bits," follow the "Nutshell" booklet.

In a Recess (Constant Reader).—I have often explained that for various reasons much success in the breeding line is rarely achieved when a number of breeding pairs are thrown together in a limited area. (1) So far as I can tell the recess ought to answer. If you want a chance of young birds, then three or four pairs should be the limit. (2) Half-inch wire-netting will do; you could use five-eighths mesh. (3) Try one hen Bullfinch and three hen Canaries, with cocks of the following: Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, and Redpoll. If you decide on three pairs (which would be best), leave out the Redpoll and one hen Canary. (4) It is not unusual for a non-house-moulted cock Greenfinch to breed Mules. Most cock Greenies soon get steady and "domesticated."

A Pied Blackbird (Gab).—A Blackbird marked in the manner described is not worth more than a few shillings. Pied Blackbirds are quite the commonest thing in the way of "freak" birds—even all-white ones are fairly common. Your specimen would not stand the slightest chance of getting a prize at the shows in any class for rare-feathered birds. If the bird is given a chance to bathe regularly, it will soon "straighten out" its plumage; sorry to hear you found it in such bad condition. We are not allowed by the rules to recommend particular advertisers. But any of the large fanciers' specialists using our advertisement columns would supply you with a suitable big bath.

Feeding a Jay, etc. (Avis).—The differences in the plumage of male and female Jay are very slight—not sufficient to guide the inexperienced in determining the sex, being mainly comparative (the male being a trifle brighter and richer). A Jay would live in a large Parrot cage, but I could not describe such a cage as suitable. A Jay wants a long, box cage, with the perches placed to afford him a good, long jump. As regards the food, use a good quality dog meal (such as "Melox" or Spratt's), thoroughly softened with hot water, and mixed with such table scraps (meat, potatoes, greens, gravy, etc.) as are from time to time available. This is the staple, and should be varied with dead mice, Sparrows, acorns, cracked nuts, berries, fruit, eggs, etc., according to season and circumstance. A Jay has a very accommodating appetite; some flesh food is essential.

Feeding Birds (Fides).—You will find the feeding of a Chaffinch fully dealt with in the "Nutshell" booklet upon the species (post free 2½d. from Cage Birds). If it is with "mixed British birds in indoor aviary," however, I don't quite see how you are going to get it to stick to any particular food (not that this matters much). The Bramblefinches should be fed on the same lines as the Chaffinch. The Yellowhammers will eat only canary seed. But all three species should have a little live food frequently (such as a mealworm or two), and a teaspoonful or two of a good quality insectile food, containing a fair percentage of ants' eggs.

About Hybrids (Novice).—You should read some good books, etc., on hybrid breeding, such as "Cage Bird Hybrids," Mr. Collins's article just published in Cage Birds, and Mr. Ovenstone's article in the 1911 Annual. (1) You will probably find the hen Bullies disagree and fight when the breeding season comes round. You would stand far more chance of success with one hen Bullie only, in each place, say. For the same reason, one cock Greenie only would be preferable. (2) I know of no instance in which the mating of cock Bramblefinch with hen Bullfinch has resulted in the production of hybrids. If no one tries, however, no one, of course, will ever succeed in showing us Bramble-Bullie hybrids. (3) Hen British birds are unreliable in captivity in the matter of incubating eggs and rearing young. Odd hens will do so; the great majority will not.

An Outdoor Aviary (L. M.).—You can pick and choose where you like from amongst the members of the Finch family (which, by-the-bye, includes the Buntings), except that the larger species (Hawfinch, Crossbill, Pine Grosbeak,), should be passed over. Only have one cock Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, and Yellowhammer. Twenty to twenty-four birds should thrive well in the place.

Together (No nom-de-plume).—I don't think you would find a cock Canary agree at one and the same time with a hen Canary and a hen Siskin. He would probably ignore the latter; he might, however, "pitch into her"—or the two hens indulge in a few rounds on their own. The best way is to run a cock Canary solely with the hen Siskin if you want Mules from the pair. No hen Britishers can be described as "good sitters and feeders," when in a cage; note reply to "Novice" this week.

A Stock Seed Mixture (Wullie).—Keep the following as a "stock mixture": Canary and teazle 2 parts each, summer rape 1 part, linseed a half-part. The Linnet and Canary will find this to their taste. The Goldie and Canary should be given a little hemp in addition, and now and again a little cracked sunflower. The Siskin and Greenfinch should be given a little sunflower (not cracked) in addition. Of course, you will hand the couples the usual "tit-bits" in the seed-line and greenfood-line (dandelion, etc.), as occasion demands.

A Trio (Glentone).—1.—It is quite true that a few instances of Mules (Goldfinch and Linnet) having bred have been recorded in "Cage Birds." There was quite a stir about the matter last year; did you not notice the correspondence upon the subject? 2. There is a slight chance that the hen Bullies may rear young in your aviary. Note other replies this week. 3. I am not the Canary specialist, remember. October to March is the chief Roller season. Two parts canary to one part summer rape is the seed mixture most generally advised.

Linnet with Red Head (G. Pincott).—As you will already have found out from our "Nutshell" booklet on the Linnet, it is quite a common thing for the cock to have a red crown, also a red breast, when in breeding plumage in a state of nature. But are you sure that you have not got hold of a Redpoll, and are mistaking it for a Linnet? I have known beginners fall into this error. The Redpoll is smaller than the Linnet, has a call-note which sounds like "Jo-ey," and generally has more or less of a black mark on the throat (just under the beak), called a bib, a mark never found on a Linnet.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Another Outdoor Aviary (A. J. B.)—I don't think it necessary to take out any of the birds. You could add a hen Greenfinch and a hen Canary (or try a hen Chaffinch if you do not care to have the latter). The hen Greenfinch and hen Redpoll might succeed in rearing young. Your plan of removing the eggs to the nests of Greenfinches, etc., outside, and hand-rearing any young after they have attained a suitable age, is quite feasible and good, though, of course, decidedly troublesome and time-consuming. I know of cases where Hybrids have been reared by the adoption of this method.

Pairing Up (E. Beaumont).—The "proper" time to pair up is, of course, when both the cock and the hen are ready to breed. But birds can be paired (i.e., run together), whenever the owner chooses—all through the winter if he likes. I always think it policy, for instance, to give untried cock Goldfinches a run for a time amongst hen Canaries, so that they may become familiarised with them. But a proved breeder need not be put in with his mate until she is showing signs of readiness to nest. Again, you can't get fertile eggs from any Goldfinch unless he is stout in song, has a clear, or practically clear beak, and is properly "sprung" (which examination of the vent will show). There is no hard and fast "proper time"; one needs to deal with each couple on their merits, so to speak. It does not matter whether the hen is Yorkshire or Norwich in type; Mules can be bred from either, but those from Norwich hens are generally the best in substance and colour. Your yellow hen will answer very well, I should think. Whoever told you that it is "proper to have a buff hen," I can only describe as being "up the pole" (if you will pardon a phrase more expressive than elegant).

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc.

Parrot in Poor Feather.

Nemo.—A Parrot that does not care to bathe must be sprayed (use a fine sprayer) and even in winter this should be done once a week, and twice a week in the summer; of course, at any season, keeping the bird carefully out of draught till dry, more especially so during the winter. Choose a genial day for the spraying, and about noon is the best time, and with ordinary care the bird should not take a chill. Confine the dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, with grit, cuttlebone and water. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and on intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, continuing this treatment till the plumage is fine and tight.

In Poor Condition.

E.W.D.—This bird will need careful nursing, it possibly strained its legs at the time it got entangled in its cage. As its lower mandible is cracked, I should advise giving it a little boiled maize daily, say about one tablespoonful; it only keeps fresh for twenty-four hours and must be prepared fresh daily; boil till soft, then drain away all water and drop over it a little Parrish's Chemical Food. Diet as under: Seed mixture—two parts each Canary and white millet seed, and one part each crushed oats, hemp, dari, paddy rice and sunflower seed—well mix, and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, shelled walnuts and plain biscuits, the latter can be moistened with chemical food and water. A pinch of grit to be added to the daily supply of seed mixture and a piece of clean cuttlebone kept in the cage. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, nor yet any kind of animal food. See our "Nutshell Booklet on the Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free, from our Manager.

For Outdoor Aviary.

Avadavat.—You ought not to put anything out either in shed or flight—unless you can warm the shed—till middle of April or early May, according to the season. If you purchase birds now it would be better to keep them in your living-room (out of draught) till May, when they can be put out and left out. Of course, if you can purchase from some other outdoor aviary and know you are getting them from such, you can put them out at once, shutting them into the inner compartment at dusk during bad weather. Get our Nutshell booklet on Waxbills, 2½d. post free from our Manager. The following pairs should do well with you: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Grey and Green Singing Finches, White Java Sparrows, Green Avadavats, Zebra (Golden-breasted) and St. Helena Waxbills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Long-tailed and Rufous-tailed Grassfinches, and a pair of small Painted Quails.

African Grey Parrots.

African Grey.—I should want almost the scope of a three vol. novel to adequately cover your query; however, I'll do what I can. In the first place, I expect these birds would attempt to nest in quite early spring, but they mature so slowly that there would be no placing of the time of the first nest; one could only provide the accommodation and wait with what patience one could command. December is the nesting season, following close after the rains. The natives mostly take young birds; adults are occasionally imported. Greys are nearly always on the market, but early spring is about the best time to buy and keep them warm till acclimatised. The other matters you refer to, not being an importer of birds I have failed to note—some birds come to hand practically by each steamer. They have been bred in captivity; in one instance, August was the month chosen, and incubation lasted about one month, and the young were fully three months before they left the nest. Hope I have met your need, and that you'll have luck if you contemplate breeding this interesting species.

Aviery for Budgerigars. M. P. R.—In your aviary you could keep a pair of either Ring-neck, or Moustache, or Rosella Parrakeets; also pairs of Blue-wing Lovebirds, Madagascar Lovebirds and Red Crested Cardinals. Only the Rosellas would be more costly than the value you stipulate. All the above would thrive on a seed mixture of Canary, white millet, paddy rice, hemp, oats and sunflower seed; green food, ripe fruit, nuts plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. Put out in May, all the above could be left out of doors all the year round.

Green Amazon not Talking (J. Hewett): Some few individuals of Amazons do not talk much. I would put this bird in a room by itself as soon as convenience and weather permit; by itself means away from the other Parrots, but in the company of humans; pet it, talk to it, train it by constant repetition, and with conversation going on round it, it ought to increase its vocabulary. I should give this bird a few doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in the drinking water—with three days between each dose. On the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. It ought to come on all right, but Parrots are jealous creatures, and this bird will doubtless do better by itself.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Procuring Grey Parrots (Novices).—It is a case of watching our advert. columns; you will see these advertised on arrival and should get a good, newly-imported young bird for about 25s. Do not purchase the cheapest, and stipulate when making the purchase (if you do not see it first) that it is in good feather. Newly imported Greys need careful nursing at first, warmth and quiet, till they become steady and have settled down and become accustomed to you. You would find full details as to treatment, etc., in our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot and how to keep it," 2½d. post free, from our manager.

Budgerigars and Cardinals (Drivton).—No Budgerigars and Cardinals agree well together, occasionally a Cardinal may get a leg broken or a wing damaged from the too playful beak of a Budgerigar, but as a rule there are no mishaps. The young getting out of nest before being able to fly is of frequent occurrence, they get active and crowd to the front for food and follow their parent to the mouth of the nest importuning for food and fall out; as a rule they do themselves no hurt, and the parents usually soon find them and duly feed them, and they soon learn to climb about and fend for themselves. See our Nutshell Booklet on Budgerigars, 2½d., post free, from our Manager.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

A Photographic Group (J. R. Colville).—We shall be pleased to receive the photograph when ready, and will find a place for it in one of our supplements.

Distributing Calendars (W. Clough).—Our manager will be pleased to forward a parcel of calendars; thanks for your kind promise to distribute them.

A Message (Jeremiah Jones).—We hope your message is something nice, but being written in Welsh, we are unable to understand it, a knowledge of that beautiful (looking) language being the one thing lacking in the long list of our accomplishments. Try again in English, please.

A Photograph (R. Dallman).—Sorry, but the photograph you send is much too blurred and indistinct to permit of its being reproduced. For the latter purpose photographs must be very clear and sharp.

Allegations of Fraud (N. E. How).—It is impossible for us to publish general allegations of this nature, which only serve to cast suspicion in unwarranted places. If you will bring to our notice any specific instance where you have been defrauded by any dealer we will at once take steps to have justice done you.

Official Duties (A. Wadsworth).—You would, we think, find some useful hints upon the conduct of meetings and the duties of secretary and chairman in a booklet entitled "How to Read, Write, and Debate," published by Messrs. Long and Co., 186, Fleet Street, London. It is only 2d., post free.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Annual pair show held February 22nd, at Mr. Nash's Sale Rooms (kindly lent for the occasion). Although not so many entries as usual, some splendid birds were staged, which should, with luck, breed something worth looking at. One particular member I must give great credit to for staging, namely, Mr. H. C. Smith; this member takes as much trouble over a members' show as for an open competition. Entries numbered 121. Special for best pair open, Mr. H. C. Smith; for best single novice, Mr. W. Chedgey. Points for Canary cup: Mr. H. C. Smith, 34; runners-up, Messrs. E. Thomas 32, J. W. Dummett 32, S. F. Whetton, 31. British and Foreign bird cup: Mr. E. Thorne had it all his own way, scoring 42; Mr. A. Shellam, 9, for Mule or Hybrid, gold medal. Judges: Mr. F. D. I have taken Cage Birds ever since I started keeping Canaries, and find it very interesting and useful.—H. Davidson (Lockerbie).

Permit me to thank you for your illustration of my winner in the Champion Young Bird Class at the British Roller Canary Club show. It is an excellent sketch of this fine singer.—F. E. Fisher (South Woodford).

I am a novice in the bird fancy, only starting last season, but thanks to the valuable hints I read in Cage Birds and in that valuable book for beginners by Claude St. John, I have had a successful season with a few birds.—H. Robinson (London, S.E.).

The balance-sheet of the 1910 show of the Launceston F.A. shows a balance at the bank after paying all expenses of £6 6s. 6d., which is a creditable result, and one upon which the sec. (Mr. N. H. Reed) and the Society as a whole may congratulate themselves.

The 1911 syllabus of the Cheltenham C.B.S. is a very comprehensive and representative one. It includes lectures on Canaries, British birds, Mules, foreign birds, wild seeds, etc., judging competitions, an annual outing, a food-mixing demonstration, etc. The Secs. of the Society are Messrs. A. S. Treasure and W. Pounsett, Idahoe, Oakland Av., Cheltenham.

I was agreeably surprised and gratified to find that my yellow Norwich hen was depicted in Cage Birds Annual, writes Mr. W. Spillman (Devonport). I bred her from one of my smallest hens, although she herself is the largest and most typical yellow hen I ever had. I must admit there was plenty of size on the cock's side. Strange as it may seem, the runner-up for the Plymouth Cup was also a hen, bred from my best yellow hen, which had the previous year won the same distinction.

I need hardly say how delighted I was on getting good old Cage Birds of Feb. 18, to find such a grand drawing of my unflighted yellow Yorksbires therein. Allow me to give you and your artist, Mr. Norman, my best thanks. I bred them from birds I bought from Messrs. Forse and Son, of Leyton, and Mr. F. Easterling, of Battersea—gentlemen I am proud to call friends, who have at all times been ever ready to help and advise. With the aid of Cage Birds I am looking forward to breeding a few more this season.—Alfred Skinner (Stratford, E.).

Lovers of the photographic art and of nature photography will welcome No. 1 of "The Nature Photographer," the official organ of the Nature Photographic Society. The Society hope to publish the journal quarterly, and the pages will, it is promised, be illustrated with some of the finest photographs of unique and rare natural history subjects, with explanations of the methods adopted for obtaining them. The first number, which lies before us as we write, augurs well for the future. The Editor of the journal is Mr. Carl Edwards, F.N.P.S. (Secretary and Treasurer of the above-named Society), from whom (Woodlesford, Leeds) copies of the magazine may be had on application.

A veritable cyclists' encyclopædia is the new catalogue of Rudge-Whitworth bicycles. It illustrates and gives full details of nearly 100 models for 1911, together with the prices, and includes the Rudge Motor Bicycle. There are several pages devoted to exclusive features of the Rudge-Whitworth, an extensive compendium of cycle accessories, and several pages giving the names and prices of every part of a bicycle, as illustrated on the large folding chart which is enclosed in a specially arranged pocket in the cover of the catalogue. This book is invaluable to all cyclists, whether riders of Rudge-Whitworths or not, and the value of the large folding chart cannot be over-estimated. As this encyclopædia is sent post free to all applicants we strongly recommend cyclists or intending cyclists to write for one at once. Immediate attention will be given to any letter that mentions Cage Birds. Write to Messrs. Rudge-Whitworth, Ltd., Coventry.

The Management of Gouldian Finches.

SIR,—In my article on the management of Gouldian Finches, which appeared in last week's issue of your paper, I omitted one very important item, as follows: When the birds have been in possession of a person about two weeks (not less), they then require a constant supply of shell grit, I myself preferring crushed oyster shell (fine), of which they consume a large amount. When nesting give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia at least once a week, as they do not take the exercise required when nesting, and hence trouble then ensues. Also allow me to state that upon going round my birds yesterday (Sunday) I found one pair sitting upon eggs, both cock and hen on nest together, which they have built in a large rush nest. Some of the others are in roller wicker cages, and some in cocoanut husks with tops removed.

Proposed Linnet Club for Manchester and District.

SIR,—I have been requested to ask the Linnet fanciers around Manchester, through CAGE BIRDS, if they are in favour of forming a Linnet Singing Club. I am sure by the number of fanciers who have asked about it there is every chance of making it a success. I might mention that Mr. Kremmer (bird specialist, of Tib Street) has promised a special prize for a contest in this district, and would, I am certain, give every support to a club of its kind. I would be pleased to see any fancier who would assist me in this effort; or they can write me, when I will reply to them. Will Linnet Club secretaries kindly advise me if they would pay a visit with their birds to assist in making it a success? Any information which will tend to the formation of a club I will be pleased to receive.

Scottish Metropolitan Open Derby O.A.

SIR,—We circulated our membership tickets for 1911 amongst a very large number of Scotch Fancy and Belgian exhibitors a few days ago. Possibly some fanciers may have been overlooked, and, if so, should they apply to any of the undernoted a copy will be despatched per return. Those who have received extra copies, we desire them to assist us in disposing of them, and likewise wish all present member to do their very best in helping us to secure others. We request the fanciers to examine Rule 2, that our association, for the very small sum of 3s., gives the privilege of showing ten birds and free admission to show. (No entry fees are charged.) Also in Rule 4 it says that all cash left over, after meeting working expenses, is paid as prize money, distributed equally over each class. The date for joining the association terminates on May 31. But with a view to saving the heavy expenditure incurred by printing recall notices and the postages thereon, we will esteem it a favour if fanciers will send in their replies by the first week in May. During our three years as a "Derby" we were splendidly supported, as our membership proves—namely, 178, 133, 132—which was very highly appreciated by us. Yet we are of the opinion that our list could with ease be substantially increased. We have set ourselves the task of doing so, and it is to you, gentlemen, that we look for the springing of this about.

Climbing the Yorkshire Exhibition Ladder.

SIR,—We are sorry that we have offended Mr. Taylor with the letter you published on the 18th. We see that he charges us with making statements which we know to be untrue. We think that if Mr. Taylor had read carefully, and not jumped to conclusions so hot-headed, he would find we said that the hen alluded to was claimed (but we did not say who by), and then successfully shown by Mr. Taylor. We find that he acknowledges for the first time that he had had the bird, which is something to our credit. Then he says that we knew the bird was never shown at Crystal Palace. Whether this is so or not we will leave your readers to judge for themselves after they read the following. After breeding a good bird, and winning with it, and only being novices, we naturally followed it from show to show, noticing the reports, which was quite easy, because we knew Mr. Taylor had it, and were quite familiar with its markings. Then it changed hands again, and we were told by three different persons where it had gone to, and the gentleman indicated showed a bird at the Crystal Palace, winning 2nd prize, which was (according to reports) identically the same in markings and everything. Moreover, we were told by a fellow fancier who was going backwards and forwards to Mr. Taylor's at the time, that it was the bird we used to have. Mr. Taylor says it is a cheap way of advertising; now in this Mr. Taylor is sadly wrong, as we have no need to advertise our birds, as they advertise themselves.

BLACKBURN AND MITCHELL.

What Constitutes an Evenly-marked Mule.

SIR,—To "err is human," and Mr. Weston's letter in your issue of last week is another proof of the truth of this old adage. No one who knows Mr. Weston will deny his ability and bona-fides, but his judgment in wrong-classing an admittedly even-marked Mule in a class open to even-marks is somewhat incomprehensible to me. He apparently based his decision on a standard other than that provided by the schedule under which he was judging. Mr. W. cannot, and, I believe, does not, try to maintain that the bird disqualified was not evenly marked, but argues that a two-pointed bird should be shown in an unevenly-marked class, a manifest absurdity unless specifically provided for in the schedule. My object is not to blame Mr. Weston, however, but to call attention to the fantastic manner in which our language is distorted by some fanciers whose knowledge of birds exceeds their familiarity with the significance of words. Why should they place a meaning on words totally opposed to the one generally recognised? For instance, no one but a fancier would designate a splash or blot as a "tick"; and what a meaningless word "point" is when applied to the markings on a bird. I feel sure the interest of aviculture would be better forwarded by the universal adoption of a more exact terminology and by discarding technical terms inconsistent with their usual meaning and which naturally lead to misunderstanding. G. H. COUZENS.

SIR,—The process of reasoning by which Mr. Couzens arrives at the conclusion that I, personally, was in error, is quite as incomprehensible to me as my action appears to be to him. The present-day custom that a two-pointed bird shall not compete as an even-mark is not one for which I am personally responsible. Then why blame poor me? Mr. Couzens is entitled, of course, to look upon it as absurd that the Border Fancy Club, the Yorkshire Canary Club, and the National British Bird and Mule Club should decide that a two-pointed bird must compete not as an even-marked, but as an unevenly-marked bird. It seems to me, however, not altogether inconceivable that the fanciers who arrived at this decision considered they were acting in the best interests of the varieties over whose welfare they preside. Still, "It's never too late to mend," and possibly Mr. Couzens' letter will serve to show them the error of their ways. It is news to me that I based my decision "on a standard other than that provided by the schedule." The schedule nowhere states that two-pointed birds are to compete as even-marks (nor do the L. and P.O.S. rules), or that judges are not to be guided by present-day customs obtaining in the Fancy. The fact that two competitors actually entered the only remaining two-pointed birds in the unevenly-marked class surely clearly shows—(1) that there was a difference of opinion as to the proper class in the schedule for two-pointed birds; and (2) that a majority of owners of two-pointed birds considered the unevenly-marked class as the correct one. Had I been exhibiting, instead of judging, I should certainly have looked upon the uneven class as the place for my own two-pointed Mules. And I am afraid that even the prospect of earning the approbation of Mr. Couzens will never seduce me into wrongclassing birds which I think I am justified in considering as being in their right class, and giving prizes to birds I consider in their wrong class. Whether two-pointed Mules ought to compete with four and six pointed is another matter, and one which I must leave in the hands of those most interested, viz., our breeders and exhibitors of Mules, and the committees of shows. The latter can put in their schedules, "Evenly-marked, two, four, or six pointed," or "Evenly-marked, four or six pointed," when exhibitors will know where they are, so to speak, and judges cease from making "errors" (except, poor fellows, in other matters).

G. E. WESTON.

SIR,—I thank Mr. Weston for his letter. It is full of evidence that the present state of affairs under this head is anything but satisfactory. Let me assure my friend that the thought of a pre-conceived connection between Mr. House's article and the wrong classing of a mule at the Crystal Palace never entered my head. Mr. House's article dealt somewhat fully with a point which had been accentuated by Mr. Weston's action at the Palace, and the clear evidence in other correspondence of the lack of unanimity in the Fancy on this point helped to persuade me that some clearer, general and widespread understanding was necessary. Hence my letter. I raised no dispute over the wisdom or right of the Yorkshire Clubs, the Border Club, or the N.B.B. and M.C. to adopt their own specific views on the matter. Let that be clear. They have a right to put their specials in competition under conditions such as they please. I go further and say, that I attach great weight to the views of these specialist clubs. I even go further still and concede that their views when adopted may be for the benefit of the Fancy at large. But even these concessions do not remove the patent fact that there is a lack of general agreement on the score of what constitutes even-marking. I did not intend to criticise Mr. Weston's action; I did not do so. It was merely a reference in illustration of my point, and as such I adhere to it. The knowledge and experience I have so generously had attributed to me by my friend, Mr. Weston, may be deserved or may not, but it has taught me that it would be infra dig in the acutest sense were I to criticise personally in a letter to the Fancy Press the conduct of one of my fellow judges at a show. Hence I am not called upon, and ought not to be called upon, neither will I accede to the call, to place in juxtaposition to Mr. Weston's award what I would have done under similar circumstances. Here is the gist in a nutshell of the aim and object I had in view when I wrote my letter. I give it in my own words: "I am not objecting to the Yorkshire Fancy's version, but should like to see an universal 'law' as the result of an appeal to the wide commonalty of Canarydom. Let it be made apparent, once and for all, to those who do not see it at present, what is an evenly marked bird, and what is not. It is quite certain, no matter what some of us may conclude, that there is by no means a general concensus of opinion upon the point." This view is supported by Mr. House's bold assertion of the existence of a strange "paradox" in Yorkshire Club "law." And may I take the liberty of calling Mr. Weston's attention also to a deadly proof of the force of my contention that there is no general understanding to be found in his own reply to me? Mr. Weston says: "Now at the Palace my unfortunate position was this: I found one two-pointed bird in the 'even marked' class, and three two-pointed birds in the 'unevenly-marked or variegated' class, so I had no option but to hand out a 'wrong class' ticket to someone or other. I came to my decision on what seemed to me the present-day custom on the matter." That is a plain statement, and a logical conclusion for Mr. Weston to arrive at, shall we say, from the point of view from which he looked at it. The person who attributes bias to such a decision is unworthy of notice. But the difficulty remains—the exhibitors clearly were not of one mind as to the eligibility of a two-pointed bird, hence one of them had to suffer. I am aware there will always be sufferers by reason of stupidity or wilfulness, but in this case I argue that it was on account of the lack of a clearly defined rule. Mr. House lays down—not of himself, for he declares it to be a "paradox"—but from the point of view of the Yorkshire Fancy, the "law." Mr. Weston decides his point, and with great show of reason, on "custom." But the "paradox" remains. The Fancy at large is not sure of its ground, that is certain. Can we not—for Mr. House, Mr. Weston, and myself may be nearer to agreement than either of us may perhaps, at the moment see—set some plan going which will settle this point once and for all, and give Mr. Weston his ardent desire of affording every exhibitor "a run for his money?"

G. G.

SIR,—Mr. Gardner's first letter seemed to me to express surprise and a measure of dissent at my "wrong-classing" a two-pointed Mule because of the Yorkshire Club's rule that a two-point shall not compete as an even-mark. He stated: "Mr. Weston applied the rule to Mules. . . . It is scarcely an answer to critics to quote the Yorkshire law. Such, it is apparent, is not the general law. . . . It seems to me that the Yorkshire specialist clubs never intended, neither do they wish, that their 'law' should be general in its appreciation to other varieties." The whole trend of Mr. Gardner's letter seemed to me to be that I unjustifiably applied the Yorkshire "law" to another variety—Mules, to wit. It is true that I did not do anything of the kind, but if Mr. Gardner writes thusly concerning a fellow-judge's action, it is surely a small matter to ask in return how he himself would have dealt with the situation. However, as Mr. Gardner now says definitely that he did not criticise my action, my view of his first letter was clearly a mistaken one. With his desire for a complete understanding as to what shall constitute an "even-marked" bird, I am in entire sympathy. There should be a universally accepted definition. And the same remark applies to "What is a tick?" "What constitutes a Novice?" etc., etc.

G. E. WESTON.

Hints on Norwich Plainhead Breeding and Rearing.

SIR,—The first thing I would like to tell the beginner is about the buying of birds. He should buy a marked yellow cock and buff hen. The reason for a marked yellow cock is to get colour. Have the cock as large as possible. You need not expect fineness of feather when buying a large one; it does not matter if it is a little rough as it will be easy to get a fine feathered small buff hen. From this pair you will get a very good show yellow hen. Now about the pairing. The first thing is to trim the birds' beaks, claws, and tails, especially hens' tails, as dirt often gets on them. Beginners should be very careful where they put their cage—not put it in a draught. Give plenty of light, and be careful not to alter the cage after pairing. When the young come, I give no egg food on the first day, but give eggs and biscuit on the second day, and green-meat till they leave their nest. After they leave, put them in a nursery cage alongside the breeding cage for about a week, so that the cock can feed them through the wires. After that put the young into a long cage, and give very little egg food, and no green food, and crush their seed for four or five weeks, also put water both inside cage and outside cage. Watch their claws; if these get "slipped," put in a broad spar perch), and the claws will come right. When colour-feeding, the main thing is to keep out the light, which can be done by a curtain.

How to Solder with Resin.

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Linnet," like many others for cage work, cannot get liquid spirits to stay on the job, so he is advised to try another liquid. "Linnet" is doubtless capable of soldering, so let him stick to his iron or blow lamp, whichever tool he prefers, and for a flux that will stick to the work he must use a paste. I have always used the advertised Fluxite Paste, which I see another correspondent recommends, and I have never had any trouble whatever.

The Hemsworth and Dis. C.B.S.

SIR,—A meeting was held on February 8th, at the King's Head Hotel, Hemsworth, when it was decided to form a society, to be called the Hemsworth and District Cage Bird Society, with headquarters at the King's Head Hotel, Hemsworth. There was a good number of fanciers present. The election of officers: Thomas Tait, Esq., president; Messrs. A. Taylor, vice-president; Mr. A. Davies, treasurer; and James W. Gillings, Victoria Street, Hemsworth, secretary. The whole of members form committee. A further meeting was held on February 15th, when the minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed, and more members joined the society. Next meeting to be held on Wednesday, March 8th, at 7.30 p.m. prompt. Business: Consideration of rules, etc. All Fanciers are invited to join; distance no object.

Hints Wanted on the Making of Birdlime.

SIR,—In reply to your correspondent re hints on bird lime making, here are some good recipes which, I think, will meet the requirements of perhaps a good many readers for making birdlime. Proper birdlime is made from the inner bark of the holly, which is taken in the summer; this is boiled with water for several hours, until quite soft. The water is then drained off, and the pulp placed in a covered pit, being left for several weeks to ferment. It is then pounded in a mortar, kneaded with the hands, and kept under water till required. Spurious bird lime may be made by boiling linseed oil until it becomes sticky. This will take many hours. Another preparation is composed of boiled linseed oil, 3 ozs. gum, or else Venice turpentine 1 ozs. and castor oil.

A Bamboo Front for Softbill Cages.

SIR,—The enclosed is a sketch of a cage front, which is very strong and most useful for Thrushes, etc. A is the top bar with nails in all along; B is the bottom board on to which the nails are fixed to same; C are pieces of thin bamboo which form the "wires." When the bamboo is cut in the required lengths, fix one end of the hollow bamboo over the nails on B, then fix the top end under A, and drive the nails into the bamboo, to hold same in position, as shown in sketch. This front looks well when painted.

A. BAILEY.

The New C.B.S. for Smallbridge

SIR,—In reply to "Well-Wisher" (or, rather, "jealous"), I was not aware that I said anything about the fanciers I was connected with, or any birds they own, or any that I own myself, and when I say "jealous" I mean of the society being formed, and not of myself, as he takes it. So I am not going into my capabilities, or anyone else's. But I hope in future "Well-Wisher" will mind his own business, and not other people's.

NOVICE.

SIR,—"Well-Wisher" says I am suspecting the wrong man. I don't think so. I know he is not a member of Littleborough, but that does not say he never has been. Your first letter, "Well-Wisher," made one think nobody had a cup but Littleborough; and don't get ideas about giving anything that does not belong to you—even old cups are made of better stuff than some fanciers. You started about a society; now you are talking about better fanciers and birds. But don't be too sure about that; even novices beat champions sometimes. Our meeting is open on March 6, at Carside Street, and we are willing to face you if you care to come. I think it would have been better of you to write to the secretary of this society instead of to the Press.

REAL FANCIER.

An Appeal for a Port Glasgow Fancier.

SIR,—An appeal is being made by the bird fanciers of Port Glasgow on behalf of Felix Graham, who, through ill-health, now for the last six years, and under grave circumstances, is compelled to part with his valuable prize stock of Canaries. If any brother fancier would like to take a subscription book for this deserving cause, he can have same by writing to the secretary, Mr. J. Forrester, Clune Brae Head, Port Glasgow. The subscription takes the form of a drawing, which will be held in the Co-operative Halls, Port Glasgow, on April 15th, 1911. Tickets for same are sixpence each. The winning numbers will be published in CAGE BIRDS, and certain local papers.

Rare British Birds at the Palace Show.

SIR,—"Thistle Top" says: "What a change of place; the Corn Bunting winning at the Palace did not even get noticed at the Edinburgh Show." Yes; what a change of place from the previous Scottish National Show, where the same bird won in a much better class (for Mr. Bruce). But when visiting the S.N. Show I noticed a few things in the British section that I am afraid the judges had looked at from afar, and I put the Corn Bunting amongst them. All the same, I was pleased to make Mr. Watson's personal acquaintance, and to congratulate him on his win. No doubt he possesses a good Meadow Bunting, and if (as is said) the bird was entitled to compete at the Palace, and appeared there in the same form as I saw it at Edinburgh, then I think it certainly deserved more than it got.

A New Cage Bird Society for Sittingbourne and District.

SIR,—The Sittingbourne and Dis. C.B.S. held their first meeting on February 28th, at 13, High Street. It proved a great success. We have decided to run a Cage Bird Society in this district, open to a ten-mile radius, and we are sure that those who wish to make it a success will become members, and strongly support it. Mr. T. P. Monday, officiated as chairman for this meeting. The following officials were appointed: Chairman, Mr. G. Whatford; hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. B. Tidy; Emergency Committee, Messrs. W. Broadbridge, T. Attwood, and Jeffreys. We have also decided to hold a members' show on March 11th, at the New Inn, Murston, which we hope will be greatly appreciated. On the motion of Mr. G. Whatford, we thanked Mr. T. P. Monday for his kindness in officiating as chairman for this evening, which brought a very successful gathering to a close.

Prize Cards at the Horticultural Hall (L.C.B.A. Show).

SIR,—I would like to air a small grievance I have with respect to the late L.C.B.A. Show. I was successful in getting in the cards with half-a-dozen of my birds, without getting in the money. My birds arrived home with a sort of mutilated tram ticket on the cages. I presumed, therefore, that the usual prize-cards would be sent on; but they have not yet arrived; so I conclude this is the L.C.B.A.'s usual prize-card. If this is so, I think it a great mistake on the part of the management. There are a good many novices like myself, who dare not hope to get in the money, yet look forward to their cards. There are several novices belonging to C.B.S. that I am connected with who will withhold entries if we cannot have a card, at least, for the time, money, and labour we expend on our birds to get them ready for showing. I visited the Horticultural Hall while the show was on, and thought how perfect the arrangements were, so that I think this must be an oversight on the committee's part.

CARDOS.

The Keeping and Hand-rearing of Hawfinches.

SIR,—Just a few lines which may be of some use to my novice friends, on the keeping and hand-rearing of our noble bird, the Hawfinch, the largest of our British Finches. I have found the Hawfinch a very interesting pet, and one of the best for the show bench; and if hand-reared, it will become very steady. My method of hand-rearing is:—I take the bird from the nest when 10 days old, as it is by then getting nicely feathered. This is my recipe: I hand-rear them on hard-boiled egg fresh daily—the whole of the yolk, and half of the white—adding two Marie biscuits to each egg; the whole sprinkled with maw seed twice a week. I feed on this, till the bird is a month old. Then I start giving seed, and gradually decrease the quantity of soft food. My seed mixture for an adult bird is: Finch mixture, hemp and Parrot mixture, which I have found excellent, providing, of course, the seed is a good sample (which is most important, as bad seed gives bad results). The cages I use are 3 feet long, 10 inches wide, and 16 inches high. As the perch is liable to spoil the plumage of a show bird, I only use two perches, which I place 10 inches apart. I will try now to explain the show points. First of all the bird should be as large as possible, with a good V-shaped bib, a fierce-looking eye, and a broad head. The colours vary considerably, but what we want is a good rich colour, and not light, which is the case with most of them, I am sorry to say; and this, in my opinion, is owing to their having been cage-moulted indoors; birds that are moulted in an open aviary turn out to be of better colour. Some fanciers, I am sorry to say, colour-feed our beautiful British birds; this, in my opinion, spoils them entirely. A bird that is moulted out its natural colour and is given a good cage and a bath on fine days from infancy, will, I am sure, not be far behind in winning its owner plenty of honours on the show bench.

The Importation of Animals into the U.S.A.

SIR,—Respecting the free importation of animals under certain conditions into the United States, thinking that the new regulations regarding the above might be of interest to your readers, we take the liberty of giving them, and will be only too pleased to give any further information that may be desired, either as regards rates of freight and regulations for the United States or elsewhere. "Beginning Jan. 1st, 1911, there will be required, in order to obtain free entry of animals imported for breeding purposes under paragraph 492 of the Tariff Act of August 5, 1909, evidence as follows: 1. The affidavit of the importer that he is a citizen of the United States, and that the animals are imported specially for breeding purposes. This affidavit will be considered in connection with the circumstances of the importation, and any further evidence required which the collector may deem necessary to establish the allegations. The fact that the animals are pure bred, of a recognised breed, and accompanied by proper certificate establishes their status as breeding animals. The use of such animals incidentally for driving or working is not inconsistent with the requirements for free entry. 2. A certificate from the Department of Agriculture, stating that the animals are pure bred, of a recognised breed, and duly registered in the foreign book of record established for that breed. With this certificate there must also be produced and submitted to the collector the certificate of record and pedigree on which the certificate of the Department of Agriculture is based, together with the affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer that such animals are identical with those described in the said certificates."

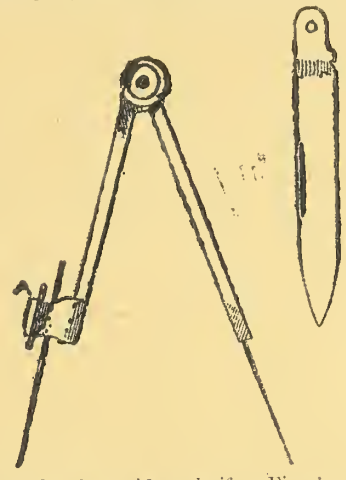
No. 486.
An Improved Scraper.
Sent by Mr. P. Linley, 10, Northolme, Gainsboro'.



The sketch shows an improved form of scraper. It consists of a round rod riveted to an angle piece, as shown. The piece marked "A" is the general form used, but sometimes it is necessary to use something sharper. The scraper should then be turned over, and the sharpened blade "B" used. The eye end is useful for hanging it up after use.—P. Linley.

No. 487.
A Round-Door Cutter.
Sent by Mr A. Hamilton, 3, Lodge Avenue, Urmston, near Manchester.

I send you a sketch of an easily-made round door cutter. First take an ordinary black-lead compass, as in the sketch, and also the small blade of an old penknife. Fix the blade in the compass and tighten the screw, A. When going to use the article fix at required radius; then tighten screw at B, and it is ready for use.—A. Hamilton.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Knowing Bullfinch.

I have a very tame Bullfinch. One day, I did not give him quite so much seed as the rest, as he was getting so fat. He noticed this very carefully. The next day I left some flowers in bud in the same room, and Bullie was out flying about at the same time. When I went into the room again to get my roots of flowers, I found my Bullie had picked all the buds out, and scattered them all over the floor. He is not allowed to fly about any more.—Sent by Gladys Harris, Edenhurst, Decoy Road, Newton Abbot, S. Devon.

Clever Goldfinch Mule.

On the day that I was born, there was hatched in my father's bird-room a Goldfinch Mule. Throughout the year it seldom ceased to sing. Whenever my father came into the room it started singing. At any time, even in the dark, if it were told to it would sing. It died this winter, 11 years of age.—John Robertshaw (age 11½), 151, Bolton Brow, Sowerby Bridge, Yorkshire.

Prefers Cage-Life.

Mr. W. Gregory, of Loughborough, has kept a Goldfinch in a cage for the past 12 months. One day, while he was cleaning out the cage, the door flew open, and the little bird departed high into the air. As no hopes of its return were entertained, Mr. Gregory and his wife were much surprised when nearly two hours later a gentleman called at the house, and casually remarked that he had seen a little bird hopping about near the doorstep. On going outside, Mrs. Gregory noticed that it was her Goldfinch, and she captured it without the slightest trouble.—Sent by Albert Fitzsimmons (age 10), 31, Lichfield Road, Sneinton, Nottingham.

*The Pretty Robin.

Have you seen the Robin?
Pretty little bird,
Perched on the garden wall
How he may be heard!

Listen to his music,
Hear him sweetly sing:
Is he not a darling,
Pretty little thing?

Robin never leaves us,
All the winter long;
When the snow is falling,
We may hear his song.

LONNYRIGG AND DIST. C.B.S.

Large muster of members and friends gathered in the Forester's Arms, Feb. 25th, to hear a lecture on British birds by Mr. J. Steel (Dalkeith), who held their attention from start to finish. They soon became aware that Mr. Steel is a keen student of Nature, the habits and mannerisms of the various species being well described, also the points which combine to make an ideal specimen, also the methods of meating-off and steadying. He was able to give us the benefits of his experience. He terminated his address with a plea for kind treatment of the captive birds, strongly deprecating the keeping of intractable specimens, the taking of adults during the breeding season, and the buying or taking of immature Finches at a time which means death to 90 per cent., viz., early August. His characteristic humour revealed itself during the address, and kept his hearers smiling, sometimes loudly. Mr. Steel was accorded a most hearty vote of thanks. This being the first lecture on birds delivered in this district, it must be pronounced a decided success, and the attendance was a record. A programme of song terminated a most pleasant meeting. New members enrolled: R. Johnstone, J. King, A. Gilchrist, J. Nangle, D. Hogg, and D. Flockart.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Burn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, Feb. 21st, Mr. Charleton (President) presiding over a good attendance. Twelve new members were admitted into membership. Mr. A. W. Watson offered a medal for competition at table shows, confined to novices, for one season. Mr. G. Brown offered a special for the best bird shown by a novice at the first table show; he also offered to provide prize cards for all classes. On the motion of Messrs. Stormont and Whitefield the donors were accorded a sincere vote of thanks. Unanimously decided to hold table show (confined to novices) at next monthly meeting, 21st March, for British birds, meeting beginning at 7.30 p.m. Mr. A. W. Watson was unanimously appointed judge. Entry fee, 2d. Classification was drawn up and agreed to. Committee of society appointed: Messrs. Thomson, Craig, Brown, Brash, Bankier, and Dickson, with power to add to their numbers. Minute of Rule Committee read, and the recommendations were well received, and all passed with one correction. Decided, to order 100 copies of rules. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—J. T. Mackie, Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Pair show held 25th Feb, when 35 pairs were staged in the eight classes provided. There were some excellent pairs on view, which, with a successful breeding season, should provide the members with some good stock for exhibition. There was a good turn-out of fanciers and others present. Mr. Clark placed the cards in his usual thougbtful and painstaking manner.

In the British section: 1, Surridge; 2, Johnson; 3, Penney. After the awards were given, Mr. Robson favoured the meeting with a few interesting and instructive remarks, giving his reasons for his awards, and showing the good and bad points in the birds. Mr. Robson was given a hearty vote of thanks. Next meeting will be the annual meeting Mar. 9, and as much important business is to be done, a full attendance is desired. Wm. G. Bruce, Sec.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual pair show held February 15th, and proved very successful, especially in the Norwich section. We had arranged for three classes, and although the Norwich and Yorkshires were well filled, we had to cancel the A.O.V. Some very good birds were put down. Judge, Mr. J. Lomas, whose awards gave every satisfaction.

NOR.: 1, 2, Smith; 3, Bailey. YORKS: 1, 2, Charnock; 3, Hulme. Before the judge gave his awards in we had a judging competition; this was won by P. Hart. These competitions are very instructive to members. During the evening Mr. Taylor, one of our members, gave 10s. towards a cup, and it was readily followed by 5s. each from Mr. Ordish and Mr. Bailey. But we intend to have a good understanding how it has to be won before we start. I think we are going to have a very strong Society here. We made three new members, which brings the total to about 28. Mr. Dawson said he would give a medal, to be won by British bird and Mule fanciers. So now is your time, local fanciers; rally up and join our ranks.—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

WALLASEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

Pair show held Public Library, Stoke Newington, Feb. 15, when about 80 pairs were exhibited. This was a record show in every respect, the quality being far in advance of previous years. All sections and varieties were well represented, and competition fairly keen, especially in novice Yorkshire class with 27 exhibits. Several real good pairs were shown in the Mule and Hybrid classes, which contained some well-known Palace winners. Eight new members were nominated, making 15 this year, and we now start the year with about 90 members. A splendid attendance proved how popular these shows have become, the hall being crowded. Mr. J. Robson judged.

FORT WILLIAM (N.B.).

Ninth annual show, open to Inverness and Argyleshire, including Rannoch, Bridge of Orchy, Lyndrum, and Crianlarich, held 22nd Feb. It was only at the eleventh hour that the committee decided to again hold their show, which is a month later than usual. Entries were scarcely so numerous as in previous years, but the quality all over was of a very high standard, many noted winners being present, especially Mr. Fraser's buff Siskin Mule (Palace winner), which secured first prize, for the thirtieth time. Siskins were one of the finest lots we have seen for a time. Yorkshires have fairly caught on in the Fort, and proved to be the best of the Canary section, Mr. McDougall having quite a field day. A feature of the show was a collection of foreign birds consisting of Gouldian and Zebra Finches, Mannikins, Weavers, Firefinches, etc., kindly lent for exhibition by a local gentleman. During the afternoon and evening the show was well patronised. Mr. H. Adamson, who held the secretarial reins for the first time, proved quite an adept, and was ably assisted by a band of right good fanciers, who saw to the convenience of exhibitors and exhibits alike. The office bearers are: Committee, Messrs. McDougall, Downie, Forsyth, Swan, Hope, Cameron, Stewart, McGregor, Blair, Keats, Fraser, Clarkston, McKenzie, Bryce, and A. McKenzie (treasurer).

The Critique.

NOR. CK. (UNFED): 1, Hope, cl. buff, nice head, grand solid body, shown in faultless condition, wins Hyde's special; 2, 4, Fraser, cl. yell., good stamp, fine carriage, presses, 4th huff, good stamp; 3, Cameron, varieg. buff, full chested, good head and carriage. HEN (UNFED): 1, 2, 4, Fraser, 1st lovely cl. buff, big bouncing bird, wins well, 2nd buff, nice skull and frontal, 4th varieg. yell., good all-round; 3, McPherson, varieg., all there for size and shape, nice fettle; 5, Clarkston, cl. buff; 6, Hope. CK. (COL.-FED): 1, 2, 3, 4, Fraser, 1st right good cl. yell., in faultless order, closely followed by a varieg. yell. of grand substance; 3rd tkd. buff, nice silky feather, good body and carriage, 4th cl. buff, slightly soft when we saw it, looks like a good one; 5, McDougall; 6, Cameron. HEN: 1, 3, Fraser, 1st cl. yell., nice bullie type, put down in rare fettle; 3rd cl. buff, another of the same kidney; 2, Hope, cl. buff, sweet head, full chested, nice carriage; 5, McDougall. YORKS. CK.: 1, 2, 3, McDougall, outstanding team, wins two specials, 1st very stylish buff, great length, well drawn, tight as wax; 2, 3, both yells., same stamp, lovely silky feather, both in faultless condition; 4, 5, McKenzie, nice buff, very slim, fails only in length; 6, McColl. HEN: 1, 2, 6, Fraser, another nice trio, 1st lovely tkd. buff, well drawn, upstanding, nice pipe tail, wins well, 2nd cl. buff, also good one, not quite so stylish as winner; 3, 4, 5, McKenzie, 3rd cl. yell., fine length, sweet head, good wing carriage, presses hard, 4th another cl. buff, not quite so well drawn as third. BORD. CK.: 1, 2, Connachie, 1st lovely cl. yell., correct stamp, nicely rounded, close fitting wings, 2nd cl. buff, sweet head, nice jaunty carriage, not much between; 3, Mrs. McPherson, bonny tkd. buff, very typical, in rare condition; 4, no name, cl. buff, fine substance, right sort; 5, 6, Fraser. HEN: 1, McDougall, cl. buff, in full bloom, nicely tapered, good carriage and wings; 2, Fraser, cl. yell., dainty damsel, must have pressed winner hard; 3, 4, Connachie, 3rd even-marked yell., nicely marked, good type, fails just a little in condition, 4th ticked buff, good head and wing carriage; 5, Fraser; 6, Beattie. MATCHED PAIRS, CANARY: 1, 3, 4, Fraser, 1st varieg. yell. and cl. buff Nor., nicely balanced, 3rd and 4th much the same as first, both well mated; 2, Mrs. McPherson, cl. yell. and tkd. buff Bord., both of right stamp, very likely pair; 5, McPhail; 6, no name. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, McDougall, varieg. yell. Lancs., good head and body 2, Crabb, cl. buff Lancs. MULES: 1, 2, 3, Fraser, 1st old champion Siskin-Can., winner of 30 firsts, despite age is in lovely trim, quite a marvel for col. and markings, 2nd Linnet-Can., very nice yell., deep col., needs more size, 3rd Greenie-Can., in fine condition, wee shade pale; 4, W. Fraser, Goldie, good size, nice blaze, condition; 5, Gillies 6, Clarkston. GOLDIE, BRIT.: 1, 3, McDougall, 1st right good typical Britisher, deep blaze, finely tanned and buttoned, 3rd fails just slightly in condition, otherwise quite a nice Finch; 2, 4, McCallum, 2nd good blaze and tan, cl. cheeks, fine chest, not quite so clearly buttoned, 4th good bird. GREENFINCH: 1, 2, McKenzie, 1st bouncing big Greenie, full-chested, grand skull, teeming with col., staged in faultless order, 2nd Nat. col., nice frosting, sweetly made 3, Cameron, wee shade small, nice bird otherwise. BULLFINCH: 1, Kay, beautiful cap, good chest, col., clean bars, in right good condition; 2, 3, Cameron, 2nd must have pressed winner, good all-round, nicely staged, 3rd not in quite so good condition, nice cap and col. LINNET: 1, Cameron, big bouncing bird, Nor. type, good even col., well pencilled, field moulted, should make a topper; 2, McDougall, nice head and pencilling, very steady, in rare condition 3, McGregor, much the same as second; 4, McKenzie, h.m., looks like a hen, grand silky feather; 5, Hope. REDPOLL, ETC.: 1, 2, 5, Hope, 1st right good Mealy, large bib, pencilling, all there, wins well, 2nd nice Lesser, level col. all over, right sort, 5th fine Twite; 3, McKenzie, f.m. Twite, sweet head, good chest and markings; 4, McCallum, Mealy f.m., good size, cap and bib, fails only in pencilling to winner; 6, Cameron. SISKIN: 1, spl, Cameron, well known winner, good cl. cap and wing bars, size and col., all there, good win; 2, 3, 4, McDougall, three of the finest f.m. Siskins we have seen for a time, 4th best by far, only has bad feet, otherwise perfect model; 5, Hope; 6, McKenzie, a grand class all through. A.O.S.: 1, Fraser, very good Hawfinch, has class to itself. BOYS' BRIT.: Largest class in show: 1, D. Hope, Bullie hen, tight as wax, could have won in open class; 2, J. Hope, one of the best Reed Buntings we have seen for a time, pure white collar, dense cap and chest marks; 3, J. McMillan, very good h.m. Twite, shown in faultless condition; 4, A. Cameron, sweet little Siskin, good cap and bib; 5, McKenzie, nice Greenie; 6, J. Cameron, another good Siskin.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Members' show held at headquarters, "Swan Hotel," Fountain-street, Manchester, Feb. 11th, when some good specials were competed for. There were two classes—one for young birds rung and bred by exhibitor, and one for old birds. Some very good birds were staged in both classes, and Mr. Massey (Bolton) had a tight job in separating the winners in the young bird class. His decisions gave every satisfaction. We were splendidly supported by the outside public, and the birds were greatly admired by ladies and gentlemen who had never been able to hear the best of the Rollers sings. The room was packed out at times with strangers, and the show was a complete success. Messrs. Wardleworth and R. Kremuer won the two specials given in the old bird class, each receiving an elegant silver spoon with the Manchester coat-of-arms enamelled on the handles. Mr. T. Routledge undertook the management of the show, ably assisted by Mr. Percival, jun. All birds were cleared away in good time, and everyone was delighted at the success of the show, many new members being enrolled.

Mr. Wirth 1st and 2nd prizes; Mr. A. Foulds, 3rd, 4th, 5th, and c.; Mr. Wardleworth, vhc; Mr. Pilling, hc. The first prize bird was a remarkably good deep bird of Mr. Wirth's, and he was heartily complimented by the members in winning the handsome set of carvers given for the special prize. OLD BIRDS, CLASS II.: 1, spl, Wardleworth; 2, 4, spl, Kremner; 3, Percival; ex. 4, Gostling; vhc, Pilling; hc, Robinson, R. Kremner; c, Wareing.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

The members set the ball rolling on February 16, when they held their first pair and British bird show at Hartley Avenue schools. It was in every way successful, a splendid entry of 82, totalling 142 birds in all, being quite beyond expectations. The exhibits were staged to advantage, and Mr. G. Oliver, the genial treasurer, when he made and presented the staging, evidently intended it to last. The show was well patronised during the evening, the room being quite filled with visitors. The classes ran big throughout, and competition was keen. It was evident the show manager, Mr. B. C. Smith, understood the business, and he was greatly assisted by Mr. R. Fox, the able secretary, with Mr. S. Mason and H. B. Rout as show stewards. Mr. A. J. A. Marley judged and gave entire satisfaction.

ADMIRAL DUNCAN (Nott.) O.S.

Open table show, held Feb. 25th, Headquarters, and it proved a success. Seven classes were provided, divided into three sections, a special prize being awarded in each. The Norwich section was the feature of the show, some of the birds being fit to compete in any company. The British bird fanciers were not in such strong force as usual, but, taken altogether, the show proved highly attractive. The special prizes were greatly admired, being of good value, especially considering this was only a table show. The Norwich special (a very handsome case of half-dozen silver-mounted fish knives and forks) was secured by Mr. J. Smedley; the Crest special (a massive 14-day timepiece) by Mr. J. Cowpertwait; and the British bird special (another timepiece) by Mr. J. Wood. The Canaries were judged by Mr. W. Harris, and the remaining classes by Mr. T. W. Harrison, both of whose awards gave general satisfaction. Much credit is due to Mr. J. Cowpertwait for the way in which the show was managed.

STOCK PAIRS.—CRESTS (7): 1, 3, Cowpertwait, leading pair cl. buff ck., green cr. hen, both large birds, the cock being exceptionally good, 3rd buff dk. cr. cock, green C.B. hen, rather smaller; 2, Goode, yell. var. ck., buff hen, typical pair, some thought this pair should have had 1st place. NOR. (8): 1, 3, Smedley, buff tkd. ck., cl. yell. hen, both big winners, the best matched pair in show, 3rd pair of cls., the hen being particularly smart; 2, Hill, yell. tkd. ck., buff tkd. hen, very good cock, handicapped by hen. MULE (3): 1, 2, Wood, Linnet-Can., and Goldie-Can., both pair showed judicious selection; 3, Goode, Bullfinch-Can., both good birds, might have been higher if sexes reversed. BRIT. (13): 1, W. Goode, Yellowhammer, well-known winner, grand specimen; 2, 3, Goode, Linnet and Goldfinch respectively, both extremely good; 4, Wood, Linnet, lacking in col. SELL., CREST, £1 (4): 1, Holmes; 2, H. GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Meeting held Oldham Hall, Feb. 23rd, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in chair. Messrs. Broadbent and Plunkett were nominated for membership. Several notices of motion were read, and will appear on voting papers. These will be in the hands of members in the course of the next few days. Nominations for officers were read over; result of voting will be made known at March meeting. Decided, to have a dinner, and March 16th was the date selected. Arrangements are in the hands of a committee, and members will receive full particulars as soon as venue is settled. Tickets are 2s. 6d. each, and it is hoped as many members and friends as possible will turn up. Cups, medals, and cash specials will be distributed during evening. Fanciers from other societies are requested to attend; they will be welcomed, and we hope to be able to show them the advantages of membership. Members and friends will kindly note: ladies are invited. The end of our financial year is in sight, and the books will be closed on March 8th; in the meantime, members who have not yet paid their subs for 1910 are requested to do so. There are also several members who have not paid in the old show ticket money. Their immediate attention will oblige. It is impossible to make ends meet if members do not co-operate, and it ought not to be necessary to make these requests. Will members kindly notify Secretary of changes of address, so that tthey can be corrected for the balance-sheets? Table show of British birds held during evening, and 30 birds were staged, the cards being placed by Mr. J. Bretherton, who gave entire satisfaction. A vote of thanks was accorded to him for his kindness.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Pair show held Feb. 25th, and was in every sense a great success. There was a record number of entries, 130, and 250 birds staged, being one of the largest pair shows, if not the largest, held in London. Mr. Shakespeare placed the cards, and the following very kindly assisted as stewards: Messrs. J. Oldaker, F. C. Walmsley, and G. E. Weston. A very large number of friends visited the show. At two o'clock could be seen on the secretary's table two dozen CAGE BIRDS ANNUALS, and at 7 o'clock all were sold, showing the great popularity of this little book. The silver challenge cup for most points was won by Mrs. Giddy. The special prize presented by the chairman, Mr. G. Gardner for best pair in show, was won by Mrs. G. E. Weston with a very fine Norwich Green and Bullfinch hen. Special for second best pair presented by Mr. A. Wakefield was won by Mr. C. W. Law with a pair of Norwich. In the champion Norwich class were 13 pairs, in the novice Norwich 18 pairs, and the Yorkshire novice numbered 12 pairs. The success of the show is entirely due to the committee and members alike for the way in which they put their whole heart and soul in it.

N. COUNTIES NORWICH & C.C.C.

Meeting held Feb. 15th, Lockhart's, 65, Grainge Street. Mr. R. W. Smith presided over a good attendance. A table show of Norwich was held, some extra good specimens being on view. Mr. Holden won first in all classes, Mr. J. Currah (Gosforth) judged, and all the members were delighted with the way he had given his awards.

The only other item on the agenda was the selection of medals, which had been won by the members over shows where our patronage had been given, which will be presented at next meeting (general), March 15th, to those who are present, when the election of officials will take place. If any member cannot attend, and has any suggestions which he thinks will benefit the club, sends them, I will only be too pleased to put them on the agenda. Will intending members also attend? If they cannot, please send your names to me, when I will send you full particulars. Membership is confined to the following counties:—Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, Westmoreland. Annual subs., 2/6.—W. Curry, 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Onward Hall, Feb. 21st. Mr. Coulson presided over a good muster of members and friends. After the usual business the second of a series of table shows for Norwich pairs matched for breeding was held—2 classes, open and amateur, and novices. We received far more entries than was anticipated—38 pairs "toed the line" to the judging of Mr. J. Raynes (Manchester), who proved himself a highly competent judge, his awards without exception satisfying the most critical. Some grand pairs were competing, and it took the judge some time to sort them out. He acknowledged that the owners with good luck (which he hoped they would enjoy during the coming breeding season) should see some good cocky birds turned out of this lot. The chairman, by permission of the judge, invited questions to be asked Mr. Raynes as to the placing of the awards, and several members were not slow in taking advantage of this. Mr. Raynes replied to each, showing where the faults lay in mating up. A very interesting meeting was ended with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Raynes. Next meeting March 7th, table show of British birds and muling pairs; Mr. Fairhurst (South Manchester) judge. Birds to be staged 8 p.m. Result of table show:—

PORTSMOUTH C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 22nd, Headquarters. We are pleased to say it was well attended. The business was: To elect judge for annual show. The following gentlemen had kindly offered their services:—Messrs. Heath, Payne, Dobson, Silk, and Robson. A ballot was taken, which resulted in favour of Mr. Robson being elected. Further agreed, to hold a two-days' show as last year, and our date has been fixed for October 18 and 19. Further decided, to spend not less than 25/- on advertising same in CAGE BIRDS. Re the improvement of our staging at shows.—The secretaries were instructed to obtain tenders for new trestels, etc., and put before the members at our next meeting, March 29th. We can boast a splendid hall, it being very spacious with splendid light from top and sides, and free from draughts. We are very thankful to the many exhibitors who patronised our last annual, and wrote so encouragingly to us, expressing their satisfaction for the way in which their birds were returned; we can only assure them it will give us the greatest pleasure to maintain this credit. Our ambition is that this show shall shortly become an important fixture in the South. After the business, the members held a table pair show. About 30 pairs were present. Mr. H. Young kindly placed the cards. We regret to add the pairs for Muling or Hybrid did not muster many, but we hope at our next pair show the class will be better patronised. Vote of thanks accorded Mr. Young for placing cards and describing very ably the various important points to be studied when pairing. This concluded the business of the evening, and brought our February meeting to a close.

MENAI BRIDGE.

This progressive cage bird show was held at the Pier Pavilion, February 25th. The weather was very favourable, and the attendance very fair. The quality of the exhibits exceeded former years; total entries, 190 in the 16 classes provided. We were very pleased to see the Norwich turning out so well in number; and the quality was up to the standard. Yorks. were excellent in number and quality, and the Goldies were a treat in themselves. A few really good Mules were on view. The energetic secretaries, Messrs. Owen Owens and J. E. Jones, got through their work in a very satisfactory manner, and were ably assisted by a good staff of true fanciers. Treasurer Mr. R. W. Roberts as usual made every effort to make the show a success. Great credit is due also to Messrs. W. Nolan, J. Hughes, Owen Jones, R. T. Williams, W. H. Williams, J. Williams, and A. J. Hughes. Mr. T. Owen won Hyde's special. Specials most points:—Nor. Section: E. D. Owen, J. Williams, W. H. Williams; Yorkshire: W. Nolan, T. Owen, J. Thomas, D. Walford; Borders: A. J. Hughes; Mules: R. Jackson; Goldfinch: W. H. Evans; Greypates: O. Jones; British (2 classes): J. Williams, also selling; Foreign: Miss Enid Platt. Mr. J. H. Roe made the awards.

BARRINGTON AND CHOPPINGTON S.C.C.B.S.

Meeting held 25th. Decided, to hold a nest feather show July 22nd; judge, Mr. Gray (Bedlington Station),; and the annual show December 23rd; judge, Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead). Table show also held 25th, of Norwich pairs for breeding purposes. A fair number of pairs were shown, and after the judge, Mr. T. Sanderson (Bedlington) had given his verdict, some discussion took place amongst the exhibitors as to the pairs shown, and the judge had a "lively time of it" to prove the justice of his awards, which he did to the satisfaction of all.

Awards—J. Dixon 1st, T. Griffiths 2nd, T. Dixon 3rd, vhc; J. Dixon hc, T. Griffiths c.—T. Griffiths, Sec.

Any objections to the foregoing awards or any claims on this fund must reach me not later than March 7th, 1911, or they will not be entertained. The committee will be glad to give consideration to any legitimate claim sent in by that date, especially in those cases where the prize has not been won, but particular attention is drawn to the fact that no claim will be considered unless the entries were marked C.B. or C.B.A. in the catalogue of the show for which such claim is made.—Fred Hammond, Hon. Sec., CAGE BIRDS Prizes Committee, 70, St. Margaret's Road, Bradford.

P.S.—I desire to express my grateful thanks to the various show committees where this competition has been held for their ready compliance (with one exception) with the rule which requires their sending me a free copy of their show catalogue.—F.H.

STONEHOUSE (N.B.) C.B. & H.S.

Table show held Feb. 25th, when three classes were put up. Entries turned out very poorly, but we had quality, if not quantity. The awards were made by Mr. J. Whitelaw.

CAN. PAIRS: 1, spl, Buchannan; 2, Cuthbertson; 3, Melvin. MULE PAIRS: 1, McAlpine; 2, Gray. HYB. PAIR: 1, McAlpine; 2, Buchannan; 3, Buchannan. G. McAlpine won special for best in Buchannan. G. McAlpine won special for best in Mules and Hyb. After packing up our birds we adjourned to a room of "Thistle Bar," where a very pleasant evening was enjoyed in song and sentiment by the following artistes: Messrs. McNiven, McAlpine, Jamieson, Buchannan, Sorbie, Whitelaw, Cuthbertson, and Melvin. Our president made a speech, and we afterwards sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." This concluded one of the many jolly meetings we have had.—Overseer.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 23, headquarters. Decided, to hold first table show of pairs for breeding, March 9th, Mr. Dippie to judge. Classes:—1 Nor., 1 Yorks., 2 Bord., 1 A.O.V. Can., 1 Mule, 1 Hyb. No entrance fee, but all members and friends attending to pay 1d. Birds to be staged by 7.30. Also decided, to give a medal for most points gained at each table show. Mr. J. Moffit (Tesbury) elected a member of committee, and Mr. R. Smith (Tesbury) a member of the Society.—R. Forster, Secretary.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual party held Feb. 18th, when about 30 of our fanciers, their wives and friends, sat down to tea at headquarters, provided by our host, Mr. Dunkerley. And right well did he do his duty. After tea we had singing, dancing, and reciting. M.C., Mr. Travis; chairman, Mr. Sharples. Miss Else gave us "Sweet Belle Mahone"; Mr. Turner rendered "The Rolling Ocean" and "The Diver"; Master A. Hordern recited "A Woman's Example"; Mr. F. Steeple gave us two concertina solos, and Mr. J. Addison sang "The Fisherman and his Child." Mr. Sharples moved a vote of thanks to the artistes. Mr. Steeple seconded. We finished up a very pleasant gathering by singing "Auld Lang Syne."—Jas. Cope, Sec.

BATLEY AND DISTRICT O.F.S.

2nd annual meeting held headquarters, Talbot Hotel, Feb. 13, when the election of officers took place. For the post of president, our worthy host, Albion Barret, was elected; vice-president, F. Hird; treasurer, J. Dean; secretary, G. G. Stafford; auditors, P. Imeson and H. Scott; delegate to Yorkshire Union, P. Imeson (our late delegate, Mr. W. Kershaw, owing to pressure of business, being reluctantly compelled to resign the position). Decided to hold two first feather shows and three winter shows during the coming season, giving a gold medal for winner and silver medal for runner-up, four highest birds to count for points throughout five shows. We had the pleasure of enrolling three new members, which points to the coming season being an improvement on the past.—G. G. Stafford, Hon. Sec.

WINDSOR C.B.A.

Annual dinner, held Feb. 8th, at the "Star and Garter Hotel, Peascod Street. The company sat down to an excellent repast. Mr. J. Simms occupied the chair, and Mr. G. W. King the vice-chair. A musical programme was arranged for by Messrs. W. G. King and F. R. Baker, which was immensely appreciated. During the evening the chairman, on behalf of the society, presented Mr. E. A. Stickland, the hon. secretary, with a very handsome pocket wallet in appreciation of his service to the Association. The following contributed to an excellent programme: Mr. A. and Master Montgomery, Messrs. F. R. Baker, F. K. Keen, G. King, W. King, C. Griffin, J. Hearn, A. E. Hutson, and C. O. Baker. A very hearty vote of thanks was passed to the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Haines, and after singing the National Anthem the company dispersed, having spent a thoroughly enjoyable evening.—E. A. Stickland, Sec.

MANNINGHAM C.B.A.

Annual dinner and prize distribution held Feb. 13, when 53 members and wives and sweethearts sat down to an excellent repast provided by our host and hostess in their usual style. Councillor T. Deighton presented the prizes to winners with a few appropriate remarks. The chair was taken by our president, Mr. J. Ackroyd. Winners of the club prizes: 1, cup, dress length, A. Grange (cup becomes his own property, he having won it three times); 2, Holroyd Bros. (barometer); 3, A. Huddlestone (cruet and cutlery); novice medal, F. Western; consolation prize (bird spray), W. E. Dent; special for unflighted yellow, J. Ackroyd; for unflighted buff, T. Smith; winners of our host's specials, J. Newton, A. Huddleston, E. Hussey, J. Newton, T. Smith, A. Grange, F. Western, Holroyd Bros. The following artists contributed to the social in their well-known style: Miss Smith, Mrs. Leach, Mrs. F. Grange, Messrs. Belmont, J. Normy, Metcalfe, W. Holroyd, accompanist J. W. Dixon.—H. Grange, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting held Arcade Temp. Hotel, 18th Feb., Mr. J. Simpson presiding. This Society continues to make excellent progress. Three new members joined and eight were proposed. Letter read from hall-keeper re terms; as the charge was considered excessive it was submitted to sub-committee to inquire about terms, etc., of other halls, and to report. Classification then reviewed, and with slight modification agreed to. Following judges appointed for Scotch Fancy: Mr. W. Rodgers (Colinton); for Border Fancy, Mr. P. McKenzie (Kelso); for Nor. Crests, Mr. J. Adams (Dundee); for Mules and British Birds, Mr. J. Goodfellow (Edinburgh). Agreed, that we order 1 doz. copies of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. Prize money settled to be 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d., with entry fee 1s. 6d., and that model cards be supplied for all classes. The Chairman made an appeal for annual subs., as this was a new society with no bank balance. The appeal produced a gratifying result. Agreed that next meeting be held Arcade Temp. Hotel, 22nd March, when Mr. Anderson, the well-known British Bird exhibitor, promised a paper on British Birds. The usual votes of thanks brought an enjoyable meeting to a close.—Joseph R. Reid, Secretary.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Bankfoot Schoolroom, Feb. 14th, when a fair good number of members put in an appearance. The balance sheet for the past year showed a balance in hand, after having a very good showing season, at which everybody who had shown a bird was presented with a special, regardless of counting points. All existing officers were asked to resign. A fresh election resulted in most of the retiring officers being re-elected:—President, Mr. J. Taylor; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. Lawson, B. Wilman, W. Myers, and C. Horsley; treasurer, Mr. E. M. Waddington; auditors, Messrs. H. Taylor and D. Lowe; assistant secretary, Mr. W. North; trustees, Messrs. O. Priestley and R. Hinchliffe; management committee, Messrs. C. Bastow, J. Smith, W. Lightowler, E. Oxley, W. Ketteringham; secretary, Mr. F. Gelder, 91, Marsh st., Little Horton, Bradford. A valuable list of specials for next season's showing was compiled, and included 10/6, 5/-, and 2/6 for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd most points, with commended birds only. Several other specials were then promised. Four new members were elected, viz., Messrs. J. Smith, J. W. Cooper, D. Sutcliffe, and J. Mitchell. Then came the most regrettable part of the agenda, 14 members being struck off the list for non-payment of subscriptions. It must not be thought we were hard on these, as each one was written to. Subscriptions are 3/- per year. Will all who intend becoming members send names to the Sec.?—W. North, Assist. Sec., 104, Ryan-st., West Bowling, Bradford.

HANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Albion Hotel, Feb. 22nd, when a good number of members were present, Mr. C. J. Robinson in the chair. Business arising from last meeting's minutes discussed. Decided to have two judges at next annual show. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) was elected to judge Yorkshires. At our next meeting we hope all Norwich fanciers will be present to elect judge. The members hope this step will greatly increase our entries at the coming show.—G. Lawton, Gen. Sec.

PENZANCE AND DISTRICT F.A.

Annual meeting held Rechabite Hall, on Feb. 14, with Mr. E. Michell in chair. The secretary (Mr. J. P. Sampson) in presenting his report, said the number of members for the past year was 44—a record number. The treasurer's report showed a balance of £10 16s. 8d. Mr. E. Michell and Mr. J. C. Rogers were re-elected chairman and vice-chairman respectively; Mr. G. H. Hall, hon. treasurer. Mr. J. P. Sampson resigned his position as hon. secretary, and his place was taken by Mr. Bodinnar. Mr. Robinson elected hon. auctioneer and Mr. Sampson hon. auditor. Committee for cage birds: Messrs. W. H. Warren, E. Phillips, W. J. Uren, J. P. Sampson, W. Clift, J. Carne, R. Gendall, Treganowau, D. Williams, and S. C. Watkins.—W. Bodinnar.

ULSTER O.A.

Annual general meeting held in Clarence Place Hall, Feb. 9, the president, Mr. Bawford, in the chair. Balance sheet adopted as read; it was considered very satisfactory, as the association is now in the best financial position it has been in for some years. The election of officers:—President, Mr. Bawford; secretary, Robert Trimble; trustees, Messrs. Cumming and Stewart; auditors, Messrs. Ronaldson and Smyth; committee, Messrs. Gray, Teasy, Montgomery, Connell, Tansby; Fleming, Lavery, Mc Connel, J. Adams, and Carson. Next annual show 1st and 2nd December (secretaries please note). Decided, to have three specialist judges which were nominated ,and as soon as possible the names of those engaged will be published. Proposed and passed, that the show be included in CAGE BIRDS show dates fixed column, and the secretary was instructed to give the necessary guarantee.—Robert Trimble, Sec.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Meeting held Feb. 24th in Room 4, 83, High-street, the president, Mr. Pearson, occupying chair. Motions (published in a recent issue of CAGE BIRDS) were disposed of. Those by Messrs. J. Barr and W. R. Dunn were rejected by seven votes to nine. Mr. J. Sneaton's motion fared better, being passed without amendment. Decided that the annual show be held in the Town Hall, which was better situated, had a better entrance, and far better terms. In future all meetings will be held in the "Gray Horse" Tavern. Mr. J. Marsh, the proprietor, has given the society their choice of rooms, also storage for staging free, if required. Considerable discussion of that rather "smoky" question, the smoking concert, engaged the attention of the members, and was finally disposed of. Messrs. D. Moffat, J. Muir, and A. Moffat were elected to take the affair in hand. It is to be held in the "Ship Inn." Mr. G. Walker has kindly consented to supply "provisions." The date has been fixed for 18th March at 7 o'clock p.m., and it is expected to be a huge success. The following new members were elected: Messrs. Bradly, Carruthers, McKinlay, and Murphy. The judges elected will be announced shortly.—W. M. Nisbet, Sec.

ECCLES CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

Before a fair gathering of members and friends at headquarters, Mr. W. Fairhurst (Ardwick) provided a most interesting and well-spent evening; but unfortunately, owing to a late start, he had to postpone the Mule Breeding section of his lecture, and deal with British Birds and seeds only. In his opening remarks he in passing expressed his regret at the decision of the Cage Bird Union in dropping Rule 22. Firstly, he said, take the Goldfinch—the "Gentleman of the Family." In his opinion the tip-top exhibition birds were few and far between. His method of obtaining the best was to get the best side of a catcher and pay him to have first pick of his catch; one would then stand a much better chance. He thought the best month was October, when the 'Pates began to get the blaze. He always tried to avoid 'Pates having yellow mouths as they were immature and of no use for cage life. The chief points he went for were: first, size; second, blaze as square as possible; third, cap and tanning on breast. The huttons, he thought, did not differ much, but if the novice would follow those he did not think he could go far wrong. Next we came to the Linnet, the most universally admired bird, chiefly because of his beautiful notes and sweet song. The ideal Linnet was more valuable than the ideal Goldfinch. He advised anyone who wanted a Linnet never to choose in Spring, when the birds had a blood-red breast. It was most cruel to do so, and the birds were no use for cage life in that state. He preferred to buy his birds in early season when frost is on ground, and feed them up to his liking for muling. He advised those on the look-out to follow his example. Wherever he saw a bird he examined it. You never know, he said, where you may drop on a topper—one in a thousand. The ideal bird to take the judge's eye was of Norwich type, with a good round head like a marble, and nice lacing. He liked to buy them lemon or stone-colour breasted and moult out himself. Next we took the Greenfinch, his favourite bird. Some would say it had no song, but he had proved by his own birds that it was a most interesting song; and he thought if properly treated it was a most interesting bird. He had for some time been on the look-out for a tip-top specimen, and he could assure them it was a most difficult job to get one. As a stock mixture he gave White Canary 2 parts, Teazle ½ part, Charlock 1 part, a little Linseed, Sunflower and Hemp. He gave separately, and plenty of them. The Chaffinch was a great favourite of his. Its song, though short, was sweet and interesting. He found the birds very fond of crushed sunflower seeds, crushed walnuts, mealworms, and the maggots lying under cowdung in fields. Stock mixture: 2 parts Canary, ½ part Teazle, ½ part German Rape. Goldfinch stock mixture: equal part Canary, Teazle, and a little Linseed. Hemp he gave separate every day, but he never gave crushed Hemp, as he believed the shell to contain a certain amount of poison. Teazle, he said, should always be carefully examined, as it was a seed which the least damp would soon turn mouldy. A sample of Teazle was then sent round. Afterwards, this seed was sieved to show the dust and dirt from vermin which it contained. Questions were asked, and ably answered by Mr. Fairhurst. Our President, Mr. Sims, then proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Fairhurst for his able and most interesting lecture, and all agreed it had been a capital evening. Mr. Fairhurst promised to give his lecture on Mule Breeding in March, to which we are all looking forward.—H. W. Jones, Hon. Sec.

HEBDEN BRIDGE AND CALDER VALLEY O.S.

Meeting held Nutclough Tavern Feb. 23rd, when it was decided to hold our first feather show on July 8th. Judge, Mr. H. W. Walsh (Halifax).—A. Pickles, Hon. Sec.

ARBROATH SCOTCH FANCY C.B.S

Annual meeting held Crockatt's Rooms, 22nd Feb. There was a large attendance of fanciers. The following office bearers were elected, viz.:— President, Mr. D. C. Craig; vice-president, Mr. Patterson; treasurer, Mr. A. Marr; committee, Messrs. Black, G. Myles, Hastings, W. Myles, Smith, Muir, Rea, Murray, Hennan, Smith. Agreed, to meet two weeks hence to fix show date and judges.—Secretary, J. S. Napier, 52, St. Vigean's Road, Arbroath.

SANDY LANE AND DIST. C.B.A.

Annual meeting held Victoria Hotel, Feb. 21st, with Mr. J. Edmondson (the retiring president) in chair. The balance-sheet for the past year was adopted as read, the association being in a fairly good financial position. Also the following gentlemen were elected officers:—President, J. A. Whitwham; vice-presidents, J. Edmondson and A. Shaw; joint secretaries, S. Ratcliffe and A. Shaw; treasurer, T. Milburn; auditors, S. Moore and P. Drake.—Ratcliffe and Shaw, 94, Woodhouse-grove, Sandy-lane, Allerton, Bradford.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held headquarters, Feb. 23rd. After the usual business, a presentation was made to our late hon. secretary, Mr. J. H. Willows who has worked so hard for the benefit of our society. The present (a handsome marble timepiece) was very suitably engraved. Mr. Max Jacquemin said he was pleased to make the presentation on behalf of the members as a token of esteem and in recognition of the most valuable services rendered by Mr. Willows while in office, and he was sure he had done his best to make the society what it is to-day. In responding, Mr. Willows said it had come as a great surprise, and that he could not find words to sufficiently thank the members for their kindness, which he greatly appreciated. He would treasure this handsome gift as long as he lived. A very pleasant evening was spent, and some excellent singing was rendered by members and friends, for which Mr. Willows proposed a vote of thanks. The meeting was then brought to a close.—T. J. Smith, Hon. Sec.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual dinner held Feb. 25th, Railway Hotel, when about 40 sat down to a good dinner, provided by the proprietress, and also our president, Mrs. Lawson. After the meal one of our oldest members, Mr. J. Lomas, was voted in the chair, and after a few remarks by him we enjoyed ourselves very much with plenty of music and singing. Songs were rendered by Messrs. Ordish, Slater, Clarke, Banks, Carter, and Smith, and also Mrs. Slater, Charleson, and Ordish. We had two friends from Bolton Society, Messrs. Brooks and Brierley (the Bolton secretary), who said they were very glad to see our members clinging to one another as we did, and also that he wished to see Bolton and Leigh get more into touch with one another, so that we could try to arrange an inter-club show, which I think would go very well. We concluded our evening by moving a vote of thanks to our president, Mrs. Lawson, and Mr. Lomas (chairman pro tem.).—R. Charleson, Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

At last meeting dates of shows were fixed, new members elected, rules altered, two new officers elected, as under:—Monthly evening shows (all sections), 8 to 10 p.m., admission free, held headquarters, Workman's Hall, Romford-road, E., April 27th, May 25th, July 13th; annual young stock show, October 25th; annual show, January 10th, 1912. A lecture was fixed for September 28th, 8 p.m., by Mr. T. H. Harrison; visitors cordially invited. New members elected: Messrs. W. Davis and W. F. Taylor. Officers elected:—President, T. H. Harrison, Esq.; vice-presidents, T. Threlford, Esq., Dr. J. G. Buchan, Esq., F. A. S. Stern, Esq.; H. Mason, Esq., F. Jayne, Esq., and Miss J. E. Jay; committee (chair) Mr. J. Smith, (vice-chair) Mr. W. H. Collings, and Messrs. Wasey, Shell, Sykes, Day, Austin, Eyes, Sears, Ruggles, Reed, Hodder, Stanton, Huggins, Koster, Balls, Bromley, Hodgson, Tufnell, Hall; hon. auditors, Messrs. H. Mason and J. H. Priestman; hon. auctioneer, J. Bussey, Esq.; hon. solicitor, F. A. S. Stern, Esq.; hon. assistant sec., A. E. Baker.; sec., W. Maxey, 16, James-place, Poplar, E. Rule 12 was altered to read: "That committee meetings be held second Thursday in each month, and general meetings fourth Thursday in each month at eight o'clock, at headquarters.—W. Maxey, Hon.

METROPOLITAN C.B.S.

The members held their annual dinner at the Plough, Clapham Junction, Feb. 25th. After an excellent repast the company proceeded to enjoy a capital musical programme, in which several of the members and friends took part. In responding to the toast of the society, Mr. F. J. Martin remarked that a considerable advance had been made, both in the membership and finance of the society, which, he was glad to say, was in a very sound position with a substantial balance on the right side. A good amount of their income was spent in the purchase of cups and other specials which were competed for at their numerous shows, and won outright each year. Mr. Norman then presented the trophies, which were secured by the following members:—Champion cup, Mr. C. Mabey; novice cup, Mr. Edwards; British cup, Mr. Slade. A handsome teapot was won by Mrs. McGregor for most points gained by a lady during the season, this lady also winning the Trower's medal for most points won by starred birds. The runners-up in the cup competitions, Messrs. F. J. Martin, J. King, J. Best, were then presented with silver medals, the struggle for supremacy having been exceptionally keen and close. Mr. Davies said a few words in praise of CAGE BIRDS, remarking upon the great assistance its articles had been to the members, most of whom were amateurs and novices, and said how delighted they were to occasionally see the portrait of a bird bred by one of themselves placed upon its cover; it was an incentive to do their best to breed birds equal to them, to merit a like favour. We understand that Mr. McGregor, the popular chairman, was responsible for the musical programme, which was much enjoyed by the largest gathering this society has had. Among the company present were the following:—Messrs. Tibles, Martin, Gollop, Burgess, Moore, King, Davies, Price, Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Ottaway, and the Misses Ottaway, Mrs. Allingham, Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. Durham, Mr. and Mrs. Harwood, Mr. Vigurs and friend, and others. We understand an excellent programme has been arranged by the Committee for the year, including two young bird shows, which will allow all birds to compete.

HOLYWOOD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Special meeting held Old Masonic Hall, with a full attendance of members, for the purpose of deciding date for annual show, and appointing judge. After a general discussion the members decided to hold their next annual show 17th and 18th November, open to all Ireland. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) was appointed judge for same. Will other show secretaries please note the dates, so as to avoid clashing as much as possible? Four new members were enrolled, and there is still room for more. If there are any local fanciers wishing to join, or desirous of any information relating to society, I shall be pleased to hear from them.—T. Cole, Hon. Sec.

WINDHILL, SHIPLEY & DIS. O.S

Annual tea and social held Feb. 18, and a good number were present to do justice to a good meat tea, a credit to the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hardy. The committee can congratulate themselves upon the musical portion of the programme, for it was the best yet arranged. A very good audience assembled, especially taking into consideration the bad weather. Mr. W. B. Atkinson (president) officiated as chairman, and gave the necessary impetus for the audience to make themselves thoroughly "at home." He thanked each of the artistes in turn. Mr. W. H. Smith (coxter singer), Mr. B. Murrell (humorist). Mr. G. Naylor (elocutionist), Mr. B. Nickleson (bass), Mr. W. Thackray (sentimeutal), Mr. G. Walker (who gave us the "Yorkshireman's toast"), Mr. Boys and Mr. Cordingby (accompanists). A vote of thanks to the host and hostess, and artistes, proposed by Mr. A. Price and seconded by Mr. Brown (Yeadon) was carried with great enthusiasm, and the proceedings terminated by the audience rising to sing the National Anthem.—Spencer and Cook, Hon. Secs.

Prospects are good, and if members will only rally to meeting there is no reason why 1911 should not be a prosperous year. I should be pleased to hear from any fancier wishing to join. Ent. fee 1/-, sub. 5/-; fanciers under 21 years of age admitted half-price.—Hy. Todd, Sec.

SCOTTISH NATIONAL C.B.S.

Annual meeting held 25th February, in rooms, 142, High Street, Edinburgh. President Mr. Winter in chair. There was an exceptionally large muster of members. President intimated they had suffered a great loss, and the Fancy in general, through the death of Mr. J. Ferguson, of Glasgow; which was received by the members standing, same to be entered in minutes. Secretary instructed to write letter of condolence. The most important item was the balance sheet; there being very few questions to ask, on the motion of Mr. Brown, seconded by Mr. Mackie, it was passed as correct. Date of next annual show fixed for 30th December, 1911, and 1st January, 1912. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to all who kindly assisted at last show, especially Miss Peddle Waddell, and Messrs. Hoyle and Sykes, for the great trouble they had taken in looking after the foreign section and softbill section respectively. "FOREIGN Birds for Beginners." By Wesley T. Page, F.L.S., etc. A most useful manual for all keepers of Foreign Birds; in it will be found information of an entirely practical nature, on the keeping and feeding of the more common and popular varieties of Foreigners; price, 1/1, post free: From the Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London.

DON'T be caught napping by purchasing a so-called Australian Grey, or Tri-coloured Grey, such are only common Rose Cockatoos—good screamers, but non-talkers, or the common Green Parrakeet, often called Green Parrots. Send for my list and see what a genuine Parrot is; also a fine lot of yellow and green Budgerigars, in excellent condition: W. Rudd, The Bird Specialist, Norwich.

"BUDGERIGARS and Cockatiels: How to Keep, Feed, Breed, and Teach to Talk." By C. P. Arthur. This handbook is written by a specialist in the keeping of these 2 popular varieties of foreign birds; the information given in it is of a most practical and concise nature, and no keeper of these birds can afford to be without a copy; price, 6d. post free: From the Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

GOULDIAN FINCHES.

Immense quantities have left Port Darwin for the Continent and Great Britain. Prices will range from 8s. pair upwards before the season is closed; already 2,000 are in Marseilles. Particulars will be given of all arrivals in price list shortly to be published: John Hamlyn, 221, St. George's-st., London Docks.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, 'Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

Practical Books for Practical Bird-keepers

A FEW WORDS OF IMPORTANCE

To all Mule and Hybrid breeders who wish to attain success this coming breeding season.

Is there any point about which you are at all in doubt? If so, you will find it fully explained in the Mule and Hybrid Breeders Encyclopedia.

"Cage Bird Hybrids"

By Charles Houlton.

This great work, the writer of which, as a successful breeder, exhibitor, and judge of mules and hybrids of twenty years standing, is known throughout the United Kingdom, explains fully the following points which are of the utmost importance to breeders at the moment. The proper breeding cages to use and how to prepare them. How to choose the Finches and get them into the best possible breeding condition. How to correctly mate up an ideal muling pair. How to test the eggs. And every other point which mule and hybrid breeders must know to ensure success.

Illustrated with 16 coloured plates of Ideal Hybrids and numerous other illustrations. It forms a standard work, the like of which has never before been published.

Send for your copy at once, as owing to the great demand for the bound work we have been compelled to raise the price to 7s. 6d. per copy, carriage paid.

Unbound parts, price 7d. each, or 4s. 6d. per set of 8. Binding Cases, dark blue cloth, printed in gold 1s. 6d. post free.

To subscribers who have not yet had their copies bound, send the parts to us, together with P.O. for 3s. 6d., and we will supply case and bind up for you and return carriage paid.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION

"OUR CANARIES"

By Claude St. John.

This great standard work is of the highest interest to all keepers of Canaries, whether they keep a large number or one only. Concise without being cramped, and full explanations without being verbose, and illustrated with magnificent coloured and art plates by the great bird artist Mr. H. Norman, it forms the ideal work for which all Canary-keepers have been waiting.

PART 10

Out to-day comes at a fitting moment, as it deals with points which are of the highest interest to all breeders at the present time, and specially for Belgian and Lancashire fanciers.

This part contains two magnificent coloured plates depicting

The Dutch Frill Canary and Green and Cinnamon Borders, and numerous helpful black-and-white illustrations. Copies can be obtained from your newsagents price 6d. nett, or direct from us for 7d. post free.

The author of this work is being assisted by over 100 present-day successful breeders and exhibitors, and to ensure success this coming breeding season, any fancier who has not already done so will find that the best possible investment to make is to purchase the 10 parts now ready, price 5s. 6d., post free.

Meating-Off and Feeding Softbills

By JOHN FROSTICK.
Price 6½d., post free.

No lover of insectivorous birds who wishes to succeed in his hobby can afford to be without a copy of this practical Handbook. It also contains notes on Bird Trapping, Cages, etc.

THE STOCK BOOK.

COMPILED BY C. E. WESTON.

MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Well-known fanciers have said of the "Stock Book":—It makes bird breeding easy."...This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred.

NOW IS THE SEASON YOU NEED IT.

This "BREEDING ROOM REGISTER & BIRD KEEPER'S ACCOUNT BOOK" (copyright) offers in a handy form a means of keeping—

- The complete pedigree and description of every bird in one's room.
- A full record of the season's breeding experiences.
- An account of every young bird reared, and how it was disposed of.
- A register of one's doings at the shows (the most complete and useful yet devised).
- A cash account for the year.
- A profit and loss account of the season's proceedings, and a balance sheet showing how much one has invested in the hobby.

A Series of Registers will thus furnish a concise record of the career of a fancier as a breeder and an exhibitor from year to year, or over any number of years.

Many useful Emergency and other Hints of great value during the Breeding Season will also be found in its pages.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE. The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

WHY NOT

Make Sure of the Best Value by PURCHASING DIRECT

From The Canary Market of the World and W. RUDD'S is it's Market Place.

Secure any of the following Bargains and you will never regret buying at the amount whichever your selection may be.

Can you possibly desire anything more conclusive or to the point than that which here follows?... Surely it is greater proof than thousands of meaningless words of shallow puff:—

Been "Had,"

33, Main Street, Renton, Feb. 14th, 1911.—Birds arrived safe and sound. Well pleased with them. I know where to send to now.—Wm. Baird to W. Rudd.

18, Nithsdale Avenue, Market Harboro', March 5th, 1911.—The cages and birds have given the greatest satisfaction, and everyone who has seen them testify to their true worth, which, I am sure, reflects great credit on the way you fry to give the utmost value for money. The cages need to he seen to he believed, and I admit they, as well as the utensils and birds, are far better than I had dared to hope they would be.—W. Webh to W. Rudd.

"Most Reliable, etc."

56, Hornby Road, Blaker Road, Peckham, London, S.E., Feb. 17th, 1911.—I received pair of birds quite safe. Very pleased with same, and think you have treated me very fair for my money. I must congratulate you on the way you do your business. It shows you to be a most reliable man to deal with. I shall recommend you.—G. B. Oliver to W. Rudd.

The Editor is receiving, independent of the above, a huge pile, as proof positive that they do not stand alone.

AMATEURS

WILL FIND ANY OF THESE A GOOD INVESTMENT:

YORKSHIRES, NORWICH, CRESTS & CRESTBREDS, SCOTCH FANCIES, BORDER FANCIES.

For value in any of the above varieties I defy all competition. I have some clinking stock birds that are bred from winners, and also a few actual winners for sale.

The following facts are sufficient to prove the quality of my birds. During this season I have won over 60 first prizes, 40 seconds, 40 thirds, 30 specials in hot competition, including all the leading shows. I have bred both Norwich and Yorkshires that secured premier honours at this year's Crystal Palace Show.

I have also supplied a large number of winners and stock birds that have produced winners for my customers. Letters proving this are filed and open for the inspection of every visitor. I can supply Yorkshires and Norwich that will stand some beating.

Remember, I do not stand in the dark. I offer an open invitation to any fancier to come at any time but Sunday and inspect my stock. My birds will speak for themselves. I send every bird on seven or ten days' approval, and guarantee all pairs unrelated.

For proof of honest dealings, read the following, and remember these are only samples from hundreds recently received and filed for inspection:—11, Burn Cottages, Abertillery, 28th Feb., '11.—I received bird in good condition, and must thank you very much for picking me such good birds, especially the songster, which is the best bird I ever had the pleasure to hear sing in my house. He sings from early morn till late at night.—G. Worth to Joe Thomas. Earby, March 4th, '11.—Received birds all right. They are marvellous value for the money. You shall have all future orders.—G. Lister to Joe Thomas. 49, Avenue, Bentley, March 1st, 1911.—I received bird safe, and am well pleased with it. I do not wonder at your birds taking prizes at the quality you send out. The Buff that I had from you, and now this Yellow, I defy any man to get better stuff for the money. They are here to be seen by anyone. —W. T. Swain to Joe Thomas.

South-street, Gateshead, 3rd March, '11.—I received bird all right, and think it worth double the money to what you get at other places, and if anybody wants a good bird cheap they should send to Joe Thomas. I have had four from you, and if I want any more I shall send to him.—J. Tight to Joe Thomas.

YORKSHIRE COCKS, grand, lengthy birds, full of type and quality, and in full song, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each upwards; erect, racey, close-feathered hens, 3/-, 4/-, 5/6, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/- each; properly matched pairs, guaranteed unrelated, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- upwards.

YORKSHIRE GREENS, some real gems, Clayton and Helliwell's strain, wonderful length, deep and rich in colour, and very tight feathered, same price as Yorkshires. Also few Cinnamons.

CHAMPION COBBY NORWICH.—See my advert. on page 214.

BORDER FANCIES.—Some real gems in all colours, including a few greens that have won at leading shows. Same price as Yorkshires.

SCOTCH FANCIES.—Few good stock birds, cocks or hens, clears or pied, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each.

SEIFERT ROLLERS.—I have some of the best; cocks or hens. Cocks, in full rolling song, with many changes, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Extra special Schoolmasters, trained to perfection, and a real treat to listen to, 25/-, 30/- each.

SIBERIAN GOLDFINCHES.—Another large consignment just in. Many can win. They are large birds, with big scarlet blazes and well buttoned; will suit anywhere. Guaranteed cocks, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6.

SPLENDID SIB. HENS FOR MULING, Buffs or Yellows, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each.

Also Crests and Crest-breds, Goldfinch Mules, Linnet Mules, etc., etc.

Every bird is on approval at my sole risk. Travelling cages, 3d. extra.

Send a postcard for my free illustrated catalogue and advice to breeders.

If you want an exhibition bird, or good stock birds, likely to breed winners, all I ask is that you will send me particulars, and let me send you birds on approval, and compare all others.

Easy payments arranged, if necessary, with any bona-fide fancier. Full particulars in catalogue.

KNIGHT'S YORKSHIRE BREEDING PAIRS

at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- to 20/- are equal to those charged double and treble for, as supplied by self-styled champion Yorkshire exhibitors. The following letter received from a 20/- pair purchaser abundantly confirms the fact:—"Sir,—Birds arrived in splendid condition; am more than pleased with them; in fact they are equal, if not superior, in every respect to pair I paid £3 for to Mr. ——, whom doubtless you will know as one of your Yorkshire champion exhibitors. You are at liberty to make what use you think proper of this, provided you omit names, for obvious reasons which you will quite understand.—T.L." Having 30 to 40 pairs still unsold, amateurs and novices desiring to breed own winners need not now pay extravagant prices charged by professional exhibitors and dealers, but save money by placing their orders for season's breeders with a 30 years' continuous breeder of Yorkshire varieties only, and thus ensure proper style, type and quality, cheaply by comparison. Few surplus, bred as best, but rather on small side, 3 for 10/- until sold. Season's reduced list sent on forwarding post card to Jonas Knight, Allerton, Bradford, Yorkshire.

I HAVE STILL

a few grand Yorkshires left, and shall be pleased to send you any bird on approval for seven days, single birds from 4/-, matched pairs from 7/6 upwards: Arthur Harris, West Haddon, Rugby.

OGDEN BROS.

Who is the champion breeder? We never miss a summer breeding several of the best living. We have won more prizes at Crystal Palace, 1911, with birds bred by exhibitor than any other exhibitor, 2 1sts, 2 2nds, 1 3rd; all these we have bred ourselves. Our trio of buff cocks have won 26 1sts this season, all 3 standing 1st on the same day, at classical shows, where the keenest competition were—Leicester, Harrogate, Brighouse; these 3 we have also bred. Thirteen times this season we have won special for best Yorkshire; 3 championship diplomas at the biggest shows in England, Gateshead, L.C.B.A., and Crystal Palace, also winner of the £10 Yorkshire Union trophy, the Y.C.C. Sandiford cup, valued 5 guineas, Carl's competition for most points, 589, gained at Yorkshire Union's shows, winner of Cinnamon-marked trophy with unflighted birds, must be bred by exhibitor. We have won more firsts than any other exhibitor in this variety this season, and the last ten years we have won competitions, cups, trophies, medals, etc., that will stand a record for some years. We don't buy 3 or 4 of the best living and trade on their reputation, and them 3 or 4 not for sale; we have 30 all 1st prize winners, practically any of them for sale; one of our winning buffs, matched to a clinking hen, £7 pair; properly matched pairs from 15/6 to 60/; certain to breed winners; buy the blood from the fountain-head; all those wanting honest dealings come and select for yourself or send cash to editor, and we will send you on approval the best value it is possible to get in England; stamp reply: Dudley Hill, Bradford.

OH! WHAT A

pride you will have in your birds, and how your friends will congratulate you on their high quality, yet you will have the satisfaction of knowing they were low in price. You have no need to pay fancy prices. I have had a lot of experience breeding and selling birds, always breeding from the best of stock birds and winners, and selling the birds at reasonable prices within the reach of all. My matched pairs of Yorkshires and Norwich at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair are unequalled for style and quality, and are birds that will do you good. No breeder can show more and better unsolicited testimonials than the thousands of originals I have open for your inspection. I do not show one bird and sell another; every bird I have is for sale. See my advertisement under Rollers for unsolicited testimonials, when you have read the following samples:—23/2/11, 17, Beechwood-avenue, Chorlton.—Duly received Yorkshire; am very pleased. Will write you again.—H. York to L. Storey. 24/2/11, Sheffield.—Norwich arrived in good condition; gives every satisfaction. Am very pleased.—J. Hill to L. Storey. 23/2/11, 29, Church-row, Seaton.—Received Norwich safe and sound; am well pleased.—E. Share to L. Storey. 24/2/11, South Shields.—Thank very much for bird you sent me; it gives every satisfaction. No man could get a better, especially at the money.—E. Small to L. Storey. 24/2/11, Pine-street, Bacup.—Received birds, and am well satisfied with them.—E. Fogg to L. Storey. Send a postcard for my illustrated price list. 2, Rose-street, Kirkintilloch, 24/2/11.—Received bird in good condition; well pleased with it. You will receive my future orders. Have instructed "C.B." to pay you deposit.—J. Todd to L. Storey. Call and inspect my stock. You will be convinced. I have the best pure-bred Yorkshires, that cannot be beaten for type, size, and quality; feathers like wax. Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched pairs for breeding, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; extra fine cobby Norwich cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched breeding pens, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. Send a postcard for my illustrated price list. Neat travelling cages, 3d. each. All birds carriage paid on seven days' approval at my risk: E. L. Storey, Crowle, Doncaster.

Broadbent's Yorkshires.

Cages 3d. extra. No waiting. Full list and terms, stamp to—EDGAR BROADBENT, Decorator, The Millhouse, Lime Street, Sheffield. Estab. 10 years.

H. H. TOWERS,

winner of Cinnamon-marked Championship Trophy, 1910-11, with over 40 points more than any other competitor. At the last two Palace Shows I won moe premier prizes than all other exhibitors put together in cinnamon marks, taking 4 1sts and 5 2nds. This is proof, not a wild statement. I have also won trophies in all other varieties of Yorkshires excepting greens, but I have no wish to join in the present advertising competition, and will let my birds speak for themselves. I simply promise to deal with any enquiries to the best of my ability. I guarantee and give satisfaction. Send stamp stating your wants, on cash or deposit terms, and if birds are not suitable I will at once return your money. I have an unflighted green marked yellow, 7 inches long, at 25/-, just the sort to breed winners; also some very fine buffs from 15/-; I have a few yellow cocks and various hens at prices ranging from 8/- to £2; also several winners cheap; write at once to: Colne-rd., Glusburn, nr. Keighley.

CAGE BIRDS Birthday Number plate "Wild Seeds and Plants for Bird Keepers" is unique.—S. J. Collins (Derby).

Your coloured plates have been very much admired at our shows, writes Mr. Jas. R. Crossley, Sec. of the Blackpool and Fylde C.B.F.S.

I have had CAGE BIRDS since it first came out, and it is getting better every week. I tell everybody about it who keeps birds here. I wish "C.B." every success.—J. Williams (Ruthin).

I wish to thank you and also Mr. Norman for the excellent production of my 1st Palace Buff Border hen, writes Mr. H. Bennet (Kelso). I must say that Mr. Norman has made a very faithful reproduction of her. It was a pleasant surprise to me on seeing my exhibit amongst the "real toffs," as it were.

Although only 17 years of age, I have taken your paper, CAGE BIRDS, for nearly four years, and have had feathered pets almost since I was able to feed them! and I would as soon go without my tea as CAGE BIRDS on a Friday night. I thought the Jubilee Palace Number was a "good 'un," but the recent Birthday Number is almost beyond all words of praise. The plates are worth twice the cost of the journal. A CAGE BIRDS Double Number, when announced, is something to look forward to.—P. T. Garner (Kingstown).

I had a very pleasant surprise on opening my copy of your excellent CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL to find that the Yorkshires were represented by my winning clear yellow. I have not shown it very often, as I have been devoting myself more particularly to cinnamon marks. It has, however, been very successful, and should do even better another year with a good moult. I cannot speak too highly of your ANNUAL. Its good points are too numerous to mention.—H. H. Towers (Crosshills, nr. Keighley).

I am a novice at Canary breeding, only having started last year. I finished the season with seven healthy young ones from one pair of birds. I started previously by taking CAGE BIRDS, from which I gained a lot of useful information; also your book on "Canary Breeding for Beginners," to the study of which I attribute the cause of my success. I am now taking in "Our Canaries," which I think is a splendid work, and am anxious to get all the parts bound, as the book is, I think, well worth a position in a book-case. I think all novices like myself should possess it; I am sure they would find it a great help.—H. Hibbard (Folkestone).

I should like to give you a word of praise for your Birthday Number. In my opinion, as they say in Bradford, "It takes the bun," which probably means "it tops all." The coloured plates by Mr. Norman are really A1. The one of the Crested family I intend, before long, to put in a neat frame. I think the Canary Fancy in Bradford, and other towns, was never at such a high pitch as at the present period. Many places I have lately visited were really fine, cosy little corners, with some beautiful birds to admire, each party invariably getting a few out in the show cage with the grand old saying: "It will tak' some beating tha' knows." I imagine that at next season's shows there will be stormy winds blowing indeed. All these beautiful plates from CAGE BIRDS, I notice, are always adorning the breeder's room, be it large or small. There they are hung, acting as models and styles.—John H. Jowett (Bradford).

Loved Its Cage.

A remarkable story of a bird's love for its home surroundings reaches us from Loughborough. Mr. W. Gregory, of Sparrow Hill, has kept a Goldfinch in a cage for the past 12 months. On Saturday, Feb. 18, while he was cleaning out the cage, the door flew open, and the little bird departed high into the air. As no hopes of its return were entertained, Mr. Gregory and his wife were much surprised, when, nearly two hours later, a gentleman called at the house and casually remarked that he had seen a little bird hopping about near the door-step. On going outside, Mrs. Gregory noticed that it was her Goldfinch, and she captured it without the slightest trouble.—"Nottingham Guardian."

Singing Contests.

CASTLEFORD.

Open sing at headquarters, George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge Street, before a very large company. We had visitors from all parts of Yorkshire to hear 47 birds sing for five good prizes. Result: A very close thing: 1, O. Potter; 2, J. Kirk; 3, J. Ramskill; 4, A. Fowler; 5, D. Dobson. After the sing we had a very enjoyable evening—song or two by some of the members. Last week's winners: 1, J. Kirk; 2, W. Dobson; 3, J. Papworth.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. (King's Head).—Usual quality singing contest held Mar. 4, when 17 birds entered. Judges, Messrs. P. Madden, W. Naylor, J. Melin. 1, J. Green; 2, A. Butler; 3, shared by W. Farrow and T. Stead. Also Mar. 5, when 24 birds entered; judges, Messrs. W. Naylor, T. Johnson, and J. Naylor. 1 and 2 shared by J. Bland and W. Sissons; 3, J. Bland; 4, T. Stead. All intended members must join our Whitsuntide match before last Saturday in March.—Wm. Sissons, hon. sec.

Skinner's Arms Linnet F.A., Buslingthorpe-lane. Usual quality singing contest held March 5th, when 21 birds competed. We had another large attendance; new fanciers and fanciers from other clubs in the city brought birds. Competition was keen. Result: 1, 2, shared by J. Green and A. Butler; 3, A. Hutchinson. Judges, Messrs. C. Biss, J. Simmons, and G. Reed.

Mr. J. Green will sing Mr. Fred Allen's Linnet with his Linnet for £5, as stated, to sing at York, on length, turns, and form, each to pick a judge, then the judges to pick a referee on the spot; judges to be paid by the owner of the winning bird. Mr. Fred Allen to choose any respectable fancier of Leeds to hold the stake money, each to deposit £1 as soon as the match is made. Should these terms (equal for both sides) meet with Mr. Fred Allen's approval, will he please write or meet Mr. Green, to arrange date of match?—Wm. Lunn, Hon. Sec.

CLASSHOUGHTON.

Weekly Linnet sing held Rock Inn, Mar. 5th, when 22 birds sang for three prizes. Result, 1, 2, 3 shared between J. Wainwright, J. Kirk, J. Papworth.—A. Longfield, Sec.

HULL.

Weekly Linnet contest held headquarters, Grapes Tavern, Brook-street. Twenty of the best birds in Yorkshire competed. Some good singing was heard, a large company being present. 1st, Wakely; 2nd, Broadbent; 3rd, Keating; 4th, Smith; judge, Mr. F. Allen; timekeeper, Mr. Thundercliffe. Winner sang well, it being only a seven-month-old bird. It was taught under Mr. Allen's champion. This club is being rapidly brought to the front, two rooms being packed with visitors from near and far.—Thundercliffe, Assist.-Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Open-to-all-England Linnet Singing Contest for quality, held headquarters, Old Red Lion, Mar. 4th, when 23 birds laced the judges. We had Linnet fanciers from Sabden, Leigh, Wigan, Warrington, Gt. Harwood, and several other places. We had some excellent singing. Results: 1st and 5th, J. W. Jones (Leigh); 2nd and 3rd, W. H. Topping (Blackburn); 4th and 6th, T. Statham (Leigh). Judges, Messrs. J. W. Jones and Festus Gibbons (Leigh); Referee, Mr. Joe Dobson; Timekeeper, Mr. T. Slater; Birdkeeper, Mr. R. Fender. Usual week-end contest: 18 birds were put before the judge. Result: 1st and 2nd, W. H. Topping; 3rd, T. Slater. Judge, Mr. T. Coventry; Timekeeper, Mr. T. Slater.—T. Slater, Secretary.

WARRINGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 23rd, Mr. Walters in chair. Present, Messrs. Titchard, Weston, Barnett, Harper, Mort, Walters, Wilkinson, Knowles, Dukes, and secretary. Mr. Weston proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Knowles for judging night show. Two new members (Messrs. Collins and Wilkinson) were proposed. There was a judging competition on British. Mr. Dukes made the awards, and Mr. Mort won.—G. M. Nelson, Hon. Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

A most successful washing exhibition and lecture were given March 4th, by Mr. J. Steel (Dalkeith), to our members and a number of fanciers from our neighbouring society (Cowdenbeath). Mr. Steel washed three birds in a most expert manner, explaining his method as he went on. He said that seeing birds were mostly washed at night, never proceed to wash the birds until you had them in a lighted room for a little while, as it gave them time to waken up, and they were not so nervous as when brought direct from a dark room and washed right away. He used three basins of water, a badger hair, also a camel hair brush, a cloth for drying water off the bird after it had been washed, and a piece of flannel for rolling bird in to dry before the fire. He washed a Border Fancy first, and it seemed a very simple job for him to hold the bird in any position he required. He said: Never attempt to catch a bird with your hands wet, as you are almost sure to pull some feathers out, the dry feathers sticking to the wet hand. He used oatmeal soap, but was not against using Swan and Sunlight soaps. While the birds were drying Mr. Steele went on with a lecture on British birds, which was a revelation to most of us. Nothing seemed to escape him. He seemed to know all species, their good points and defects. He lectured for three hours, and held the attention of his audience all the while. Then, by request, he gave another interesting half-hour on the Border Fancy, and as in British birds, he had all their points, both good and bad, at his fingers' ends (or rather tongue's end). A few questions were asked, which Mr. Steel answered in a most satisfactory manner. The president (Mr. Stenhouse) said he was sure those present would agree with him in thanking Mr. Steel for coming to enlighten them. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Steel brought to a close a most enjoyable and profitable evening.—A. Dickson, Sec.

MANNINGHAM C.B.S.

At meeting held March 4th, Mr. J. Ackroyd gave us a very instructive lecture on "Pairing birds for breeding." The members brought birds, paired to the best of their ability, and the lecturer told us their best points, also their faults. The paper proved very instructive to novices, who did not forget to ask him questions. A vote of thanks, proposed by A. Huddeston, seconded by Mr. L. Holroyd, and supported by Messrs. H. Grange and F. Gale, and Mr. Ackroyd's reply, closed the meeting.—H. Grange, Sec.

LOCHORE & GLENCRAIG C.B.S.

Meeting held Ante-room of Mr. Menemy's Hall, 4th March. Mr. J. Donaldson (vice-president) in chair. Mr. J. Kean was appointed judge for Scotch Fancy section of annual show, 25th Nov. Also settled, to hold first feather show, July 29th, when Mr. R. Johnstone has promised to give 4 medals, one each to the first birds in the following sections, viz:—Crest or C.B., Nor., Yorks., and Mule or Hybrid. All birds to be bred by members. Members are very slow at turning out. I should like to see as large a turn-out as possible at next meeting in usual place, 25th March. Anyone wishing to become a member can do so by sending name to me.—Duncan Grant, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Committee meeting held March 2nd. Following judges selected for annual show, Oct. 21st and 22nd: Messrs. W. Vardy, Norwich; W. Mundell, Yorkshires; J. Robson, Borders and Scotch Fancies; C. Houlton, British and Foreign. Crest judge not decided on definitely, but we hope to secure Mr. W. Greeves' services. General meeting.— Letter read from Mr. McPartling re question of a 50-mile radius for judges. This was rescinded at February meeting, and on an amendment by Mr. T. C. Crawhall the radius was made a smaller one—25 miles. Annual neat feather show fixed for June 24th, to be held large Hall, Co-operative Hall, Newgate st., so we will have plenty of room for both exhibitors and friends. As this is Coronation week, we should have a record entry, and trust all members will make a big effort to win the challenge cup, which bird, very appropriately could then claim the name of "King George." The following gentlemen have kindly consented to officiate as judges, viz.:—Messrs. J. Maddison and J. Sheppard, British and Foreign; and Messrs. T. Robson and J. Currah, Canaries. The Lister case re carvers again came in for considerable discussion, but ended without any alteration of our previous decision. Annual picnic to be held Whit-Monday, June 5th. Messrs. Hutchison, Scott, Pettersen, and Atkinson, have arrangements in hand.—J. E. Atkinson, Sec.

For Holding Perches in Position

Sent by Mr. W. J. Green, The Village, Aintree, near Liverpool.

Here is an idea for holding perches in position, which I think those who make their own cages will find very useful. Take a piece of strong cage wire, about four inches long, and bent as shown in Fig. 1, making the distance A B, so that the wire will grip the perch it is intended to hold. Next bend down the wire at right angles about 1½ inches from the end as in Fig. 2. The holder is now finished, and can easily be fixed in position in the cage by boring small holes in required position, putting ends of wire through, and bending down at back.—W. J. Green.

No. 489.

A Holder of Greenstuff.

Sent by Mr. E. Amis, 83, Varna Street, Openshaw, Manchester.

I forward you a good idea for a holder of greenstuff, also of nesting material, which fastens in the wire of cage-front like a spring. It will hold anything tight, and is cheap. Get about 9 inches of cage wire, and make the letter W, as shown in sketch, allowing the centre to come out about ¼ inch to form a handle for same, with two ends bent up. You can place it anywhere about the front. The sketch will explain the rest.—Edwin Amis.

In the Courts.

The Effect of the Recent High Court Decision.

Last week, Henry Pannett and Thomas Pannett, of Sloane Street, Brighton, were summoned for having seven Linnets in their possession. It was a curious fact of the case that it is an offence at any time of the year to be in possession of Linnets within the Borough of Brighton, but it is no offence to catch them (and, of course, be in possession of them) at this time in the country, where defendants had caught the birds on the day when they were caught.

The case was adjourned till Monday, when Alderman Sendall, who presided, said that during the interval the magistrates had studied a case in the High Court which was on all fours with this. The Lord Chief Justice and other Justices said that the statutes were difficult to interpret, but they held that, although the birds were lawfully caught in a district in which they were not protected, it was unlawful to bring them into a district in which they were protected. Accordingly the magistrates decided to convict.

Mr. Ewart C. Bartlett, who appeared for defendants, pointed out that only Henry had been proved to be in possession of the birds—Thomas was carrying the nets. Technically there was no case proved against Thomas.

The police stated that Thomas had been once previously in trouble, while Henry had been convicted five times, and for similar offences.

Henry was fined 14s. and the cost, in default, ten days; and Thomas 7s. and costs, with the alternative of seven days.—"Brighton Herald."

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Last monthly show on winter's syllabus held Feb. 28th, headquarters, for Mules and British birds. And Mr. F. Taylor gave us an excellent lecture on British Birds. We had a very good attendance, but there is still room for plenty more, and we should be very pleased to see our rooms full when we commence these meetings again. All fanciers are given a hearty invitation to join. Mr. W. Hardy judged, and his awards met with the approval of all.

Wild Duck in Bad Weather.

Wild Ducks are obliged to fly inland during stormy weather although usually they stay out some distance from shore.

Plovers in the North.

It is said that some of the Plovers in the extreme north are very tame, and may be approached to within a few yards. Such is not the usual habit of these birds; they are generally considered to be extremely shy and wary.

Nests Standing the Winter.

The nests of the Goldfinch and Chaffinch stand the winter as well as any of the Finches. They can be seen even now in the hedgerows and trees, almost as neat and compact as when first put together. The clay-built homes of Blackbirds and Thrushes, will frequently cause the nest-hunter to think he has made another find, even in the following summer, to that in which they were built.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

Mr. Ernest R. Ridley, the hon. secretary of the Hull C.B.S., sends us a copy of his society's syllabus. It is a dainty twelve-page booklet, tastefully printed and carefully got-up. It contains a list of the officers, the general arrangements for the 1911 season, the classification for the various shows, etc. Particulars of membership may be had of Mr. Ridley, 19, Lambton Street, Hull.

The London Federation.

We are requested to ask all secretaries of societies who have not yet done so to kindly forward the signed railway petitions direct to the secretary of the London Federation (Mr. P. Adamthwaite), addressed 83, Hartland Road, Kilburn, London, N.W.

Poetmatic.

The woodcock is a timid bird
As doubtless you before have heard;
But will you tell me would a wood-
Cock fight a woodruff if he could?

I never met a cock that would Not have a cockfight if he could;
Why not a woodcock with a wood-
Ruff in a wood? he could and should.

Alas for theories strange and new,
They entertain, but are not true;
For such a battle could not be,
The woodruff is a plant, you see.

Parrot as Fire Alarm.

The screaming of a Parrot probably saved a Chatham family from death by fire on March 4th. Shortly before one o'clock in the morning Mrs. Pett the wife of a general dealer living in Church Street was aroused by the shrieking of their Parrot, which was kept in the back room on the ground floor. "Father, come quick!" the Parrot screamed. Mrs. Pett, who hurried downstairs, found that the lower portion of the house was rapidly filling with smoke. Her cries aroused the neighbours, and assistance was quickly at hand. The Parrot is none the worse for its adventure. The family have had the bird in their possession for about five years, and the words it uttered are Polly's favourites.

I leave England on the "Athenia" on April 27th, and I am having to clear my stock at once, writes Mr. W. H. Lindley (Barnsley).

The Skylark was singing beautifully in Birch Fields on February 26, whilst I was taking a stroll to study nature, writes Mr. R. B. Fryer (Manchester).

We unanimously decided at our last meeting to resign from the Cage Bird Union, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, assistant secretary of the Sheffield Cage Bird Society.

The Oxford and District C.B.S. have decided to hold a first feather show on July 6th, and an open show on October 26th, writes Mr. A. F. Fifield, the hon. secretary.

As I have now returned from Canada, writes Mr. W. Griffiths (25, Avenue Road, Springburn, Glasgow), I am in a position to judge at shows (Norwich P.H. and specialist in Crests).

The Barnsley and District C.B.S. annual open show will be held on November 10th and 11th, writes Mr. F. C. Sims, secretary. Will secretaries kindly note to avoid clashing?

The Clapham and District C.B.S. annual open show will be held on October 11th and 12th, writes Mr. A. L. Priest, the secretary. Will secretaries pease note to avoid clashing?

Mr. W. P. Barnes (Grantham) has, we hear, been engaged to judge the cage birds at the Consett and Blackhill show on November 11th, and this for the third year in succession.

We elected Messrs. Halliday and Dixon to judge at our open show on November 4th next, writes Mr. J. W. Lowes, hon. secretary of the Stockton-on-Tees and District C.B.S.

I have again been elected secretary of the Metropolitan C.B.S. for the year, writes Mr. G. Harwood, 9, Frere Street, Battersea, S.W. Twelve new members have, I may add, been elected.

I have been appointed secretary to the Annfield Plain C.B.S., and all communications should in future be sent to me, writes Mr. T. Robinson, 16, St. Aidan's Crescent, Annfield Plain.

Our annual show is fixed for November 24th and 25th. We give a hearty invitation to any fancier to join our society, writes Mr. G. W. Boyce, hon. show secretary of the Woolwich F.S.

Kindly let your numerous readers in Ashington and surrounding districts know that I have started an agency, and supply all kinds of seeds and foods, writes Mr. T. H. Rowcroft (17, Sixth Row).

Mr. D. Carroll, secretary of the Yorkshire C.B.S. of Ireland, writes that he has just received a consignment of closed rings for 1911, and will be glad to supply same to members at 6d. for ten.

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for ten months, and I find lots of information in its pages every week; in fact, I do not know what I should do without it.—Herbert Dickinson (Pontefract).

Kindly state that owing to the numerous inquiries for birds on approval, I am sorry I cannot find time to send them, owing to business reasons, but I thank all for writing.—F. Wood (Stockport).

The 32nd annual open show of the Sheffield C.B.S. will be held on December 9th, in the Montgomery Hall, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, the assistant secretary. It will be a one-day show, instead of two days, as in previous years.

I admire your journal, CAGE BIRDS, very much. The plates are extremely lovely, and your books, such as the ANNUAL, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," etc., are very instructive and interesting.—John Smith (Bellshill).

We have received from Messrs. T. M. Cockroft and Co., felt manufacturers, of Leeds, samples of the white wool, brown wool, and grey jute nest linings supplied by them. They appear to be admirably suited for the purpose.

I am pleased to say I sent a consignment (a pair of my winning Lizards and a pair Cinnamons) to the order of Mr. Coss Loetscher, Lucerne, Switzerland, which arrived safely, and gave every satisfaction.—John Rukin (Rawtenstall).

In Mr. W. Rudd's advertisement of Roller Canaries last week, our printers inadvertently used a block of a nursery cage instead of one of a Roller cage supplied by this noted Norwich bird specialist, an error which, needless to say, we regret.

The "Avicultural Magazine" for March contains an article by Sir William Ingram, Bart., on the acclimatisation of the Greater Bird of Paradise in the West Indies. Mr. R. Cosgrave writes on the Cranes of Lilford Hall, and Miss Innes Dorrien-Smith on Paradise Ducks. A report of the British and foreign bird sections of the Crystal Palace Show will be found specially interesting.

The 1910 balance sheet of the Metropolitan C.B.S. shows a cash balance of £2 15s. 6d., of which only 8s. 10d. represents cash brought into the accounts from the previous year. This is highly creditable to Mr. G. Harwood, the secretary, who, with his fellow-officials, is to be congratulated on the result.

The following are the judges appointed for our annual show, writes Mr. J. Fyfe, secretary of the Forfar and District C.B.S.:—For Norwich, Mr. R. B. Jarvie (Glasgow); for Borders, Mr. W. Mossie (Annbank); and for British, Mules, and Foreign birds, Mr. A. W. Watson (Edinburgh).

I have been appointed hon. secretary to the Coventry O.S. in place of Mr. Shaddock, writes Mr. A. J. Barratt, and in future all communications should be addressed to me at 38, Craven Street, Coventry. Mr. J. Robson has been elected judge for our annual show on November 18th.

We have received from Mr. William Wilson, of 247, Argyle Street, Glasgow (The Glasgow Aviaries and Aquariums) a price list of the goods supplied by him, including the "Liktar" rat, etc., killer. The prices of both birds and appliances are moderate. Lists may be had on application.

Our annual show realised a profit of nearly £4, and we finish up the year with a total cash balance of £23 16s. 1d., which I feel sure you will agree is not so bad, considering the society was only started in 1905, writes Mr. H. Smith, hon. secretary of the Wimbledon and District C.B.S.

The Codnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S. has decided to hold two first-feather shows—the first on June 3rd, and the second on July 15th, writes Mr. J. H. Mitchell, the secretary. Also decided to hold our open show on October 28th. Will secretaries kindly note and avoid clashing, locals especially?

Will members and friends of the Musselburgh O.S. please note that, owing to unforeseen circumstances, the "smoker" will be held in the Gray Horse Tavern instead of the Ship Inn, as published in CAGE BIRDS. The tickets are now ready, and may be had from any of the members.—W. Nisbet, secretary.

The annual dinner of the Green Canary Association will be held at the Star and Garter Hotel, St. John's Lane, Liverpool, on Wednesday, March 15th, at 7.30 p.m. prompt, writes Mr. Geo. Green, the secretary, and not on the 16th, as stated in my last report. Tickets 2s. 6d. each. Fanciers are cordially invited.

The 1910 statement of accounts issued by the Woolwich F.S. shows the society to be in a healthy condition. The balance to the good of the society is £9 14s. 9d., this being £1 13s. 5½d. more than was brought into this year's accounts. Mr. G. Boyce, the hon. secretary, and his fellow-officers are to be congratulated on this excellent result.

We are pleased to learn from Mr. W. Rudd, the world-famous specialist, of Norwich, that he has been doing remarkable business recently. As an instance, on Monday last he sent away no fewer than 106 consignments of Canaries, while on the previous Saturday he despatched over forty breeding cages to customers, and this Wednesday 108 consignments left—figures, these, that speak volumes.

We have engaged Mr. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford) to judge our nest feather show in June and Mr. T. Harrison (Altrincham) for the annual show in November, writes Mr. John Davey, hon. secretary of the North Manchester C.B.S. We have a balance in hand of £3, after starting the season with a debt of 2s. 3½d., so I think we shall have a prosperous year.

The Leeds C.B.S. have issued a capital syllabus for 1911, which includes several members' shows and a number of lectures, competitions, etc. The booklet comprises also a list of the members' names and addresses, the classifications for the members shows, etc. The secretary is Mr W. A. Wilson (75, Bayswater Mount, Roundhay, Leeds), who will be glad to hear from intending members.

I have resigned the secretaryship of Pendleton and Salford O.S., writes Mr. Harry Clayton. All communications should now be addressed to Mr. James Critchley, 7, Tennyson Street, Pendleton, Manchester. I do hope members will rally round him and give him all the support possible. On March 13th we are to have a lecture by Mr. Fairhurst on "British Birds: Sexing from Specimens and Mule Breeding." We hope every member will attend and bring friends with them.

The London and Provincial O.S., on Thursday, March 16th, at 8 p.m., writes Mr. C. W. Law, the hon. secretary, are having a lecture by H. Norman, Esq., entitled "Bird Life within an hour of London Bridge," at the Leysian Mission, City Road, opposite Old Street Tube Station. Mr. Norman's lecture should prove most interesting and instructive not only to fanciers, but to all bird lovers; and we trust our friends, including ladies, from kindred societies will avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing this well-known bird lover. All seats free.

FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Sir,—Your paper, "Cage Birds," must have a most wonderful circulation. I have seen it personally in North, South, and Central America, also in the West Indies, while I have had replies to my advertisements from many parts of the world, and have executed orders through these adverts. To-day I have received a letter from a city in Mexico, from a Signor Alberto Icaza, as follows:—"Messrs. De Von,—I notice you are regular advertisers in 'Cage Birds,' and I notice in the issue of January 21st you advertise the following birds——. Kindly send me as follows—by the best possible route, for which I enclose cheque on a London bank for £45.—Alberto Icaza." I wonder if there is a single corner of the Globe your paper, "Cage Birds," does not reach?—Chas. Harris, p.p. D. De Von and Co. (114, Bethnal Green-road, London.

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for years, writes Mr. A. Steel, and since you issued the coloured plate of Goldfinches I have shown the same to a number of friends, and up to the time of writing I have got 18 friends to take in CAGE BIRDS every week. I consider it is the best bird paper going for reliable information.

Mr. John Davey, the hon. secretary of the North Manchester C.B.S., writes that as there has been no development of the suggestion to form a new cage bird society for Cheetham Hill and District, he invites all fanciers interested in the matter to join his society, particulars as to membership of which may be had from him, his address being 34, Alfred Street, Harpurhey, Manchester.

I was pleased to observe that you honoured my old friend the Glossy Starling with his picture in CAGE BIRDS. He is the favourite of the household, and is getting quite a veteran now, I having exhibited him this last ten or eleven years; but in spite of his age he always keeps in perfect health and always appears at the show in immaculate condition. There is great credit due to your artist for so faithfully portraying him.—W. Nicholson (Stockton-on-Tees).

It has given us considerable pleasure to inspect this week a really huge batch of letters which Mr. W. Rudd, the noted bird specialist of Norwich, has recently received from delighted customers, expressing their pleasure and satisfaction on receipt of birds, etc., ordered from him. The letters all bear recent February or March postmarks, and are a striking testimony not only to the excellent quality of the goods supplied by Mr. Rudd, but also to the expeditious and careful way in which he executes his orders. All his customers are pleased, and Mr. Rudd must be glad to think that a large part of his very heavy daily post consists of letters of appreciation from those with whom he has dealings.

Allow me to thank you for the honour you have done me by reproducing tho picture of my buff Yorkshire on the front of your splendid journal. Bred in July, 1909, this bird gave early promise of a successful career. With seven outings as an unflighted, he scored four 1sts and two 2nds, besides doing well at club shows. This past show season his successes have been: 1sts at Chopwell, Pelton, Newcastle, Darlington, Hartlepools, Guisborough, and 2nds at Blaydon, Whitehaven, Alnwick, 3rd Gateshead. In hot Northern Yorkshire C.C. competitions (six shows), he scored 44 points out of a possible 48—truly a fine performance. Possessing that bit of swank so dear to a Yorkshireman, he is invariably top bird when we get a recognised Yorkshire judge.—G. S. Elwood (Blaydon-on-Tyne).

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

I propose calling a meeting of the committee of the Norwich Plainhead Club, writes Mr. Jno. Hopkins, the hon. secretary, for Saturday, March 25, to consider applications for patronage, so that any societies desiring the club's patronage must send in their applications before that date.

Southern Yorkshire C.C.

I shall be glad if any member of the Southern Yorkshire C.C. who has any alterations to rules or any other matter to be placed on the agenda for the annual meeting will let me have same by Saturday, March 11th, writes Mr. J. W. Rennie, the hon. secretary, Junction Hotel, Andover, Hants.

Scottish Plainhead Club.

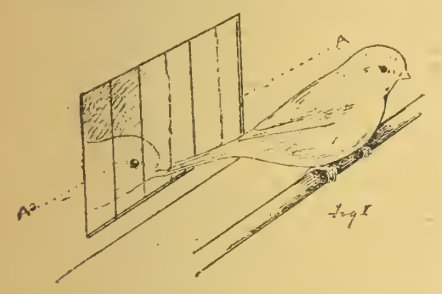
The balance sheet for 1910 and voting paper for election of officers for 1911 will be posted to every member on March 11. Any member overlooked should advise me at once. Will members kindly refrain from voting for me as secretary this year, as I am convinced it will be in the interests of the club to elect a new secretary, writes Mr. J. Brown, the secretary of the Scottish Plainhead Club.

The Yorkshire Prize Distribution

The amalgamated Yorkshire societies' annual dinner and prize distribution takes place this Saturday (March 11th), at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, writes Mr. H. Hill, secretary of the Prize Committee. Dinner commences at four o'clock (tickets 1s. 6d. each), and the social evening at six o'clock. All fanciers and friends are heartily invited.

Bird Beauty from Australia.

We have had the pleasure of inspecting the wonderful consignment of Australian birds which has just reached the importers, that well-known firm, Messrs. De Von and Co., of 114, Bethnal Green Road, London, E. To see even a single Gouldian Finch in a cage is calculated to bring a gasp of astonishment from anyone who has never previously made the acquaintance of this most marvellously beautiful little seed-eating bird. To see them in their hundreds and thousands, then, is an experience which is simply beyond the power of word to describe. Messrs. De Von's premises are transformed into a blaze of colour quite Oriental in its gorgeousness. In addition to Gouldian Finches (both Red and Black-headed, cocks and hens) Messrs. De Von have Grass Finches, Fire-red Finches, Bicheno Finches, and many other beautiful Australian species. All landed last week-end, and are in lovely condition, thanks to the personal attention they received en route. Messrs. De Von informed us that the demand for these feathered charmers was surpassing all expectations.



The Nursery Cage: How to Construct and Fix It.

By H. NORMAN ("Cage Birds" Artist-in-Chief)

In this series of articles, breeding cages (single and double), nest boxes and pans, and travelling cases, have been dealt with, their making, etc., illustrated and described.

As time rolls on the fancier will have young birds leaving the nest that will require special care and attention. Where the double breeding cage is in use these will simply be run into one end and the partition inserted, when the old birds can feed them between the wires.

This wired opening in the partition should not be placed too near the bottom, or our object in dividing the young ones from the parents will be defeated. As shown in our first illustration, where the opening is on a level, or nearly so, of the young birds' perch, the old birds are able to reach the tail of the young one each time he turns round, with the consequence that he will soon be deprived of that part of his plumage. In some varieties this is a most serious matter, as it is necessary to retain the tail either on account of its being slightly shorter than the second one, or, as in the case of Lizards, to retain the depth of colour. Had the opening been at the dotted lines AA, the old bird would not have been able to reach it, so that in constructing the partition, or in the making of a nursery cage, we must be careful to make it on the secure principle.

The nursery cage should be made of the very lightest material, and should on no account be cumbersome or heavy. It can, of course, be constructed of any size, and in this matter the young fancier must use his own judgment. It is quite as objectionable to have it too large as to have it too small; the happy medium will allow the young birds to move about, and yet to find their food with ease. If too large they appear to be lost, and for some days do not seem to know where to look for the egg pan or board.

The following measurements are the sizes of my own nursery cages, which have answered admirably: length 13 inches, height 12 inches and width 9 inches.

The cages are made of thin pine for the top, bottom, the two ends and bottom rails; the front and back take a 12 by 9 wire front The young birds require plenty of light to find food, etc., as they just leave the nest, and by making the cages in this way they are always able to get it no matter in what position the cage is hung.

Cut off the wood for the top, bottom, and two ends; take one of these and mark off the opening for birds to feed through. This should be done in the following manner. Take the width of the bottom rail of the breeding cage and mark at the dotted line B Fig 2; then two inches above that mark the opening which should be 6 inches wide and 4 inches deep. If the fancier does not possess a keyhole saw, the opening can easily be cut out with a strong penknife; cut across the grain first or you may possibly split the wood. Before commencing to cut, bore a hole in each corner with the bradawl; it will be a guide to cutting on both sides.

Before nailing it will be as well to fix the wires in the opening. These should be $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch apart. Cut them $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches long; press one end firmly with the top of the opening half-an- inch deep; then pull them downwards so that they go into the bottom about $\frac{1}{4}$ inch.

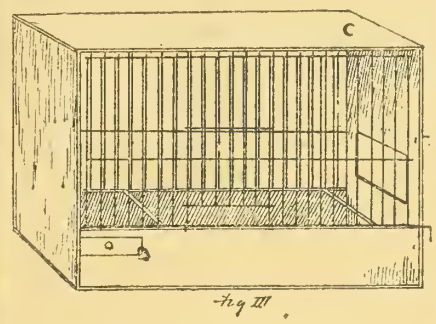
All this can easily be accomplished by gripping the wire tightly with a pair of pliers; the wire can easily be pressed into the soft wood.

Cut the two bottom rails, making an opening in one for an egg food pan as shown in previous illustrations; then nail together, taking care to get everything square. The wire parts can be fixed and the two perches put in position; and with some stout wire hoops for hanging on to the breeder our nursery is complete.

If thought advisable, a turn rail can be made to one of the bottom rails. To do so does not add much to the trouble of construction, and it saves time and inconvenience when cleaning out.

Of late years a feeding-board has come greatly into use. Size in exhibition birds is such a necessary point to cultivate that nothing should be left undone that is likely to further this object. The feeding board is a simple affair and is easily constructed by the young fancier. It should be about 7 inches long and 3 inches in width.

Fig. 4 will give an idea of its shape. A thin strip of $\frac{1}{4}$in. wood is nailed all round, and a groove made at one end for the wire door to shut down into when it is placed in the cage. The single leg should be the same length as the depth of the bottom rail. This leg need not be nailed in position. If it is carefully fitted into a round hole in the board, it can be taken out when not in use, and the whole easily packed away.



Some Gems of the - Finch Family.

By CHAS PRIOR (Brentford).

This splendid contribution, written round Mr. Goodchild's coloured plate, has dealt with the Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, Chaffinch and Bramblefinch, their showpoints, etc.

One more fact about Bramblefinches strikes me as worthy of mention. Early on in the show season the yellows have it all their own way. From the time of emerging through the moult until the end of the year they are at their best. But with the "turn" of the year comes also the turn of the buff. The yellow begins to lose his spangling. The many vigorous cleanings and preenings, as well as the ordinary wear and tear, are telling their tale on the brown edging of his back and head feathers. They will soon be solid black. The buff, on the other hand, is bringing himself to perfection by the self same process. His spangling is improved by the wearing down of the too lengthy edgings of brown. He has taken longer in the process of "coming up in colour," but his superior length of feather keeps him still "well furnished," whilst the shorter-feathered yellow is commencing to "go" in neck. Yes, from Christmas onwards the tide sets steadily in favour of the buff.

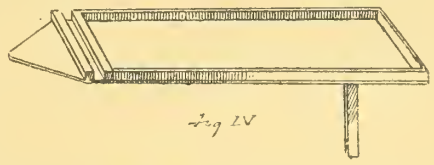
The concluding portion of these notes is now in sight, and it may perhaps be fitting to end up with a brief review of the broad lines to be followed in attending to these birds' wants in the way of food and accommodation.

The Birds' Bread and Meat.

First, as to seed. The appearance of Mr. Norman's splendid coloured plate of wild foods, and the accompanying notes upon their uses in the bird room are of such recent date that it will not be necessary to enter in detail into that branch of catering. Here we deal simply with the "bread and meat" element in the daily bill of fare. For this we are, of course, dependent upon the seed merchant. He supplies us with all the well-known cultivated bird seeds, and a few of the most used wild ones also. Thus we get constant and regular supplies of canary, winter and summer rape, teazel, linseed, hemp, sunflower, niger, maw, gold of pleasure, thistle, dandelion, and a few others.

From this list each of our seven little friends can be provided with a stock mixture compiled in accordance with his needs and tastes. That for the Goldfinch and Siskin will be approximately equal bulk of teazel, linseed, and canary. The Goldfinch may have, in addition to this, half a teaspoonful to a teaspoonful daily of hemp seed, or the same amount of sunflower—lightly cracked, if you like, until he learns to hull it for himself. Then there are thistle, niger, maw and dandelion, which should be provided, as titbits, by the teaspoonful, either separately or mixed. The great object is to offer variety, and variety cannot be overdone. The Siskin may have all the little luxuries which have been named for the Goldfinch, but his allowance of hemp must be restricted to a teaspoonful a week.

The Linnet is best suited by a stock mixture consisting of equal proportions (again by bulk) of canary, linseed, teazel, winter and summer rape. He will also appreciate a few grains of hemp from time to time, while a frequent teaspoonful of a titbit mixture comprising maw, dandelion, lettuce, and gold of pleasure will promote health, spirits, and song.



The Redpoll will be perfectly satisfied—nay, happy and cheerful—with just canary seed and a little rape; but, at the same time, there is not one in the whole list of seeds which will come amiss to him. Nothing is lost, and in his colour and condition a good deal is gained by a little generosity in arranging his diet.

In catering for the Bullfinch it is more difficult to handle the seeds of commerce with satisfactory results, by reason of his natural tastes taking a somewhat different turn. In fact, he ought to be provided with a stock diet of groundsel, chickweed, dandelion, shepherd's-purse, sow thistle, plantain and dock, privet and blackberries, and such like things, each as it comes into season. If this can be done, the seed mixture becomes of secondary consequence; but, anyhow, he may be tried with about everything in the list. He will evince a decided preference for sunflower, which need not be discountenanced. Hemp also, which may only be allowed in small quantities. Like the Redpoll, he will sample all the seeds you offer him, but with nothing approaching the appetite of that little rascal. He will often eat a little ripe fruit, and is fond of apple pips and other fruit kernels and seeds; even those of tomatoes and figs.

The Chaffinch and Bramblefinch brothers have tastes like enough to each other (in the matter of food), but differing considerably from those of Messrs. Goldfinch, Linnet, and Co. They hold the view that animal food is a necessary supplement to their dietary, therefore during the time that insects are abundant they become, in their wild state, practically insectivorous.

They seek diligently amongst the gooseberry and currant bushes, cabbage beds, etc., for the succulent green caterpillar; they rake over the decaying and dead leaves swept into corners by the winter wind in search of the wire-worm, the centipede, and the earwig. They pounce upon spiders, grubs, and other similar forms of insect life, and devour them with savage gusto. All these live things may be added to the always useful mealworm supplied to them in their domesticated condition, as well as their stock mixture of canary, rape and linseed, and their allowance, if they will eat it—as some will, and others won't—of some "softbill" food formula. Further variations are furnished by sunflower seeds, beechmast, dried walnuts (smashed), and, important item this, radish, cabbage, turnip, or rape seed, soaked to the point of germinating. This form of food—germinating vegetable seeds—is eaten more readily if scattered about the cage bottom than if given in a seed hopper.

At last we reach the final stage of our labours—that touching the question of housing these seven interesting little pets. It must be remembered that all are native resident birds, and perfectly hardy. It follows, therefore, that the atmosphere of their quarters should be normal—i.e., unheated. A spare room in the house or a snug structure in the garden are equally suitable environments. The aspect should be a genial one, facing as nearly due south as can be arranged. The things to be avoided are draught, damp, and extremes of temperature. The actual cage accommodation should be designed on the "box" principle, wire in front only, and back, sides, top and bottom of wood. Steadiness will be best cultivated by keeping singly in smallish cages of this pattern, say, ten to twelve inches in length: Stock cages for properly-domesticated birds, again singly, may be from sixteen to twenty-four inches long. Flights should also enter the scheme, of any length from three feet upwards. These should be fitted with a small compartment to drive the occupants into for catching, and is useful also as a bath chamber.

Several birds may with advantage be turned into one flight, providing a sharp lookout is always kept for individuals of pugnacious tendencies.

These are the broad lines which lead to success in the keeping of those beautiful and popular Finches. The broad lines only, understand; the hundred and one details are beyond the scope of such a treatise as this, extended, as it is already, far beyond the original idea, and yet only touching the fringe of the subject. So, in bidding adieu to the matter, let me commend the Goldfinch, the Bullfinch, the Redpoll, the Siskin, the Linnet, the Chaffinch, and the Bramblefinch as being, one and all, right worthy of the closest study and the keenest interest. And if any single one of my readers does not number at least one specimen of each in his collection of pets, let him at once remedy the omission, and taste of the joys of possession.

Wild Bird-Life.

Plumage of Wild Birds.

We are still enjoying exceptionally mild weather for the time of the year, and as a continuance of it will cause many wild birds to rush into nesting somewhat earlier than usual, one hopes that we shall not have our winter weather in April and May, when incubation is going on, and young birds are fairly plentiful. Some few years ago this did occur, and many a fine brood of Blackbirds and Thrushes were actually drowned in the nest, and the young of other species suffered from cold and wet; the sudden storms of rain and sleet came on so quickly that the ordinary absence of the parent birds from the nest was quite sufficient for the young to get chilled. Of all the birds to suffer in this way, there are none run greater risks than young Skylarks. A burst of sunshine on a cold, windy day will cause the most forward to leave the nest, when a sudden clouding over of the sun or a storm of rain, or even an ordinary shower will chill them, so that they are quite unable to return; and so in this way we have a reverse of Nature's law, and the strongest and fittest of the brood perish. All species are now to be seen in their best and most gorgeous plumage. Although directly after the moult wild birds are clean and bright and good to look upon, they do not assume that brilliancy of plumage which we all admire so much until the courting and pairing season commences. Within sight of the writer is a pair of Starlings hunting on the grass for the ever-desired grub. The cock bird is just like a piece of burnished metal, and for brilliancy of plumage would compare with the Glossy Starlings of foreign lands. His colouring is really marvellous, and every movement gives a flush of light, tinged with purple and green and indigo. Earlier in the winter one could hardly distinguish him from his partner, but now a child could tell the difference. He is in high fettle, and the rich colouring has so overrun his glossy jacket that the spangling of the breast has been almost obliterated. This spring colouring is noticeable in all specirs, even the most common and ordinary. The pair of Robins which are nesting among the ivy-covered boulders by the pond are easily distinguishable one from the other. Tennyson was evidently thinking of the male bird when he said, "In the Spring a fuller crimson comes upon the Robin's breast."

Birds Near Relations.

In the animal kingdom birds appear to stand quite alone, but as a matter of fact they are nearly related to reptiles, much nearer than they are to mammals, in spite of their external appearance.

Rough on the Partridges.

The Goshawk was once common in England, and was exceptionally destructive to Partridges. Its mode of hunting was to continually disturb the birds until they were exhausted, when it would select as many as it pleased.

Building an Out-door . . Aviary. . . Some Timely Hints.

By A. A. GOODALL (West Dulwich).

The Easter holidays, which will now soon be with us, afford an excellent opportunity for the birdy-man to set his house in order, and beginners who have not yet tasted the delights of aviculture might do worse, at this time, than seriously consider the erection of an open-air aviary—at all times an object of interest to owner and friends alike.

There are very few gardens—whether large or small—that are not capable of being rendered more attractive by the addition of an artistically designed aviary, wherein a few pairs of the hardier British or foreign birds can be kept. The erection of such a structure need not involve great expenditure; indeed, the actual outlay for material may be limited to a few shillings, while the work of construction—always the most costly item—will provide enjoyable recreation for the amateur who is at all handy with saw and hammer.

Ready-made aviaries are, of course, obtainable in great variety, and bird-lovers to whom expense is of secondary consideration, or who lack the time necessary for building, will find such an undoubted boon, albeit they are sometimes more picturesque than useful, and apt to sacrifice comfort to effect.

For Surburban Gardens.

In planning an aviary for the averaged-sized suburban garden, due consideration must, of course, be given to the style and arrangement of the latter—that a site may be selected to harmonise with the general surroundings. A southern aspect is undoubtedly preferable to any other, in that it shelters the inmates of the aviary from biting winds, while it likewise provides them with plenty of sunshine, always a desideratum where live creatures are concerned. At the same time, it is well to remember that too much sun is almost as bad as none at all, and birds to be kept in good health must be protected from its rays during the sultry days of summer.

Very artistic effects can be obtained by building with brick or stone—the latter especially—and where the necessary materials are easily obtainable, an aviary so constructed has much to commend it. The temperature, too, of such buildings is congenial to the birds, being always cool in summer-time, and warm in winter. The labour and expense, however, entailed in working with these materials is, generally speaking, beyond the reach of amateur bird-keepers, and for them wood will prove an excellent substitute; most garden aviaries are indeed built, or partly built, of wood.

Lean-to aviaries—when a substantial wall is available—are, of course, most economical, in so far as material is concerned, and one cannot do better than proceed on this plan, considering how necessary it is to ensure rigidity throughout. The question of size can only be regulated by individual circumstances, but it is well to bear in mind that a large, roomy flight will contribute greatly to the well-being of the birds. Unless unlimited space is at command, a covered-in top is best, and, to provide retirement for the more timid inmates, it is necessary that the roof of the aviary be allowed a good "fall" from back to front. Hereunder a few perches may be arranged—either extending the entire depth of the enclosure, or projecting at intervals from the back and sides. The same idea may be carried out by placing evergreens in and about the aviary. If placed in pots, such shrubs can be moved and changed at will, for in small flights they soon become soiled and rendered unsightly.

Ordinary matchboarding answers admirably for roofing purposes, and it retains the heat in a less degree than metal, which is rarely used for the purpose. Covered over with felt and dressed with tar—laid on hot—such a roof will defy the heaviest rain, and if retarred once a year, will become permanently weather-proof, especially if a sprinkling of coarse sand be added while the tar is warm. The operation requires some little care, lest any of the paintwork be damaged during the process.

Some Precautions.

The wire-netting of garden aviaries should be both strong and durable. Half-inch mesh is usually employed, and may be rendered impervious to the effects of the weather by being treated with paint—black by preference. If this is done, even galvanised wire will last as long again, while the general appearance of the aviary is considerably improved by the operation.

Careful bird-keepers take the precaution of putting up double netting, leaving an inch or two between each stretch, thus effectually foiling the designs of marauding cats. Similar protective measures are necessary for the doorway; this is best managed by erecting an outer gate and wiring in the space between that and the aviary door—an arrangement which also safeguards any attempts at escape on the part of the inmates. Some aviaries have this constructed in the form of a porch, with the space between the doors furnished with a seat for observation purposes.

As to flooring—either concrete or cement is suitable and indeed necessary to keep out vermin, which are unfortunately seldom absent from town aviaries. Having lost many birds from the depredations of these pests, I have found it a good plan to make a foundation of ballast mixed with mortar and broken glass, laying the cement over this when quite hard. The floor should be well covered with coarse sand, and swept over at regular intervals.

Pure, clean water must always be within reach; if supplied by a running fountain so much the better, as there is in that case no chance of stagnation. In the matter of food appliances, there are many devices for keeping the birds provided with the day's rations, either open trays or hoppers of various kinds being available for that purpose; the former possess the advantage of being more easily cleaned, and for that reason are preferred by many.

The majority of British birds are able to withstand the rigours of our treacherous climate without special protection, but where Canaries and certain foreign birds share an outdoor aviary, in my opinion, it is advisable to provide glass shutters for use during cold spells.

Some Recent Arrivals from Abroad.

The Argoondah Quail.

A pair of interesting little Quails were recently sent me for inspection, and were described by the importer as "Chinese Dwarf Quails." (I have not seen those now being advertised by a London dealer under the same name.) I had no difficulty in recognising them as the somewhat rarely imported Perdicula argoondah. This charming little species, sometimes known as the Rock Bush-Quail, is widely distributed throughout the Indian Peninsula, and is closely allied to the better known Jungle Bush-Quail, P. asiatica, which latter does not seem to have been imported for some years past, the last that I recollect being those imported by Capt. Perreau in 1908. The male is brownish on the back, mottled with buff and black, the throat is dull brick-red, and the underparts white barred with black. The female is a more sandy colour, with white throat and underparts. It can be easily distinguished from P. asiatica, which latter has the throat a much deeper red, the black bars on the breast more closely set and the flights barred on the outer margins with buff, the female having a red instead of a white throat. It is found on rocky, hilly ground, and is a very sporting little bird, being used by the natives for fighting purposes. This species bred in my aviary last winter, the eggs being laid in January, and the young being reared in February and March; I need hardly add that the aviary was heated. It is a hardy, delightful little species, which I can fully recommend, not the least of its attractions being the ringing, musical call-note of the male, frequently uttered in the early morning, which may be rendered "tee-tee-tee-tee."

Races of the Mealy Redpoll.

In a recent note I commented on the unusual numbers of Mealy Redpolls which have reached our Eastern coasts during the past winter, and I mentioned the fact (which was noted by Gatke in his "Birds of Heligoland") that, whenever there is an unusually large immigration of this species, a certain number of individuals of the allied species, F. exilipes, accompany it. This species, generally known as Coue's Redpoll, has the rump in the adult plumage almost pure white, and one would think that for this reason it would hardly escape observation; yet its occurrence in this country has been very rarely indeed noted. It occurred to me, when writing the above-mentioned note, that amongst the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS there must be some who could give us some useful information, if the matter were brought to their notice, and my anticipations proved correct, for I was pleased to receive a letter only a few days later from Mr. Geo. Cooper, of Norwich, saying that he had lately received a Mealy Redpoll with a pure white rump which he thought might be F. exilipes. Further enquiry elicited the fact that the bird was rather smaller than an ordinary Mealy, and it, therefore, seems almost probable that it is really a Coue's Redpoll.

Only a few days later the February number of "British Birds" reached me, recording the occurrence of Coue's Redpoll at Fair Isle and of Holboell's Redpoll in Scotland. All previous records of Coue's Redpoll, according to Mr. H. F. Witherby, have come from Yorkshire, so Mr. Cooper is to be congratulated on what is apparently the first record for his county.

As it is quite likely that some of our readers may have in their possession a specimen of one or other of the above species without knowing it (and such a specimen would be of considerable value), it may be of interest to give sufficient particulars for the purpose of identification.

Holboell's Redpoll is the largest (length 5.60 inches), and has a much larger beak. The rump is pure white except in the breeding season, when that of the male becomes rose-coloured. Habitat: The whole of N. Europe, from Scandinavia to E. Siberia. Witherby found it breeding in the same districts as the Mealy Redpoll in Russian Lapland. Horneman's Redpoll is rather larger than the Mealy; rump, nearly white; habitat: N.E. America, Greenland, and Iceland. The Mealy Redpoll comes next (length 5.1 inches); rump, greyish. Coue's Redpoll, rather smaller than the Mealy; rump, nearly white, but not so white as that of Holboell's; habitat: N.E. Europe and N. America.

My Method of Breeding Yorkshire Canaries.

GEO. THOMSON (Cardiff).

I have been a member of the Southern Yorkshire Canary Club for many years, and my success at Cardiff this season closes my career as a novice, having succeeded in obtaining three first prizes. At the Bristol Fanciers' Show, in 1908, I succeeded in winning 1st and special in extra good company with a ticked yellow Yorkshire cock, and the same year he obtained 1st at the Swansea National, and was then claimed by a gentleman in Glasgow for a large sum of money. With the same strain, at the Bristol Fanciers' Show, on October 26th, 1910, I won 2nd prize in a very strong class with a ticked yellow Yorkshire cock; on November 9th, 1910, at Swansea Cage Bird Show, I won 3rd prize and the S.Y.C.C. diploma with a marked buff cock. This same buff cock won 3rd prize at the L.C.B.A. Show (Westminster), on November 25th, 1910, competition being very keen there, and on November 30th, at the Cardiff Cage Bird Show the bird won 1st prize, thus closing my career as a novice. I have written this with a view of giving an idea of my persistence in trying to breed a good Yorkshire Canary.

The Yorkshire is a bird of singular gracefulness, as the reward of patience and perseverance; and good birds cost a lot of money. Providing you get good stock birds, the whole business depends entirely on how you pair them up; the more perfect your birds are mated the more sure your success. My advice is: Don't pick up birds here and there, but buy from one breeder that is now and then in the money. Get well-balanced pairs, and let them be buff and yellow of good feather.

The Chief Item.

The first and principal thing to be considered is the bird room, so that the birds become a pleasure, and not a hindrance. If they are not attended to properly, and given sanitary and commodious dwellings and proper food, they become a hindrance. The room must be bright, clean, and airy, and where plenty of sun and light are obtainable in this manner, no artificial heat is needed.

The best cages are undoubtedly the box cages, with removable fronts; they should be large and roomy, and as plain as possible. The perches should be fixed four inches from the bottom, giving plenty of head room, as nervy birds like to "tower" when in condition. I like the cages coloured inside a pale blue and outside a salmon shade, with Hall's distemper, which kills all mite.

I use elder stick for one perch, with the pith out, leaving it hollow, with a small notch in the ends, and by this means I catch, and keep down, the mite through the breeding season. I also encourage spiders about the walls of the room. Take out the hollow perch occasionally and tap the end on a board, and you will find the mite there frequently.

I pair up the first week in April, as the birds are then very forward, if attended to as recommended. I prefer breeding from one-year cocks, as the young are much larger and stronger than from first-year cocks. I never remove eggs on the first round, and by adopting those means, you can study the different temperaments of the birds. If I rear two birds I am well satisfied, and in the second nest, although I remove the eggs until the third is laid, I only allow the parents to rear two youngsters. They will then have all the care needed from their parents to give size, as the making of a good bird is in the first three weeks of its life.

When the young are hatched, for the first four days I give equal quantities of yolk of fresh eggs, and home-made bread, afterwards increasing the bread with white and yolk together. I also give the parents access to hemp when the young are twelve days old, and occasionally some soaked rape as a change, with the egg food and green food, young lettuce, dandelion, and watercress, and plantain seed.

I place the young birds in Yorkshire show cages when they are twenty-one days old, hanging them on the front of the breeding cage low enough to prevent plucking; and I let them remain there for about ten days. The young birds never forget the show cage; which goes a long way towards training them.

When the young birds are doing for themselves, and fairly on seed, you will sometimes find them go "thick." Take seed and egg food away, clean out the cage, and place them entirely on Mr. Sam Drake's remedy, viz., milk sop. Nothing beats it.

I should here mention that I have found that teazle seed, given occasionally to old birds which have become fat and sluggish in the winter months, an excellent thing. I have also found "Dutch Drops" a capital remedy for liver trouble in birds, just one drop twice a week in the drinker.

Knowing the Pedigree.

I ring all my birds, and keep a strict account of pedigree. I strongly recommend plenty of baths during the breeding season and moulting periods, as cold water is the finest bracer in the whole compass of medicine. Through the moult I also colour the water amber in the drinkers right through the moult, with the following: Get three-pennyworth of saffron, one teaspoonful of cochineal; add a pint of boiling water; let it stand over-night; strain, and add three-pennyworth of whisky, and one pennyworth of sweet nitre; place in a bottle and cork it up. I use it as follows: Get a quart jug of water, and add three parts of a teacupful of the mixture; this does for drinking water for all my birds. Be careful to decide when you intend to moult your birds, and on no consideration move them afterwards until completely toned up. Should you do so they will be sure to go amiss.

I feed on the best Spanish canary seed, and as a "conditioner" I give equal quantities of rape, niger, linseed, gold of pleasure, and maw seed—a teaspoonful each bird three times a week. I have all the egg-shell placed in the oven, and baked; and I grind them up in an old coffee mill (which can be bought for a shilling at any old furniture dealer's shop), and mix with the sand on the bottom of the cage.

On washing birds for exhibition I read an excellent article in CAGE BIRDS some time ago by Mr. H. E. Tringham (London), and I followed the instructions given therein. With the assistance of a local, able fancier, I can wash and stage my own birds to-day. I made a drying-cage similar to the one portrayed in CAGE BIRDS some time ago, and recommended by Messrs. Reeves and Mallett. The birds can remain there till the next morning, and are quite safe. I shall be glad to give particulars of same to any fancier. I commence colour-feeding when the young are seven weeks old.

In conclusion, I must say the royal road to success is; Study your strain, breed from the best, and lay a foundation of healthy stock.

*A Mischievous Jackdaw.

Two years ago my sister brought home with her a Jackdaw from the country. He was soon installed in his new home, and is now very tame. He has the run of the house, and some of his tricks are very amusing. He delights in tormenting our retriever dog, hopping out of reach when he has been up to mischief. One day mother was busy, and Jack was loose, when she heard a crash. The mischievous scamp had lifted a teapot lid off the table and dropped it on the floor.—Sent by Ralph Inman (age 15), Woodville Mt., Hunslet, Leeds.

*A Canary which Thinks.

Remarkable cleverness is sometimes displayed by birds. I had a Canary, between the wires of whose cage I used to fix a piece of lump sugar. One day it dropped out, and, when picked up, was found to be quite wet on one side. This surprised me, and I replaced it in the cage, with the dry side inwards, and determined to watch the bird's proceedings. After a few ineffectual attempts on the hard sugar the bird went to the water glass, filled its bill, dropped the water on the sugar, and repeated this several times. When the sugar was thus softened, it began to peck it.—Cutting sent by Wilford Barnes, 5, Railway Place, Grangetown, R.S.O., Yorks.

A Brave Cockatoo.

Charles Durand, of whose travels and adventures a book has been written, was asleep in his tent in those hot latitudes where strange wild beasts and dangerous reptiles abound, when he was roused before his usual time by a sharp, shrill cry of his favourite Cockatoo of "Time to rise! Time to rise!' accompanied by a violent flapping of the wings, and then a series of harsh screams in the Cockatoo's own natural tone. Charles looked around, woudering what had disturbed his feathered friend. The cause was soon plain—a deadly snake lay coiled up close to his bed, and, as he gazed, it reared itself and prepared to spring on the defenceless man. Just when he thought all hope was at an end the brave Cockatoo sprang from his perch, caught the reptile by the neck, and held him till his master could summon help from without. The snake was killed, and Billy was raised to a higher place in his master's esteem.—George Walker (age 14), 15, Nook End Road, Heanor, Notts.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

£1,000 worth of Prizes to be distributed amongst Its Members.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has caught on. Every one is talking about it. Good wishes for its success are pouring in. Our Letter Box is choked to overflowing with suggestions and comments concerning it. The exhibiting section of the cage-bird keeping fraternity seems especially keen on the idea. And to promote CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE amongst exhibitors and cultivators of prize cage birds we have devised the following scheme.

DETAILS OF OUR SCHEME

Every exhibitor of cage birds must "catch a pal." That is to say, he must make it his business not only to join CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, but to enlist a brother bird-keeper.

Every member of the League may, if he chooses, assign half the value of his annual subscription in special prizes to any society or show in which he takes a special interest. The other half will go towards the progressive and protective work of The League. By catching a pal from the ranks of outside birdkeepers, a member is thus enabled to materially help the special prize list of his particular society.

CAGE BIRDS will underwrite or guarantee special prizes under this scheme to the value of £1,000.

The practical result of this idea in a socicty whose membership totals some forty fanciers may be seen thus :—

The annual subscription to the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE will be 1s. (cost of membership badge, 6d. extra).
Forty members of local society each join the League and donate 6d. to the special prize fund of their society	£1
And each "catch a pal" for the League	£1
Total value of Prizes for Local Society	£2

A local birdkeeper may be disinclined to join a local bird society, but may like the idea of subscribing to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

On the foregoing basis there would not only be Two Pounds' worth of prizes for the local society, but Two Pounds' worth of funds for the work of the League.

An independent paid Secretary will be appointed to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and if necessary, clerical assistance will be given him to see that letters are promptly attended to and the work of the League discharged in a business-like manner. An Advisory Committee of responsible fanciers will be selected to superintend the aggressive and defensive movements adopted by the League in the interests of birdkeepers.

The allocation and division of the special prizes due to each society will be left entirely to the league members in the society concerned. The prizes will be selected from £1,000 worth of real oil paintings and water-colours handsomely framed—constituting magnificent ornaments for the fancier's home.

To encourage secretaries and fanciers to enlist members in the new League we shall offer the following

CASH PRIZES AMOUNTING IN ALL TO TWENTY POUNDS.

£5 cash to the individual fancier who, between this date—March 10th, 1911—and March 11th, 1912, secures the greatest number of recruits to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

£5 cash to the Society whose nominations to the League between March 10th, 1911, and March 11th, 1912, are the most numerous.

£3 cash to the individual fancier who nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

£3 cash to the Society which nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

And Four Cash Prizes of £1 each to societies whose total nominations to the League show the best average per member.

SOME ALTERNATIVE PROPOSITIONS.

But a League member who is not interested in show matters is not bound to contribute his quota to the development of the exhibiting interest. He may donate half his annual subscription to the League to any one of the following ideas :—

LITERATURE FUND.—For the dissemination amongst poor birdkeepers of useful literature calculated to enlighten them and improve the conditions under which their birds are kept in domestication.

DEFENCE FUND.—For the protection of bird-keepers by legal or other process from swindlers, or unjust attacks by moneyed faddists and sentimentalists. For the general protection of bird-keepers' interests.

Failing any specific instruction from a League member as to how his donation is to be expended it will go towards the

GENERAL PURPOSES FUND.—For the development and progressive work of the League, advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

BADGES.

A neat and unobtrusive design for members' badges has been approved and will be ready in about three weeks' time. These badges will be sold at sixpence each.

We hope members will wear their League badges at every possible opportunity. They will be found to be attractive yet subdued and refined in appearance, with no suggestion of "advertisement" (except of the C.B.L.) about them. The badge will serve as an introduction between bird-keepers—an outward and visible sign, so to speak, of the "bond of good-fellowship" it is the object of the League to establish—and to bring the fact of the existence of the League into wider notice. We are looking to the use of the badge as likely to greatly help the furtherance of the objects of Cage Birds League.

BRANCHES OF THE LEAGUE.

It is hoped from time to time to form in the different centres branches of the League, but this work must be left for the moment, until the main body is in a thoroughly sound financial and operative state.

The temporary Offices of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE are at 154, Fleet Street, London.

We print below a further selection of letters received from our readers concerning Cage Birds League. We are glad to have their opinions and suggestions, which will be given every consideration and be adopted where-ever possible.—EDITOR.

Sir,—Wish Cage Birds League every success and a prosperous career.—A. M. BREMNER (Westfield-by-Thurso).

Sir,—With reference to the League you are forming, we shall be pleased to become members of same.—J. DEAN AND SON (Liverpool).

Sir,—Cage Birds League is truly a grand idea, and it certainly should receive the support of every fancier. I wish it every success; also our good old friend CAGE BIRDS.—H. BURROWS (Southall).

Sir,—I should like to say that if a "Cage Birds League," as mentioned in CAGE BIRDS of February 25, is started, I hope to belong to it. I hope the League will do all in its power to stop men keeping birds in those wretched "hop cages." I sincerely wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—(Mrs.) ADA FAVELL (Sheffield).

Sir,—I am greatly in favour of your proposed society or an Association of Bird-keepers and Bird Lovers. So you can depend on me, and I will send my mite up to you when told to do so. I really think it will be a good thing. So go ahead, and push it on, and whatever I can do to help you, I will do it with a willing mind. I will try and get other birdy men to follow me, as it is a good proposal all through.—R. A. SPENCE (Glasgow).

Sir,—I am following with great interest the correspondence re a Cage Birds League. It is an idea that I believe will catch on, and will only want a bit of pushing to make a thorough success. It will be the means of getting a lot more new members, and every secretary ought to do his best to help it along. A League like that could make its voice heard on any point connected with our hobby. I wish it every success, and will do my best to help.—W. H. PYKE (secretary of the Reading and District C.B.S.).

Sir,—I was delighted to see that at last we are going to have a league to protect our interests and our hobby of bird-keeping. I myself unite my views with yours in forming this league. It is no sin, says the High Court Judge, to kill one of our sweetest songsters; then surely it is no sin to keep them in a cage, where they are well tended, and where they will sing from morning till night even better than when free outside. Is this cruel? I say No. But where they are killed and eaten, this is against human nature. I wish the league every success.—JAMES PORTER (Newtown Cunningham, Ireland).

Sir,—I am very pleased to see that you are thinking of forming a Cage Birds League, and I hope it will commence at once, now that the year is just beginning, and I for one will be pleased to become a member of same. I do not quite agree with the suggestion that members should pay an entrance fee, as I think that rather deters people from joining; but I think there should be a small charge of, say, 2s. 6d. per year, to include badge of membership; such badge to be renewed each year, and each year be of a different colour, so as to show that the wearer is still a member of the society. I think this would not hurt anybody. I wish CAGE BIRDS and the new Cage Birds League every success and prosperity.—A. HOLLINGSHEAD (Hove).

Sir,—I am glad to find the much-wanted Cage Birds League mentioned in this week's CAGE BIRDS, and I hope it will receive the support it deserves. My views are: Club house or meeting-place in all large towns, these to be supported by weekly or monthly subscriptions; each headquarters to have its own council and to have a representative at a mass meeting, which can be held in a favourable city after ballot of members all round. By joining hand in hand, bird lovers may release themselves from the restrictions placed upon them by County Councils, and have one law, not 70 or 80 bye-laws to hold him fast whether in pursuit of hobby or livelihood. Every headquarters, I think, would benefit by having enrolled on its books a lawyer, for a club of bird lovers often wants assistance from these gentlemen.—ARCHIBALD STINSON (Manchester).

Sir,—I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS continually since the first number, but I have never been more pleased at anything within its pages than I am at the talk of forming a Cage Birds League. It is a splendid idea for fighting the so-called faddists, and police court cases, etc., and for helping fanciers in difficulties generally. But I hardly need say that to do this we must have a substantial sum of money behind us, and, as for myself, I would gladly pay a yearly subscription of 5s. But I will leave it to more able hands than mine to settle. But as it is for our own good, and to help us in any loss or difficulties that may come to our lot, I think it should not be less than 2s. 6d. entrance fee and 2s. or 2s. 6d. yearly subscription, and twice this amount for dealers or others who get their living out of the Fancy. The badges could be made in gold, silver and bronze, to suit different pockets, in four styles—as tie pins, brooches, pendants, and for the coat lapel. So that you would have an idea how many of each sort and quality were needed, fancier members could apply for same at an early date, so that all could be supplied in rotation. I hope to see things come to a head at an early date.—F. W. LENG (Spennymoor).

Sir,—I am strongly of opinion that the Cage Birds League would be a very good thing. I am now a new beginner in the Roller Canary Fancy, and I should like to see something of the sort started. The objects of the League are set out very plainly for those who are lovers of the Fancy to grip. I will at all times do my best to make it a success.—ALFRED JONES (South Normanton).

Sir,—I was delighted to see in CAGE BIRDS your proposal to form a Cage Birds League. I have only been in the hobby for the last three years, but have kept a few birds for many years, and meet with a number of faddists who accuse me of cruelty, though the birds have every attention paid them, and a beautiful aviary withal. I thank you for the help of your valuable weekly paper, CAGE BIRDS.—MISS YALDEN (Guildford).

Sir,—I think your idea of a Cage Birds League is splendid. I shall be pleased to join. I endorse Mr. Claude St. John's letter, with but slight difference, that is, membership fee 1s., and badges of various qualities to be paid for. But stick to the name. The initials for badge should be C.B.L. It would, if worn prominently, cause many an agreeable chat in train, tram, or 'bus. I wish the League success.—FRANK THOMAS (Ramsgate).

Sir,—I for one should be glad to hear of the Cage Birds League being started, not only so that we should recognise one another by its badges, but so that if a list of names could be had we could feel we had friends in all parts of the globe. In my experience as an advertiser in CAGE BIRDS, I have had letters from all round the world, I think. Now, in trading we could pick on a League member, and in any case we could apply to League members for any information respecting others in the matter of unfair trading.—J. BIRCH (Skelmersdale).

Sir,—It was with great interest that I read in CAGE BIRDS the announcement to form an association of bird-lovers—a Cage Birds League. I hope it will make speedy headway. I will help to bring into existence a league or society that will aid in bringing about good-fellowship between bird fanciers. I would like to see a branch of the Cage Birds League or Society in Dublin for the protection of birds such as I have seen sold in the market in Dublin—birds that were nearly dead, and that to poor fellows who did not know the birds were nearly dead. The birds, of course, were lively when bought. I think the name is a proper one. I also think that an annual subscription should be imposed of 1s. 6d., say. This, I think, would suit everyone's pocket.—F. J. RADLEY (Dublin).

Sir,—"Cage Birds League," I feel sure, will be a success, as its principal points are of good intention. If permitted, I shall be pleased to wear the badge, and be a member of such a League as yours. I can assure you it shall have all the support I can give it, and I trust it will bring brother fanciers more together.—WM. LLOYD (Pendlebury).

SIR,—On opening my CAGE BIRDS this week-end, as usual (I say as usual because I have never missed it since your valuable weekly paper for fanciers was first issued), I was both surprised and pleased at the gigantic scheme you anticipate starting. To my idea, it is the very thing that has been required for some time. I shall only be too pleased to join your League, as also will many more fanciers around here.—(ROBERT B. FRYER (Manchester).

SIR,—Judging from the replies to your announcement re the Cage Birds League and its principles, it is just what was wanted. We want good fellowship with each other in the Fancy the whole world through, and the League will help us to get it and at the same time we shall have a mighty influence for good. I think there ought to be a rule in the League that all members promise neither to borrow nor to lend birds to other fanciers for show purposes, and also to expose wrongdoing wherever they may find it, and so strengthen good fellowship among good fellows. Then, don't you think it would be wise to have a list of C.B.L. lecturers for the several parts of the kingdom, who would be willing to lecture on their own specialities in the Fancy before our various societies in their district, and so increase our knowledge in birdy lore? Again they help to strengthen the bond of good fellowship. The League will help us when the time of stress comes to stand shoulder to shoulder to fight for our rights and privileges as men and fanciers in the rightful defence of our principles. I have not the least doubt about the League being a success. In fact, it will become a National institution of bird lovers. So I would suggest that it be named the National Cage Bird League. Keep the subscription as low as possible to enable the poorest of our brethren to join; success will then be assured if we each try to do our little bit.—W. DOWNING (Manchester).

Sir,—It was with the greatest pleasure that I read your announcement of forming a Cage Birds League. Allow me to tender my sincere thanks to you for taking this matter up (I am sorry I had not time to say so last week, being busy removing). I am pleased to see you are going to give badges, etc., to members, which I think is a step in the right direction. Also, you have hit the mark exactly in calling it Cage Birds League. I see your correspondent Mr. Thomas's ideas exactly correspond with mine; and allow me to thank this gentleman for his splendid letter on this subject, also Mr. C. St John for his suggestion as to how it should be worked. It is about nine years ago since I wrote to the Fancy Press about a scheme I called "A Protection Fund." It was the loss of that noted Crest of Mr. Glasscock's at the Crystal Palace that first gave me the idea that such a fund was greatly needed to help fanciers who were not in a financial position to do it themselves. I hope you will keep pushing along. I will leave no stone unturned to further this splendid boon to all bird fanciers, and wish it every success.—J. R. SLACK (Wallsend, late of Newcastle).

Sir,—Those whose sympathies lie on the side of bird-keeping in contradistinction to its suppression by faddists, and who have the cause of the cage bird Fancy at heart, will welcome, and thank you for, the suggestion to form a Cage Birds League. The wonder is that such an association, taking into consideration the three objects as defined by you in your issue of February 25, has not been formed before, and I doubt not, now that the suggested movement is set afoot, it will be warmly received and supported. But I am of the opinion that the cage bird public needs to be awakened to a sense of the importance of the objects as set out by you. Cage bird fanciers as a body are, in my way of thinking, concerned only with their own immediate and individual needs and interests. They have yet to learn, for instance, that the establishment of a bond of good-fellowship and union between bird-keepers the world over will do them real good; they are too independent to wish to participate in the benefits of a general inculcation of principles by which "birds suited to captivity may be kept under humane and proper conditions"; and they are blissfully ignorant of the need for defence and protection. But in expressing myself thus I hope it will not be thought that I am pessimistic; on the contrary, I am profoundly optimistic, and see no reason why the work should not be quite easily carried out by, as you say, the co-operation of the secretaries of societies; left to but one or two, such a work would be too much, and could only be accomplished at much cost and after years of labour. I would suggest, too, that by the co-operation of secretaries, arrangements be made for the education of the general public by means of the distribution of pamphlets setting forth the needs of fanciers, and hints on the proper care of pet canaries, etc. When the bird-loving public have been thus educated—then will be a time of unqualified success for "Cage Birds League." The present is an opportune moment at which to begin operations. I see no reason why the League—made self supporting by the charge of a few pence for the badge—should not be in full swing by the time the next show season comes round. This, at any rate, is the wish of—"CALCULATUS" (London).

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIE SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

What is "Bre ding Condition"?

Norwich.—Most decidedly your hen is not in breeding condition whilst moulting, and will not be so until at least a week or two has elapsed after the moult is quite finished. To be in breeding conditiou, a bird must be in a rather high condition of health, as bright and active and full of animal spirits as possible, and in perfect feather—that is, close and tight in plumage and perfectly free from any signs of moulting. Keep your hen in a quite comfortable place, but not very warm, and see that she is quite free from draughts. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple diet. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed; and on alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle, and millet, a leaf or two of crisp young dandelion, or a morsel of banana may be given four times a week. Allow her to bathe on fine, mild days. In the drinking water give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day until moulting ceases. Continue the other treatment for two or three weeks. The hens in outdoor aviary are probably only "playing at nesting" yet. It would have been best to keep nesting conveniences and materials out of their way a little longer, but now you had better let matters take their course. Of the three foods you mention, I should prefer a modification of No. 3, viz.: Equal parts sponge cake, bread crumbs, and egg.

Norwich Loose in Feather.

X Rays.—(1) I think the solution of your troubles is to be found in your third question, which clearly indicates that your room is much affected by damp, otherwise the wet from bathing would not remain even about the perches for so many hours. The most important step towards putting and keeping your stock in good condition is to see that this dampness is quite removed. To reduce the birds' fat put on a diet of plain canary only, and limit the quantity to a small teaspoonful per bird daily. Twice a week still further reduce this quantity by one-half, and make up the same bulk with summer rape. Once a week give, in addition to the seed, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. Give a liberal supply of groundsel, chickweed, or dandelion daily, or if this is not available, a grape (broken open) two or three times a week. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week; in the next week, six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid. Then repeat the two weeks in the same order. (2) Rape is fattening, as you term it; maw and gold of pleasure, if used in the quantities usually advised, are not. As both are very oily, possibly they would be if used in excess. (3) It certainly does matter, and must be deleterious to the bird's health, for wet to remain about the cages so many hours. This dampness should be corrected, and the room efficiently ventilated. Until this is done it would be much better to withhold baths until the weather is much milder and more dry.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Breeding in Studio.

Queen B.—Judging from your description, the studio would be a most unsuitable place for breeding Canaries as it stands, as only the very hardiest birds, whose birth and up-bringing had already inured them to such conditions, could be expected to withstand the extremes of heat and cold for any length, and the probability is you would soon find the birds become bronchial and in a state of constant moult. If you have the slow combustion stove you mention well fitted, and arranged so that none of the products of combustion or fumes are admitted to the room, you might try utilising this from late autumn to the end of spring, as and when required to maintain a fairly equable temperature, and seeing that the building is well ventilated, with ingress for fresh, pure air low down, and exits for foul air near the ceiling make it tolerably serviceable. The glass should be provided with shutters to close at night in cold weather, and thus help to prevent loss of heat by radiation, and with sashes to open during sultry weather and prevent the temperature running up out of bounds. If building is used as a studio, I suppose it would not be feasible to cloud the glass with frosting, or that would help to reduce the excessive fluctuations. If the above suggestions were carried out you might start with either Yorkshires, Norwich, Borders, or Rollers, but must get birds which have been bred and reared in a normal temperature. As regards arrangement of cages, I take it you mean the space at disposal is 8 ft. high by 4 ft. wide. In that case you should place four tiers of single breeders, commencing about a foot from the floor. There would be room for two side by side—altogether eight cages; or, better still, four single breeders in two tiers, and the two bottom tiers to consist of flight cages for the young.

Norwich with Diarrhœa (Novice).—Look carefully into the quality and condition of all your seeds, foods, and water, especially hemp and rape. Treat the bird as advised to "F.K.U.," but, in your case, give the rhubarb and salts mixture for one whole day before starting the other mixtures. You might also, with advantage, stick a bit of cuttlefish in the wires for bird to peck at.

Choice of Breed (Amateur).—Either Border Fancies or ordinary Hartz or Roller Canaries would suit you best to begin with, and gain experience before taking up any other expensive variety. Both are very cheap, if you are satisfied with specimens of moderate quality, extremely hardy, and quite easy to breed and manage. If there is a good demand locally for ordinary singers, Rollers would probably pay you best, or, at least, help you to make the hobby self-supporting, whilst at the same time gaining experience. Get our handbook, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, and you will find no difficulty in getting along with a fair measure of success.

Seed Sample (Curly).—As far as can be judged from so small a sample as reached me, the canary is a very good all-round sample. If the bulk is free from dirt and dust, you need not wish for better. The rape is rather dusty in bulk, I imagine, and only fair in quality. It is probably last season's crop, and would be better, if properly stored, at the end of this season than it now is. Neither of these seeds should cause any trouble with your birds. Use three parts of canary to one part of rape mixed together. To correct the looseness, see replies to two other correspondents in this issue concerning diarrhoea.

A Suitable Mate (Q. E. D.).—Either a 1909 or 1910 hen will make an equally suitable mate for the 1909 cock. The disparity of age in this case is but trivial, and as both birds are, or should be, practically equally virile, the balance of power would not be materially affected by age. For this law to come into effective operation you would need to mate the cock with a 1906 or 1907 hen, when, if the hen bred successfully, you would be almost certain to get a good majority of young cocks, but as this would mean using a hen whose reproductive powers are probably rapidly waning, I should not recommend you to try it, unless it is purely as an experiment to test the fact. For practical purposes the 1909 or 1910 hen would be best.

Too Hasty (W. Thompson).—Cultivate patience; that's the very best thing you can do, or could have done. As a matter of fact, you have been much too impatient, and put the birds together more than a month too soon, and before they were really ready for mating. Your best plan now is to separate the birds, remove all nesting materials, and treat them as follows: Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the drinking water for two days. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give each half a teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and maw. Give a crisp young leaf of dandelion daily as soon as you can get it (there is plenty about now in warm corners and hedgerows), but see that it is quite free from frost. Continue this treatment, and keep birds separate, until the end of this month or the first week in April. Then you will probably find them ready to mate and settle down to business.

To Improve Song (York).—To get a better class of singer than your pure Yorkshires, you cannot do better than cross Yorks. hens with good singing Roller cocks. If you also wish to detain a fair amount of the Yorkshire size, colour, and type, you must make up a pair or two with Yorkshire cock and Roller hens. Say, if you put up three pairs, let one consist of a clear yellow Roller cock and a ticked or unevenly marked buff Yorkshire hen; the second pair a ticked buff Roller cock and a clear yellow Yorkshire hen; and the third pair a ticked yellow Yorkshire cock and a clear buff Roller hen. As soon as the young can do for themselves, remove them out of hearing of the Yorkshire cocks, and train them under good singing Rollers; Next season mate the young among themselves, and the hens from the third pair with Roller cocks, and the young cocks from the third pair mate back to York hens in every case selecting for breeding stock those cocks that prove the quickest and most apt learners of the Roller song. By following up these lines for a few seasons, you will get a very considerably improved songster, and still retain a nice and attractive type of bird.

Wheezing at Night (D. P.).—Yes, the condition you find her in at night shows she is suffering from that early or incipient stage of asthma which too frequently passes unnoticed and unsuspected. It is not infectious at all, so there is nothing to fear on that score, but the young from such hens, unless the condition is quite cured, are certainly a great deal more predisposed to attack than are the progeny of perfectly sound and healthy hens. In the present stage there should be a very fair chance of curing it. Remove her to a quite comfortable place—not necessarily very warm, nor yet on the cold side—see that she is quite free from cold draughts and extreme fluctuations of temperature, but at the same time let it have plenty of fresh pure air. In addition to the staple seed diet give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of glycerine and oxyimel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Losing Feathers (J.R.J.).—Keep bird in a comfortable temperature, not necessarily overheated, nor yet on the cold side, but equable and quite free from draughts or vitiated air. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a month give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flour of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. Twice a week, on the alternate days, give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, millet, teazle, linseed, and maw, and on each of the remaining days a spray of green food or a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. You may then go on giving the hypophosphites for a few weeks. Anoint the bare places twice a week with zinc ointment.

Sore Foot (W. O'N.).—It is quite likely the small swellings are due to enlarged, and, perhaps, loose, scales on the foot as a natural consequence of the bird's age. Dissolve a teaspoonful of boracic acid in half a teacupful of hot water, pour into a saucer, and whilst still fairly hot, but, of course, nothing near scalding hot, catch the bird and well bathe the foot in it for a few minutes. When you can comfortably bear your little finger in the solution, hold the foot immersed in it for a few minutes and then gently try the large scales with the thumbnail, and, if loose, gently lift them off, but be careful not to use any force or make the foot bleed. Having done so, or if they are not loose after well bathing and cleaning, dry gently and anoint the foot all over with zinc ointment. Repeat the anointing next day, which should suffice to set matters right.

Roller with Diarrhœa (F.K.U.).—See that all foods, especially hemp, are quite sound and sweet. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape, and each day for a fortnight give a few grains of hemp, and half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and, after the first day, slightly dusted with carbonate of bismuth, and sprinkled with maw seed. Give no green-foods or fruits, except a morsel of banana every day or two, until quite well. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece for half a day only, and afterwards give 20 drops of whiskey, six of tincture of gentian, and four of laudanum in the water daily until looseness is corrected, then drop the laudanum, but continue the other items for a fortnight on alternate days.

Singing and Breeding (One in Doubt).—The general rule is that when a cock is in good breeding condition he is also by virtue of that condition of necessity in good vigorous song, but it does not follow that a cock which does not sing will never breed. There are exceptions to this, as to every other, rule. I have myself bred from cocks which scarcely sang a note, but, even so, knowing that such cases are quite exceptional, I should not feel justified in publishing general information in saying otherwise than that cocks should, or must, whichever term you like, be in good song in order to breed successfully. Doubtless this is the view taken by the author of the article you mention. As regards your own birds, if the one you bought for a cock is a young bird and in good vigorous health, the chances of its being a hen are considerable. I am inclined to think you have been "had," to use a colloquialism.

Stuck in Moult (H. Barker).—Either this bird did not begin to moult until abnormally late, or this is a second moult, or perhaps an attempt to complete what was only a partial moult at the proper season. If it is now getting rid of the feathers freely, a vapour bath is quite unnecessary, but if it is not, and its condition is not much improved, by all means give it a vapour bath morning and evening for two or three consecutive days as may appear necessary to start the feathers to drop freely. Be careful to avoid any chill or draught afterwards, and keep a light cover over the cage for a few days. Keep bird in quite a warm place, but well ventilated, free from draught and great fluctuations. Give a staple of plain canary seed. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed stale sponge cake lightly dusted over with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkle it with maw seed. Add 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the drinking water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for a month. A mealworm each day, if available, would prove very beneficial.

Out of Condition (H. Hinckley, jun.).—Thanks for further information, which, however, missed the most important points. What I meant by how you "treat the bird" was detail of your general management and conditions under which bird is kept, whether in warm, or cold, or fluctuating temperature, and so forth. However, your letter suggests enough for me to advise you to go on with the treatment given in last reply for a month, except that you may now begin to give a leaf of dandelion every day, and after giving the medicines as advised last week for two weeks, begin over again and repeat the two weeks' medicines in the same order. Give a bath three times a week when weather is mild and bright. The mere fact of a Yorkshire not being very "slim and upright" does not necessarily mean that it is out of condition. Of course, a good Yorkshire ought to be upright is a good principle, but, unfortunately, they are not all ideal specimens.

Not Better (E.V.C.D.).—You should have referred to my last reply or enclosed a cutting of it. Your idea that she is a fairly old bird may be the key to her trouble. Have you examined her claws? If not, do so, and if they are overgrown, which I suspect is the cause of her clumsy movements, catch her, and after well bathing feet clean in warm water, cut the claws back to a proper length with a small pair of scissors—nail scissors or nail clippers are best. Hold the claw up before a strong light, and you will see a pink streak running part of the way down the centre of claw. This is the blood vessel or "quick." Cut just short of the extreme end of the streak, and no harm or bleeding will result. Treat each one separately; anoint feet with a little vaseline afterwards. In addition to the plain Canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for a fortnight a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

Hens with Colds (Puzzled).—I cannot quite understand the position of your cages and flights with reference to door and windows (if any, as no window is indicated on sketch). But in any case any existing draught, unless a cold-cutting stream from some small chink or orifice which goes direct to the flight, would almost certainly affect some of the caged cocks. You should see if there is such a local draught, perhaps existing only when the wind is in a certain direction, and, if so, remedy it. Then you may have a vigorous bather amongst them, and if the bath is given regularly this naturally incites the others to emulation, and in this way the floor and perches may be damp, and some of the least vigorous birds start the round of colds by excessive bathing in unfavourable weather. Before the breeding season is on you should overhaul this flight, remove and scour and thoroughly dry all perches and sand tray (if any), and wash down the flight with a solution of Izal or Jeye's, and re-paint or distemper. Only give the bath in fine mild weather, and add twenty drops of whisky, six each of glycerine, and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, to each two tablespoonfuls of the drinking water every second day for a week. Give about half a teaspoonful of hemp per bird on the alternate days. Shall be glad to hear how this succeeds.

Plucks Himself (Daphne).—You should very carefully examine the cage, probing in any small cracks, or holes, or open joints, for red mites, and use a white or light-coloured cover at night and examine it each morning. These insects do not live upon the bird, but harbour out of sight in the cage, and only come out to forage at night. If any are discovered, the remedy is obvious. You are also feeding incorrectly. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for the next fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk, slightly dusted with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled lastly with maw seed. On the alternate days give a leaf of dandelion or spray of chickweed. In the drinking water give ten drops of lemon juice and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week. Anoint bare place a few times at intervals of a day with Lanscyllin.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Pewit and Plover (M. Gregory).—"Pewit" is a name familiarly applied to the Lapwing (Vanellus vulgaris), and "Plover" (or Green Plover) is another name frequently given this bird. I expect that in your case Pewit and Plover would indicate one and the same bird, i.e., the Lapwing. There are many Plovers (the Kentish Plover, Ringed Plover, and Golden Plover, to name a trio well-known in England).

Identity of Birds (Danny).—1. This is the Corn Bunting (sometimes called the "Bunting Lark"). Can't tell the sex, cock and hen being alike in plumage. No song; utters an extraordinary collection of notes which sound as though a rusty lawn-mower was being pushed about. 2. A hen Reed Bunting. 3. A cock Reed Bunting. No real song; utters a curious string of notes, not quite so unmelodious as those of the Corn Bunting.

Overgrown Beak (J. E. Pickering).—You will have to trim down the mandible to normal size with a sharp pair of scissors. It will keep on growing. Give the bird a lump of old, hard mortar to peck, and a piece of cuttlefish, and try tacking up a piece of medium sandpaper in its cage, or glueing it round part of a perch.

Owls (W. J. Y.).—Owls must be given flesh food; they will not eat soft food mixtures, as do Magpies, etc. I have known them eat green food; I was much amused to see one kept by a friend tear up groundsel and eat it greedily. Owls must frequently have flesh with fur, or feathers on, to assist them in throwing up castings, a natural act essential to their well-being. Most Owls will eat fish, but you will find this causes them to smell more offensively than would otherwise be the case.

Linnet and Canary (A Novice).—In the "Nutshell" booklet on the Linnet (post free, 2½d., from CAGE BIRDS), you will find full advice on feeding him for breeding purposes. Pair him up when he is singing freely and loudly, and his beak has turned a deep slate-blue in colour. If possible, however, keep the Linnet and hen Canary within sight of each other for a time before finally running them together. Until the Linnet is absolutely up in breeding condition good eggs, of course, cannot be expected. If you desire any further hints, please state clearly upon what points.

Loss of Siberian Goldie (Troubled).—You say you have kept your birds in "show-cages in a cosy room," which means that they have been kept at a warm temperature and have had little opportunity of taking exercise. On top of this you have given unlimited oily, fattening seeds (crushed hemp, niger, and linseed). This combination, I expect, has resulted in the liver becoming diseased, bringing about diarrhoea and death. The birds must have been healthy when bought, or they would not have lived from October. Of course, this is merely guesswork (more or less), but you can ascertain the exact cause of death by sending a body to our Mr. Yates (vide rules under heading of "Post Mortems").

Larks and LarK Food (North Shields).—The two samples are fairly good of their kind. That you describe as "soft" appears to be just biscuit-meal and dried flies—can't locate any other ingredients. The "hard" is barley meal, and coarse oatmeal, with various seeds (canary, rape, and maw), and a few dried flies. In the "Nutshell" booklet on the Skylark, you will find some excellent recipes for foods. 2. It is not worth while trying to breed mealworms for one or two birds. It takes a long time to get a mealworm box well established. Half fill a large tin with alternate layers of coarse sacking, and a mixture of barley-meal and bran. Put in a pint of mealworms. Store away the tin in a warm place (say a cupboard), boring holes in the lid, and sides (near the top), for ventilation. In time the mealworms turn into beetles, which lay eggs in the sacking, and these eggs hatch out into mealworms in due course. 3. Let the bird dust himself in fine sand, or a mixture of sand and road dust. 4. If this Lark is very nervous, and wild, give it its liberty and try another. Odd specimens seem quite untameable; this applies to most species.

The Green Linnet (Green Linnet).—Yes; there certainly is such a thing as a "Green Linnet," though its correct name is the Greenfinch. This bird is one of the commonest we have. It has a song of a sort, but it is not at all melodious and is lacking in variety—just a few "breezy" notes strung together.

The Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid (J. R. Yates).—This hybrid has been bred by a large number of fanciers—it is, in fact, one of the best known of Bullfinch hybrids. There are very few really good ones (if any) about just now, however, and a high class example would do well on the show bench.

Goldfinch very loose in Bowels (J. McWatt).—Give this bird a little arrowroot biscuit which has been well soaked in milk, squeezed as dry as possible, and sprinkled with maw-seed. Give a mixture of teazle, thistle, dandelion, Canary and cracked sunflower—no hemp or niger for the time being. In the drinking water for a few days stir some crystals of citrate of iron and quinine. Get one ounce from a chemist, and in two table-spoonfuls of water dissolve as much as will, when crushed, lie on a sixpennypiece. Some Siberians are apt to get very fat and "go soft" if given for a long period unlimited crusbed hemp and niger seeds, especially if kept in a heated room.

Concerning a Linnet (Sing Song).—A young bird is to be preferred, all things considered; but this is not so important, really, as the selecting of a "kind tempered" bird, i.e., one showing a disposition to settle down quickly in captivity. A "mad" bird that dashes wildly at the cage, smashing its wing and tail feathers, is most difficult to tame, and, of course, is a long time before singing with any freedom. By-the-bye, I should not term a Linnet "about 12 months old" an "old" bird. It is quite unnecessary to keep Linnets for singing in ridiculously small cages. I have birds now in large breeding cages, and in decent-sized Finch stock cages, which sing as loudly and as freely as any that ever saw a "hop" cage. My smallest stock cages are 16ins. long by 11ins. high, by 8ins. wide, and I have very few so small as this.

Cock Bullie and Hen Redpoll (W. Corbett).—I have frequently stated that I have never known the cock Bullfinch do any good as a fertiliser of eggs when mated with a hen of another species. Hence it follows that my opinion as to your chances of success is not a very high one. There is no reason, of course, why you should not try the mating. If you do, I'm sure I wish you luck. I tried the reverse mating (cock Lesser Redpoll to a tiny hen Bullie) myself last season for the first time, and was agreeably surprised to get three fertile eggs in the first clutch of five, but two failed to hatch out, though the chicks were fully formed. I think your feeding is reasonably good and quite likely to bring success. Quite as much depends upon the birds themselves (in fact, more) than upon the method of feeding.

About a Goldfinch (True Blue).—You really don't deserve an answer, for you send a postcard, write in pencil, and give neither name nor address (kindly read the rules). It sometimes happens that a bird, despite the best of treatment, will do a bad moult and never get into full colour and condition afterwards. You give me no details, but I expect this has happened in your case. Probably the bird will do a good moult next autumn and then look as well as ever once again. If it comes into breeding form this spring or summer (you will know this by its song and the clearness of its beak) it may certainly be tried for muling. Leave off the hemp for a few hours daily, and offer a mixture of good teazle, Canary and linseed, with a little cracked sunflower; the bird will then, I think, soon get to eating this mixture. Some of my own Goldfinches get no hemp at all, except once a week or so, while others get it in plenty. If given much hemp and sunflower, some Guldies (more especially Siberians) are inclined to follow in Johnny Trundley's footsteps and get more "podgy" than pretty.

In an Aviary (J. Cooke).—You will find Mr. Norman's book dealing with aviaries and their fitting-up very instructive and helpful. We have from time to time, too, published excellent articles on this topic. You want to be careful that the slope of the floor of the open part does not carry the rain-water into the covered portion. I should also recommend you to board up the front (at any rate of the roofed portion) for from 12 to 18 inches from the ground. Cats can also be exceedingly troublesome, and double wire-netting (with an inch or two space 'twixt each) is a very desirable safeguard, especially on the roof. These pests will also lie on the roof and strike any birds that fly on the front netting near the top, which they are very apt to do. See that there is a row of little peg-like perches up near the roof wherever possible. Other perches can be placed in such spots as seem to you convenient. Dead branches, or pea-sticks suitably arranged, are best in the outer flights. Put the seed and a plentiful supply of water in the roofed outer portion. Use either hoppers (the "self-supplying" pattern) or open dishes, and put each of the chief seeds in a separate receptacle (one each of canary, teazle, hemp, and rape, for instance), which is far more economical than giving a "mixture." There are shops in London where you can inspect a variety of hoppers, dishes, nest-boxes, etc., and choose those you like best. The plain wooden nest boxes would suit and are very cheap. Put up at least half as many more as the number of hens you have in the place. I don't think that two Linnets will give you any trouble.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

White-winged Parrakeet, etc.

Donald.—(1) While the bird continues thin it can have a fairly liberal supply of hemp and sunflower, but you must diminish the supply as soon as it picks up a little, or it will lead to over-fatness and fits. Keep up the ripe fruit and chemical food in its water daily. Also moisten a piece of plain biscuit in chemical food and water (equal parts), and supply to the bird once or twice daily. Hang up a millet spray; the bird may appreciate this, and the exercise of picking out the seed will be good for it. The continued use of the chemical food may lead to costiveness; therefore, you must watch for this, and relieve it by a dose of Dinneford's magnesia. (2) The Diamond Dove is rather a scary creature at first. It should have a box cage, a large one, not less than you would give to the Barbary Dove; double the size would be better, and it would probably breed as soon as they had become tame and settled down. They breed freely in captivity, and are hardy, but must not be subjected to draught. Their diminutive size and great beauty endear them to many bird-lovers.

Amazon in Poor Feather.

R. A. M.—Your diet is about right, except for the tea and coffee sop; stop this at once. Give it some ripe fruit daily, such as it will take, also a few nuts occasionally. For the next month treat as follows: One teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food. Also give a box of honey and borax, and put a little in its mouth daily. If the bird does not bathe, it must be sprayed (once a week at this season); choose a warm, genial day, and keep it carefully out of draught till dry. It would be well to use a diluted quassia solution for the spraying, in view of possible parasites. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in its cage. An Amazon is a hardy species, but Parrots, or any other birds, ought not to be subjected at any time to draught.

Budgerigars Dropping Dead.

T. F.—Cork bark I never use in my aviaries, particularly for Parrakeets of any kind, who nibble and cut up anything their beaks can get at. From the details you give, it seems to me that the cork bark is the cause of your losses, though this is by no means certain, as if they did not eat the bark the mere nibbling of it would do no harm. It is a pity that you did not in such a case send one of the bodies to Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination. You must understand that even with aviary-bred birds pneumonia and other allied troubles occur during wet, chilly autumn and winter weather, and birds making a change of home seem particularly liable to such attacks, more especially so when coming from a remote locality. See our "Nutshell Booklet" on Budgerigars, 2½d., post free, from our Manager.

Grey Parrot Weak.

Capt. R. N.—I fear all that can be done for your bird is to try and build it up. As it is able to perch, I do not think it can be paralysis. If so, it is but partial. Bathe its legs daily with tepid water, dry with a cloth, and then paint with neat whisky. Also give every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water, so long as the voidings are not watery loose. On the intermediate days make the drinking water the colour of pale port with Parrish's chemical food. Diet the bird as follows:—Seed mixture: Canary and white millet two parts each; hemp, dari, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, one part each; well mix, and keep a supply in the cage, adding a pinch of grit to the daily supply. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, and you can continue the dry toast crusts. The toast crusts and biscuits could well be moistened (not saturated) in a tepid solution of water and chemical food in equal parts. It will take some time to pull the bird round, as after so long a period the weakness has become almost chronic, but by persevering its condition should be much improved. Report progress a few weeks hence, and I will try and assist you further.

Amazon Indisposed.

Reader of "Cage Birds."—I do not think the panting arises from a cold, and I am assuming that you have named your full dietary. In such case, the dietary is about right, but instead of your seed mixture I advise the following: Canary and white millet, two parts each; hemp, oats, paddy rice, maize, and sunflower seeds, one part each; well mix, and keep a supply in the cage. Add a pinch of grit to the daily supply. A too hot, dry atmosphere might account for the panting. Every fourth day for a fortnight put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water, and on the other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food, and then report progress. As regards talking, you can do no more than keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, etc., and teach it by constant repetition (when it is quiet and restful) such short phrases and words as you would like it to utter.

An Ailing Budgerigar.

M. B. W.—Keep these birds warm for a bit, yet not in too dry and hot an atmosphere. They do drink a little, so you must put the magnesia in the drinking water, if you cannot give it direct to the beak; though if you hold the bird in your hand and laid a feather that had been dipped in the magnesia at the side of the beak the bird would suck the moisture in. However, it will do no harm if it goes in the water; it will do the bird's mate no harm, providing the voidings are not permitted to remain watery loose. A course of chemical food should follow the laxative, but till the bird is toned up a little the bowels must be kept moving freely. I should give a little fresh lettuce and apple, if the bird will take them, as green food. A pinch of grit and a little cuttlebone (crushed to the size of millet seed) may with advantage be added to the daily supply of seed. If the bird will indulge in a fly round the room this will be a great help. I am of the opinion that it will soon be all right again. Glad to note that the Siskin is fit again.

Parrakeet Out of Condition.

K. F. M.—This bird has been wrongly dieted, and if it is really a many colour it is a marvel that it has lived, though it is marvellous what some individuals will stand in this way (case of survival of the fittest, I presume). You must stop the "table scrap," etc., and confine its diet to the following: Its staple diet a mixture of canary and white millet, in equal parts; also a second mixture—hemp, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, in equal parts; a little of which supply every other day. Also supply ripe fruit, green food, few nuts, cuttle bone, grit, and water for drinking and bathing. If it cares for it, it can have a piece of plain biscuit or stale crust of household bread (both dry) occasionally. Till the trouble ceases, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food. If it will not drink the magnesia and water, then you must give six drops of magnesia direct to the beak every fourth day. Most species take the chemical food and water readily. Please report progress a little later.

Blue and Buff Macaw (W. A. M.).—Keep temperature of room as regular as possible. Diet as follows: Seed mixture: Canary, white millet, two parts each; hemp, oats, maize, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, one part each; well mix, and add a pinch of grit to the daily supply. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts in variety, plain biscuit, and stale crusts of household bread. Keep a piece of cuttlebone for it to cut up, and while its plumage is rough, keep its drinking water well coloured with Parrish's chemical food. The bowels should move freely, but the voidings should not be watery—an occasional dose of Dinneford's magnesia will keep them well regulated.

Cordon Bleu Caprices (M. G. Lethbridge).—The capers of your Cordon Bleu with the feather in its bill is quite commonplace at the commencement (pairing time) of and during the breeding season; it is the nuptial dance, and with slight variations according to respective species is common to all birds. A few Cordon Bleus are reared annually in various English aviaries, and I trust complete success will come your way this season.

What Parrot? (C. M. D.).—You give me no idea of size, you do not mention colour of tail or wings, not yet whether the back is variegated with any other colour; neither do you state the colour of the undersurface below the breast. Your description reads like a Lory or Lorikeet, but you had better feed it same as its previous owner had been doing till you get a reply. Is the tail long or short? During the summer months it should do well enough in the verandah, but not during late autumn, winter, or early spring. Please give particulars asked for, and I can then name it for you.

Budgerigars not Breeding ("Nearly 16 now.").—(1) They have not settled down as yet, but will undoubtedly do so soon, providing they are a true pair. When in breeding condition the cere of the male is blue, that of the female brown. (2) Two pairs of Budgerigars together usually breed more freely than single pairs, but before I can tell you whether you can put in another pair you must send me the size of your cage. You would find our "Nutshell Booklet" on Budgerigars, 2½d., post free, from our Manager, very helpful.

Budgerigar and Bad Habits (Falmouth).—Budgerigars and many other Parrakeets regurgitate their food and eat it again, and more particularly so at pairing time, and yet birds often do this when in the presence of someone they know well, and will frequently at such times put their beak round your finger, as if they were deceiving themselves that they were feeding a mate! Give it a leaf of lettuce and a bit of apple, also a piece of cuttlefish to nibble at. Put a few drops of Dinneford's magnesia into the drinking water every other day for a fortnight, and follow this by a course of Parrish's chemical food.

What Bird? (E. V. D. C.).—I must hold your query back till next issue, as the term African Canary is very generally used for the genus Serinus, very many species of which closely resemble each other. Will you please inform me at once whether the bill is very stoutly built or otherwise? In other words, is it of heavier or lighter build than that of the domestic Canary, and what colour is the beak?

Amazon, etc. (J. K.).—Glad to note the Amazon has quite recovered. An Alario Finch or a South African Canary would best suit your friend, but these are not always obtainable. A Green Singing Finch, if you get a good one, is also handsome, and a fair but not too loud a songster. For an invalid, an ordinary Canary might be too loud and irritating, and if you decide on such, you must have a trained bird with a soft voice—such are to be obtained.

White Java Sparrows (D. Barratt).—These mostly rear their young on seed, but when they are feeding young, green food and a little soft food should be supplied; for the latter, crumbled sponge cake and ants' eggs in equal parts answer admirably. At this period it is also advisable to keep a millet spray coutinually in the cage, in addition to the usual seed diet. About the middle of January a descriptive article on Java Sparrows appeared in our pages, which you would do well to read up, if you have the part; if not, our Manager would supply you with same.

Lavender Finches Bald (Gab).—The journey, cold, and variable temperature are responsible for the trouble. Keep them now in a room where the temperature is even, watch them closely, and if you see them doing much "preening" you must cage them separately till their plumage is complete again. Encourage them to take a daily bath (water just chilled), and if the skin of the bare areas is hard and dry, lightly annoint it with clean vaseline, but do not use sufficient to make the plumage greasy. A slice of apple and a leaf of fresh lettuce will be very wholesome if they will take it. A mild laxative (Dinneford's magnesia) to keep the bowels regulated and a course of Parrish's chemical food should soon remedy matters.

Weaver and Cordon Bleus (Interested).—(1) The bird you bought as a Half-masked is evidently an Oryx (Grenadier) Weaver, and like all species of this group has a summer and winter plumage; its gorgeous satiny garment being only worn in the breeding season, it will shortly put on its nuptial dress again. (2) The Combassou forms a link between the Weavers and Whydahs, and like both groups wears a shining and resplendent nuptial dress during the breeding season, but is as plainly clad as the hen at other periods. (3) There are a few Cordon Bleus reared annually in various aviaries in this country, and if you turn your pair out into a roomy garden aviary containing growing plants and bushes, they should certainly breed. The probability would be greatly in favour of their doing so.

Parrot in Rough Feather (G. Walkins).—This bird has been wrongly fed for some time. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sop, table scraps or any kind of animal food whatever. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food. Diet: Seed mixture: Canary and millet seed, two parts each; hemp, dari, paddy rice, oats, and sunflower seeds, one part each; well mix, and keep a supply continually in the cage. Add a pinch of grit to the daily supply. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, and a stale crust of household bread occasionally. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage, and see that while the bird gets fresh air it is not subjected to draught. You must persevere with above treatment as recovery of condition will not be rapid. Report progress a month hence. Our "Nutshell Booklet" on the Grey Parrot, 2½d., post free, from our Manager, would help you.

Cordon Bleus and Gouldians Breeding (March).—There is no reason why you should not succeed with the Cordon Bleus; as soon as the young are hatched or, better, when incubation has lasted about ten days, supply the following soft food: Equal parts of crumbled sponge cake and ants' eggs; make crumbly moist with boiling water; supply green food liberally, also spray millet, white millet, and canary seed. If you can supply any small flies, green fly, or seeding grass, but the latter must not be frosted or sodden, your prospects of success will be enhanced. Incubation period about fourteen days. Gouldian Finches should breed in a roomy cage, once they become fit and established, but they are difficult birds to establish; they have been bred in a cage, but results are more probable, of course, in the aviary. The Nutshell Booklet on the Gouldian Finch, 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you.

For Crystal Palace Aviary (Novice). Confine the British species to Siskin, Goldfinch, and Redpoll; the other species on the plate are scarcely suitable to keep with small species within the limits of a cage. I advise cocks only. As regards Foreign species, get the following as opportunity offers: Green Singing Finch, Red Avadavat, Green Avadavat, Alario Finch, Cuban Finch (21s.), St. Helena Waxbill, Silverbill, Gouldian Finch (21s.), Orange-cheeked Waxbill. You would find the above twelve birds a nice selection; all have a little song, and none of them plain, the majority really beautiful, and with the exception of those prices, all come within the range of your value. You can add a Canary to the number if you wish, but do not overcrowd. I am of the opinion all the above will agree together, but if any should prove quarrelsome, then insert one of the partitions, and keep the pugnacious ones together. I cannot advise Lovebirds; if you have these, they must be caged separately. The Nutshell series will meet your need as to diet, etc.

Atlas Weaver in Poor Plumage (T. M. D.).—See our reply to "Gab." My remarks will apply equally to your case in all but diet. Your diet is about right, but I should give a millet spray weekly, and double the supply of mealworms; also supply a little fresh lettuce as green food. Is it caged separately or with its mate? If so, and they are continually "preening" each other, they must be separated till the plumage is renewed. In all other respects treat as advised to "Gab" in this issue.

Budgerigars, etc. (W. Taylor).—(1) If you desire it for breeding, you could put in pairs of Zebra Finches and Long-tailed Grassfinches, or a pair of Black-cheeked Lovebirds, or if you want merely a series of birds as pets see our reply to "Novice" in this issue. (2) I cannot state cause from the meagre details you supply; it may be sparring or sexual excitement; catch it up, and give it 2 drops of tasteless castor oil, and if the trouble continues, repeat the dose; if you can give me further details I will try and be more definite. (3) There ought never to be more than 30 birds in this aviary, and three breeding pairs are ample, as, of course, their families will have to be accommodated as well while being reared. The Finches will not interfere with the Budgies, though the latter will, I expect, sooner or later damage the former with their mischievous beaks.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Early Yorkshires (W. Tudhy).—Your letter cost us one penny, as you had affixed a half-penny stamp only. Why waste our money?

Cuttings (C. H. Goodman, "Catcher," A. Peat, and others).—Accept our thanks for your thoughtfulness.

Cage Birds League (W. Percival).—The League is open to every bird-keeper, whether a member of a society or otherwise. See the notice in this issue.

Three Items (Spriggy).—In our opinion you could not be successfully prosecuted in any of the three cases you specify—i.e., if the birds are not "recently taken."

The Common Canary (John Smith).—What is it you mean by the term "common Canary"? Do you mean a bird of nondescript type (a "mongrel") for singing purposes?

A Suggestion (F. J. Rook).—We think that the wording should be kept as brief as possible, as there is a danger of long notices being left unread altogether. We will certainly, however, see what can be done in the matter you mention.

Preserving Salmon Roe (Cymro Back).—We have tried to get this information, but cannot succeed. We do not think it policy to publish letters on subjects outside the scope of our journal. Why not apply to a paper which deals with the art of fishing?

Fire Insurance (J. T.).—Our own birds are insured against fire with the company which issued the policy upon our household "goods and chattels." We believe that any company will include one's birds for a reasonable amount when issuing a fire-risk policy upon one's house, or furniture, etc.

Correspondence.

A French or Belgian Cage Bird Society.

SIR,—Could any of the readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, kindly give me the address of the secretary of any French or Belgian Cage Bird Society, as I should like to become a member of same?

A. HOLLINGSHEAD.

A Breeder's Ill-luck.

SIR,—I have had a bad stroke of luck to-day. Some brown paper caught fire at my workshop in Whittington, where I keep my birds, and every bird (including some winners) was suffocated. I have only one left, a Roller, which I had at home. This is a serious set-back to me, as I expected to breed some good Yorkshires this breeding season. H. E. JORDAN.

Loud Song from Skylarks.

SIR,—Will any of your numerous readers tell me how to get Skylarks to sing loud? I have got three, hatched May, 1910, which I reared myself; they are singing all day long, but not very loud. I feed them on a good and well-known packet food, and mixed seed that I buy in packets; also three or four mealworms daily. Perhaps I am doing wrong. A NOVICE.

SIR,—I reply to "Cardos," I am surprised to hear that he has not received his cards from the late L.C.B.A. Show. I feel sure that this is owing to an oversight. If "Cardos" would write the esteemed secretary, Mr. Mugford, I am sure he will see that they are sent. I myself won a first at this show, and duly received both money and card. The latter is a handsome one, is already framed, and I am proud of it. The "mutilated tram ticket" is not the show card. ANDREW M. FIRTH.

Proposed Cage Bird Society for Bellshill and District.

SIR,—Woud you kindly allow me a little space in your valuable journal to make an appeal to the fanciers and bird-lovers of Bellshill and Mossend? Bellshill and district boasts of a population something like fifteen thousand; it is growing like a bad weed, too. Now, there may not be many bird exhibitors amongst the bird-owners of this locality, but there are many who, with encouragement, would become such in a short space of time. There are few towns with a populace like this district which bemoans the want of a Cage Bird Society. Now, you Bellshill and Mossend readers, set to and do something towards establishing a Cage Bird Society in this rising centre. I hope to learn of good work being done with a view to making my proposal a reality instead of a wish or a dream. A BELLSHILL TYRO.

The Feeding of Insectivorous Birds.

Sir,—I notice that another reader wants to know if small softbills can be kept on gentles and little else. Certainly they can. I have kept all kinds for twenty years, and have never been without gentles. I have a Nightingale singing every day; it is six years old. I give it about a tablespoonful daily—half in the morning, the remainder in the afternoon—and about a dozen bluebottle flies. I notice that another bird-keeper says gentles might be good, though he never uses them himself. He has certainly something to learn. I have kept Dippers in small cages for over three months on gentles alone. I could not have kept them a week if I had fed them on anything else.

F. FISHBURN.

Gramophone Record of Nightingale's Song.

SIR,—In reply to "Novice's" query in your issue of March 4th, I can assure him that I have "kept back" nothing so far as my method of feeding the Nightingale is concerned, and if he will try it I think he will find it adequate, besides being exceedingly economical. Gentles are somewhat indigestible, but the pupae are more nutritious, and the blow-fly itself is the best form of insect food; if one has a good supply of gentles, it is quite easy to supply all three forms. For full details of feeding and housing Warblers I may refer "Novice" to an article I wrote for the "Avicultural Magazine" (February, 1911); if he cannot borrow a copy, if he sends me his address I will lend him mine. This system of feeding will not answer for some of the smaller softbills, such as the Willow Wren, Chiffchaff, Long-tailed Tit, Wren and Goldcrest. Of these, I keep very few, and only for experimental purposes. I regret that I do not know of any better methods of feeding these species than the ordinary ones; they are not very suitable for cage-life, and, even in an aviary, require a lot of attention. Although the keeping of insectivorous birds in cages is an interesting hobby, I fear that it is not always attended by success. This has been forcibly brought home to me quite recently. Last December we had a sort of hurricane here (at Teignmouth, in Devonshire), which blew the glass casement in the roof of one aviary clean out, and away went a lot of my softbills (including nearly all the hens intended for breeding purposes) on the wings of the wind. I have since advertised for other hens, and written to dealers and friends in vain. Now, it is quite certain that last September I could have purchased as many as I wanted. Where are these softbills now? I will leave our readers to answer that question. However, for other species than the above, I think "Novice" might do worse than try the above system, with the addition of ripe fruit; my birds seem to do well on it, and even the little Dartford Warbler, which I had in my aviary a couple of years since, got nothing else, and yet it always looked prosperous, and moulted well. This reminds me that I read with great pleasure Mr. Frostick's able article in last week's number, and must heartily congratulate him on the success of his exhibit at the Crystal Palace Show, which I spent quite half-an-hour in admiring. I have at last come across some Dartford Warblers, though no nearer me than Dorsetshire. I wish I could hear of some nearer home. My bird-trip this spring will take me to the South of Spain, where they are said to be common in some localities, so I hope to cultivate a closer acquaintance with this charming little species. I may perhaps take this opportunity of saying that I have at last had an opportunity of hearing the gramophone record of the song of the Nightingale, which I recently mentioned in these columns. I had no idea it could be obtained in this country, so I sent a P.O.O. to Germany. I have to acknowledge the courtesy of Herr Fischer, of Bremen, of the German Gramophone Co. of Berlin, and of the English Gramophone Co., who have all written me explaining the situation, which is, briefly, that these two Companies have agreed to restrict their trading to their own districts. Finally, the record reached me through our local agent. It is a ten-inch record, and is thus described: "No. 9,439. Made by a captive Nightingale. For the first time in the history of the talking machine industry a genuine record has been obtained of a bird song. The Nightingale in question is the property of Herr Carl Reich, of Berlin, and was taken from its nest shortly after hatching, and reared by hand." The notes, as rendered by the gramophone, are remarkably powerful and distinct, but it should be noted the record was apparently taken from a Sprosser (the tour which the Germans call the "terrack" being easily recognised), and, moreover, it had very few changes, as might be expected in the case of a hand-reared bird. Nevertheless, I consider it an interesting and successful record. I have turned up the letter of the correspondent of "Die Gefiederte Welt," and find that he says that he considers the Nightingale which sang into the horn a good middle-class bird ("ein gut mitteloogel"), though it only introduces short tours. He also tells us that Herr Reich had vainly tried for years before he produced this record, and that attempts to record the song of Hartz Canaries had proved a failure. He also mentions that he used the record as a tutor for a young cock Nightingale and a young cock Canary, which had never heard the song of a Canary, and that the result was that both the young birds sang alike.

Rare British Birds at the Palace Show.

Sir,—I have to thank Mr. Nicholson for his very kind remarks about myself, also about my Meadow Bunting. I might say the bird was, if anything, in slightly better bloom than at the National. It is the first time I have shown at the Palace since coming from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and was disappointed at the result.

A. W. WATSON.

The Construction of Breeding Cages.

SIR,—In my articles I purposely omitted the two points mentioned by "Scrutineer" in last week's isue, viz., sand drawer and end door. I use neither of these in my own cages, nor do I think they are necessary. With a turn rail and well-made scraper, a cage can be cleaned out quito as effectually as with the sand tray. The latter gets warped and twisted by the water spilled when the birds batho, and generally manages to "stick" at the critical moment. The end door, in my opinion, is not required in a breeding cage, as Canaries are easily taught to run out of the wire door, and the one at the end will sometimes go months without being opened, and then the cracks only form another hiding place for insect life.

A Goldfinch Problem.

SIR,—In reply to your correspondent "Marchpane," I think if he fed his birds on a good maker's packet Finch mixture, he should make no complaints. Also, the Goldfinches should have green-food, such as groundsel and dandelion, with roots left on—the birds like to pick at the soil around the roots—also a little weed called plantain. I have had a Goldfinch for over two years now, and he is a beautiful songster, equal to any Canary, and not so shrill. Perhaps, if "Marchpane" allowed his birds liberty to fly about the room, as I do, every day, and did not keep them so near each other, they would sing, as I have noticed that when with a mate Goldies are often silent, then when the mate is removed to a different part of the room, they sing.

The Black-throated Hangnest At the Palace Show.

SIR,—I much regret that my letter conveyed such an impression "implied blame." If I had read such in "Folkestone's" letter I should not have troubled to reply, but I have met and corresponded with "Folkestone," and, therefore, was hardly likely to mislead him—though I'm always more or less rushed. I simply wrote to try and meet a difficulty, which "Folkestone's" last letter amply demonstrates to exist. I do not know whether "F.' saw Mr. Townsend's bird at the Palace Show and recognised it as the same species as his own. I may repeat here that though I have not compared it with skins, I believe Mr. T.'s bird to be I. mesomelas. As regards photos, unless a colour screen and ortho. plates are used, I fear a photo would be of little value as indicating the colour area.

Fitting Sliding Partitions in Breeding Cages.

SIR,—As the fitting of a partition in a breeding cage is always a difficult job, the following method may prove useful to those who will shortly be making their own breeding cages. Get a piece of 1in. grooved and tongued wood and mark out, as Fig. 1. The piece, "A, B," is to fit on bottom of cage; the length of course is equal to width of cage (back to front), and the width is equal to height (to top) of front bar. A screw through back of cage and at front-bar will secure it in place. Then just notch out the front bar as at "C." A corresponding grooved piece is screwed to top of cage, but it will not need to be as wide, of course, as the piece cut for the bottom of the cage—a strip about ½ to ¾ of an inch. If done with a little care, it should prove very satisfactory, and is certainly much easier than having to gauge the groove out of straight wood.

Robberies at Ayr—A Warning.

SIR,—As quite a number of outside bird aviaries have been broken into of late (no less than three, including mine, in this district), I thought you might warn your readers (through the medium of your paper, CAGE BIRDS) against purchasing birds from unreliable sources. On Monday night last my outside aviary of Norwich Plainheads, numbering between thirty and forty birds, was broken into, and twenty high-class birds taken away. And, not content with the birds, the thieves maliciously smashed about twelve cage fronts, wrenching them by sheer force from the cages. I have informed the police of the matter, and they are endeavouring to trace the thieves; but birds are a most difficult thing to identify, and their task is by no means easy. So I thought that you could help to put bird lovers on their guard, and by publishing this may help to bring the culprits to justice.

Climbing the Yorkshire Exhibition Ladder.

SIR,—After reading Blackburn and Mitchell's reply to my letter, I cannot find one scrap of substantial evidence to confirm the statements they made in their first letter. In the first place, they state that they did not say who claimed their bird. It appears to be that Blackburn and Mitchell either do not understand grammar or they are making it appear, Mr. Editor, that you have made a printer's error, as the statement appears in one complete sentence, without any stop: "Was claimed and then successfully shown by a Mr. Taylor." They also state that it is the first time that I have acknowledged having the bird, which is another untruth, as it was common knowledge to all the fanciers in Halifax, including Blackburn and Mitchell, that the bird had passed into my hands, as they published it in CAGE BIRDS at the time. Perhaps Blackburn and Mitchell wanted me to publish it, and give them another free advert. If they had only had the manliness to come to me to get particulars about the bird, instead of getting hearsay tales from three unknown persons, and a non-existent fellow fancier (as I never had a fellow fancier "going backwards and forwards" to my house), it would have saved them the trouble of making such rash and unfounded statements. Now, Mr. Editor, allow me to place dates and facts before your readers—not hearsay tales. In November, 1903, a gentleman, not ten miles from Manchester, came to my room and I sold him an unflighted ciunamon marked buff hen, bred by myself, which had a successful show career, and won 2nd prize at the Crystal Palace Show in February, 1906 (not 1905). About a week after the show, Blackburn and Mitchell, without trying to get to know the truth, and at the same time tryiug to damage my character (as I had told the gentleman that I had bred the bird), wrote to this gentleman, and said they had bred the hen, an sold it to me, at the same time asking all about the hen, and what honours she had won before the Palace Show. The gentleman wrote them back telling them how long he had had the hen, also giving them particulars and markings of the bird, which were quite different from Blackburn and Mitchell's hen, as this was marked on the opposite wing (which proves my statement that they knew it was not their bird that won at the Palace Show). Now, as regards Blackburn and Mitchell's bird, it did not come into my possession till November 26th, 1904, and I afterwards sold it to Mr. Hewson, of Lincoln, in December, 1905. He came to my house along with Mr. J. Broadley, of Bradford, and bought the hen, which he never showed, and from him it passed into the hands of a well-known Bradford fancier, where it soon ended its career. If Blackhurn and Mitchell will take the trouble to look at the catalogue of Manchester Show for October 28th and 29th, 1904, they will find that the gentleman was showing the hen I sold him, at which date their own bird had not left their possession. Now, Mr. Editor, I leave it to your readers who has been "hot-headed and jumped to conclusions" in this matter. It appears to me that Blackburn and Mitchell are troubled with a swelled head with their recent success at the Palace Show, and were trying to reap a cheap advert. from my birds as well as their own. W. TAYLOR.

A Reader's British and Foreign Birds.

Sir,—Kindly allow me to relate in your valuable paper my experiences with my British and Foreign birds. I have taken in CAGE BIRDS now for about six years, and to it I owe my success. I have a large outdoor aviary. Like other bird lovers, I meet with indifferent success at times, but with the help of CAGE BIRDS, CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL, and other books, I cannot grumble. The little Redpolls and Hedge Warblers are very amusing to watch, with their perky ways. The Robins, Greenfinches, and Chaffinches are just the birds for anybody who wants any song, although one cannot give much praise to the Greenfinch for song. These birds can be purchased very cheaply, and with good food, care, and attention are then worth three times what was paid for them. As regards Foreigners, the Saffron Finches are very nice birds, but are so quarrelsome, as are also the Green Singing Finches. The hens are a little larger than the cocks, but not so brightly coloured. The Cordon Bleus are delicate, which is a pity, because they are so handsome. I had about two pairs before I had a pair to stay. The Pekin Robin is another pretty specimen. His drawback is, I think, that he is a nest-robber, and is very fond of a fresh egg for breakfast. Whether this is always the case I cannot say. I have never known an English Robin to agree with a Pekin Robin or Nightingale. As regards feeding, I think a good plain food is much the best.

Keeping Birds in Small Cages.

Sir,—Respecting "A Bird Lover's" letter in your last issue, this keeping of birds in tiny cages must be doing an enormous amount of harm to the cage bird Fancy, as a whole. No real bird lover or humane person could look at a so-called "live stock shop" without feeling the deepest sympathy for some of the poor wretched little inmates. It is this sort of thing that makes people call it "cruel' to keep birds in cages; and no wonder. I have not seen many such bird shops, but the few I have, made my heart ache with pity, and to wish I had the money to buy some of the poor little wretches and put them out of their misery. I have one store on my mind now. Cages filthy, dirty, excrement and husks collecting in them until the poor inmates were half suffocated with the stench, and, to crown all, a window that could not be opened, so that no fresh air from the outside ever found its way to the poor sorry inmates. Surely something can be done to prevent these evils for the credit of real bird fanciers, whose aim it is to make their pets happy and comfortable?—and I can prove that they can be both. I know it is not everyone who can keep their birds under such good conditions as mine. I always made it a rule to let my birds out of their cages occasionally to fly about and bathe in a large open flight, and in nearly every case I find them go back to their cages to roost, so that is proof that they do not dislike their captive life if properly treated and fed well. Could not the R.S.P.C.A. have the power to prosecute in cases where birds are kept in too small cages? There certainly ought to be a limit laid down as to size, etc., for different species. Until this is done I am afraid the evil will still continue.

V. M. TOZER.

(The R.S.P.C.A. has power to prosecute where cruelty to birds and other animals is concerned, and they sometimes exercise this power (cases have been reported in our columns). Bird-keepers in the true sense of the term have no sympathy with cruel practices, whether resorted to by dealers or anyone else, and in such gross cases as that mentioned by our correspondent, they should place the facts before an official of the R.S.P.C.A.—EDITOR.)

The Pegging of Chaffinches.

Sir,—Would any of your readers give me a few instructions how to peg Chaffinches and what tackle is required? E. GRANTHAM.

How to Solder with Resin.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. R. Rutherford, I would like to say that I never had any intention of leading, or trying to lead, "Linnet," or anyone else, astray. "Linnet" did not ask how to solder with spirits, paste, or anything else, but resin, and I, to the best of my ability, told him, and I seem to be the only one that has attempted to answer his question. If I condemn the copper bit I only do so because I have found it of little use for the work, and am only repeating the words of writers who know more than I about the subject, though perhaps not more than Mr. Rutherford. I think it is very unfair to suggest that I tried to lead "Linnet" astray. What he thinks I should gain by so doing I am at a loss to understand. I should like to say, in conclusion, that cage wire is "tinned," and whether resin is any good for the work or not, I have used it successfully, and it is not very expensive, but very cheap; it is not a "metal."

HARD-BILL.

More Early Birds.

SIR,—I have four young birds, hatched on February 20th, in one nest, and five young ones in another nest hatched February 25th. The nine young ones are doing well. The hen with the four is a two-year-old bird, and the one with the five a last-year bird.

E. BEET.

SIR,—I have got one young Yorkshire which was hatched on February 19th, and is now fifteen days' old, therefore being in front of Mr. Meager by two days. The young one is doing well.

J. FLOWERS.

SIR,—Seeing in CAGE BIRDS that Mr. Meager had two young Canaries hatched on February 22nd, I may say that I had two hatched on February 6th. One died the first week, but the other is in good condition, and I had it in the show cage on March 6. I should like to know if I am the first.

W. AITKEN.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Meager, I should like to inform that gentleman that he is left behind for early birds, as I had four Yorkshires hatched out on January 14th, and they are on the perch singing now. Another lot, out on January 26th; still another lot out February 10th; another lot out on February 18th; all doing well. I have a friend who got some out on February 22nd, and doing well. It seems to be going well with me in the second round; I have thirteen eggs when writing.

W. T. MANNING.

How's This for a Record?

Sir,—In reply to query of Mr. W. Meager re early birds, I might say that a fancier in the Highgate district (London) has his second round of Crests already on the sticks. I happened to go into his room on Christmas Eve, and I got a surprise—three young just out on the sticks and the parents building again! Of course, the birds are in a warm room, but no artificial food has been given the birds to induce them to nest. This fancier also has other nests of eggs. I enclose you his address (which can be verified by your Mr. G. E. Weston). I wish the multitude of readers of CAGE BIRDS a good season.

GEO. STREET.

SIR,—Having noticed in the correspondence columns of CAGE BIRDS that Mr. W. Meager had a Norwich Canary hen hatch off two young on February 22nd, I may tell him that he is a long way from being first, as I had a Yorkshire hen Canary hatch off four young ones on January 2nd this year, the same hen laying again four eggs, and hatching other four young ones on February 8th, one having since died through falling out of the nest. I have now, therefore, seven young Canaries, all on seed, and doing well. The same hen has again laid two eggs towards another nest. I don't think there are many who can beat me this year for early birds. The same hen Canary reared eighteen young ones last year.

G. BURDON.

SIR,—I write to say I have a Crested Canary that hatched two young Canaries on February 9th. She neglected one at the end of eight days (being a first sitting). The other is doing well, and been out of its nest two days, and has a clear body with dark crest.

A NOVICE.

The Recent Show Season in Ireland.

Sir,—"Irish Exhibitor," like "Irish Straight 'Un," has very little respect for the truth as long as he can throw plenty of dirt at the two Belfast societies. First he mentions the two Dublin societies as models to copy from, viz., the Y.C. of Ireland and the C.B.S.—he sees by their balance sheet they have £11 15s. 4d. He thinks the Belfast O.A. would pride themselves if they could show as many shillings as this unapproachable society has pounds (I notice he does not say societies, but I have no wish to open old sores). I have no doubt exhibitor will be sorry to hear that the O.A. of Belfast can go one better, for their last balance sheet shows on the right side £12 12s. after making a grant of £4 to its secretary for services rendered. Still, he says their shows are always a failure! I see by CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL (a good medium for such information) the date of establishment of the two societies—the O.A. was established in 1893, the C.B.S. in 1909. Plenty of time to fall yet. All your correspondents charges are mere heresay, and unworthy of comment. He also makes a charge of a member of this society showing borrowed birds at Sligo. I think I can speak for the only four members that exhibited that they showed nothing but what was eligible, and if your correspondent can prove such did happen, I will forward £1 to CAGE BIRDS to give to any fund the Editor may think fit. I may say that the two letters were brought up at our monthly meeting, and pronounced by all to be nothing more or less than vindictive fabrications. It is also asked why the society has its scope confined to Ulster. I refer him to CAGE BIRDS of February 17th last for that information. The Crest, Norwich, and Yorkshire committee were sorry to see in CAGE BIRDS that Holywood have decided to hold their show on November 17th and 18th, the 18th being a fixed date for years of the C.N. and Y. shows. I think Holywood would be studying their own interests, and also the fanciers in the district, if they could have followed the week after, say, on the 24th and 25th; but as they have their judge engaged, they may not be able to do so. I am requested to say that Mr. J. Callam (Hull) judges the C. N. and Y. show on November 18th. WALTER CONNELL.

[We have received a most libellous letter from "Irish Sraight 'Un," in which he refers to a certain fancier as not an "honest exhibitor," and involves several people in charges of showing borrowed birds and birds obtained on approval. Surely the writer must know that we cannot publish statements such as these. If he is so sure that "they are the truth," why does he not prove his allegations before the committee of the society concerned and have the guilty parties punished? We shall be pleased to publish the decision arrived at by the committee, if sent to us signed by the responsible officials. This correspondence is now closed.—EDITOR.]

Lancashire & Lizard Canaries: Mr. Fuller's Views.

SIR,—I was much amused to read the remarks of your reporter at the Crystal Palace, re the above; I suppose it was Mr. House, as he mentions my old friends Barker Clegg and Jimmy Winskill. I don't think anyone on your staff knows as much about those two gentlemen as he does. Well, I may say it is a good job for him, and a lot more of the Lancashire and Lizard judges that Jimmy is out of the game now, as I don't think he would stop to jump on the table, but would be jumping on the judges if they had judged his birds the same way they have been judging the Lancashires and Lizards this last season. Our old friends are both out of it, we never see them now, we never see Barker at the shows, or at the L. and L.F.A. or the L.C. meetings. Mr. House says the Lancashire lads want a leader. What is he doing? He led off at Rochdale show, what better leader could we have? He started off very well last year, but had not got far before he stopped; got lost I should think. The two clear buff birds, I won't call them Lancashires, they were all right, but for their heads and necks, and that was where the Crest breeding upset him. There were two ticked buff coppies as bad as the two clears that he put down; he should have served them the same as the clears. The winner in young coppy class was a great mistake. What was he thinking about in the broken cap Silver Lizard cocks; also the broken cap Silver hens? Then he wonders why fanciers do not show. I shall not show under Mr. House, or anyone else that does not judge as near to the standard as it is possible. There was a lot of dissatisfaction at Rochdale. At Manchester, under Mr. Swalwell, things went off very well, considering it was the first show he had judged. We had not much fault to find; Mr. J. Vickers' old Plainhead won special for the best bird in Lancashire classes. Mr. Compston said he was a real good bird, all a Lancashire. At Rochdale Good Intent, the same bird was commended under Mr. Hardy. A bit funny to me. He was bred from two Lancashires that had no Crest blood in them, and he has not been shown since, and I think won't be under Mr. Hardy. The second in open yellow coppies at Manchester, was commended at the Good Intent in the novice class. His owner, Mr. Ridgard, is a novice, and on my asking him what was in the class, his reply was "Nothing." He said: "If the class had been turned round, it would have been all right." I was not at London, or at Nottingham this year, but I do know that the best Lizards did not win at either show. The Scottish National was a mess, the judge put on to judge Lizards did not know what to do with them, being a Yorkshire judge, and one of the best for Yorkshires. But Lizards, oh dear! Once more anything would do for them, it seemed. At the last L. and L.F.A. meeting, Mr. Rukin was telling about the Scottish National, and said it was about time they took my advice, and kept the birds at home. We now come to the Palace. Mr. House complains there are only two classes for Lancashires at the leading exhibition in the world. The report says the winning coppy, "well spread, heavily feathered coppy." Well, if that is so, that coppy is bred from Crests, or Crest-breds, as no good bred Lancashire ever had a spread on weeping coppy. Let me tell him a coppy should be full at the front, densely packed in front, slightly turned down on to the beak, and should not stick out. He also says the winning Plainhead's skull rises rather too much. A Crest has been here again. Sometimes this is the sort of bird that breeds a spread coppy. A good Plainhead should be flat and long, and bred from two Lancashires. There should be no round marble skulls, or spreads on Lancashires. It is all very well for me to say they should be bred from Lancashires; where are they to be found? The breed has so much Crest in it, it will take years to get it out. It is no use pairing two birds that have Crest blood to breed Lancashires. If you do, you will get spread coppies and round, marble skulls that do not belong to a Lancashire. "Remember," to use Mr. Swalwell's words, "a Crest never improves a Lancashire," and I am sure he is right. Once more, when is Mr. House going to judge, and do something for the Lancashire breeders?. When is he going to judge the same way as he lectures? If he would only do that this letter would not need the writing. No man can judge better. If he will only try and judge them as he did the last time he judged at Manchester, all will be well. We are making a lot of new L. and L.F.A. members, and the lads have spent a lot of money buying birds to breed with, and will want them judged as Lancashires, not Crests. Remember, no man can serve two masters. Birds must be judged for the club members, not for breeders who breed for Crest breeders, but for men who breed for the show bench. Let Crest breeders breed their own stock birds. I have done my best to keep my friends from showing under judges that will not judge to the standard, as laid down by the L. and L.F.A. and the L.C.A., and shall keep on until the judges stamp out the Crest in Lancashire. Mr. A. Wellings did it at the club show held at Hyde, and gave every satisfaction; he put birds down that Mr. House put up at Rochdale. Good luck to him, I say, and I hope the lads will back him up the next time he judges, and send him a bumper. If he only judges like he did at Hyde, no fear but what the lads will follow him. So he is one leader found, and it is time some new blood was found in the judging line. I have just learned Mr. Rukin's best gold Lizard was out of the cards at the Palace, and Mr. H. Oliver's broken cap silver was commended; the best Lizard on earth. I know he lost his tail going to Scotland, but he could win if his head was off.

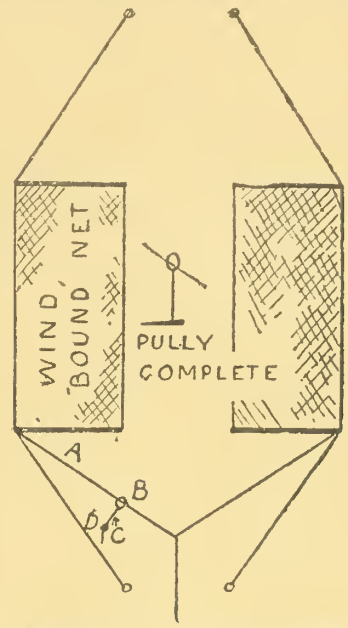
Are Birds Fruit-eaters?



Sir,—I have been interested and amused at some of the views set forth by a reader signing himself "John Canning"; still, I cannot for one moment allow his attack on fruit-growers to go by unchallenged. I myself have had four years' experience at fruit-growing, and I can positively say that the Thrush, Blackbird, Bullfinch, and the Starling are great fruit eaters, and that J. C. does not know the subject he is talking about. The Thrush and Blackbird are demons for ripe pears and apples, and it does not take many of these species to make a mess of a Bell or William pear tree, and if they come across a bed of strawberries in a small garden they will soon get the lot, if not tented a bit. The Starling, as Mr. G. Gregory says, is a terror for cherries. In places where Starlings abound, and there are a few cherry trees, if they are not continually tented, they will save the growers the trouble of picking them. The Bullfinch is another bird that J. C. tries to defend. At about this time of the year this bird, with his stout beak, is doing considerable damage by picking the buds that are just pushing forward. "John Canning's" defence here is that they are seeking grubs, and that a closer inspection will prove so. I may state that he attacks the healthy tree as well as the unhealthy one, and when he does this his services are not needed. The Sparrow is another great enemy of the berry growers, as he does lots of damage picking berry buds just after they begin to shoot; and I have myself had dozens of hours tenting them. I am a bird lover, being a member of two Linnet singing clubs in my district. HERBERT DICKINSON.

The Use of Clap Nets.

SIR,—In your issue of Feb. 11th, there appeared a letter under the above heading, in which "Sharped Catcher" endeavours to explain a modern and advantageous method of working clapnets. But as far as I am concerned, he fails to convey even the faintest idea of how he works them. And if it would not cause inconvenience to "Sharped Catcher" I would like to have his nets illustrated in your paper, as perhaps I am not the only reader of CAGE BIRDS who would like to see an improvement in the working of clapnets, as undoubtedly they are too slow when worked on the present-day system, and also far and away too conspicuous for sharp birds to be decoyed within their reach.

UNSHARPED CATCHER.

SIR,—In answer to "A Catcher's" question, which is the best length, width, and colour, for a pair of nets for Goldfinch catching, I would like as an amateur catcher for over 30 years, to give him my experience of Goldfinch catching. The size of the nets I use is from 8 to 9 yards long, with a 4 feet 6 inch staff; and as I make all my own nets, I always, when making, allow for plenty of lint, or, as it is sometimes called bagging. The thread I use is the best superfine whitey-brown, and made on the diamond mesh principle (¾ mesh). I afterwards dye them in ordinary walnut shell stain. I have also trapped a large number of birds, but I find trapping rather slow, and very monotonous, so when occasion offers, I use nets in preference to traps. If, when out catching with nets, the wind springs up, and I get what is called wing-bound, that is the wind blowing against one net so as to make it slow in coming over, I always use a pulley on my pull-line, and I guarantee there are not many birds that will shoot out. I enclose a rough sketch of nets laid, with pulley attached, and trust that "A Catcher," and others, may benefit through these few hints of mine. A. PRITCHARD.

A: Bridle of line. 2: Ring 1½ins. diameter. C: Cord, 2ft. 6ins. long. D: Peg, 9ins. long.

SIR,—I was very much interested in the way "Sharped Catcher," of February 11th used his nets, but I cannot grasp what he means by "a peg placed in centre of net"; also "double the string and tie a loop half-way between the peg and the top end of the pole." My clapnets are 12 yards by 4½ feet and I find the same as "A Catcher," does—that they don't come over quick enough. Am I to understand "Sharped Catcher" works his pair of nets on the same principle of working with a single net, set folded up in a line? If "Sharped Catcher" would give us a rough sketch of the way he sets them, I should be thankful to him.

J. H. MURRAY.

SIR,—I don't quite follow your correspondent, "Sharped Catcher" in all the details of his reply, but I can add a diagram to explain how a pair of nets may be set on the "Come-and-go" plan. The illustrated clap net is shown set. Its working width is exactly twice the length of the poles. In the dimensions given by "Sharped Catcher"—8 feet wide these poles would be four feet. Does he mean that the pull-line ought to be attached at X and Y, instead of where I have shown it in the diagram? In the beginning of the season the flirt bird is an indispensable factor in successful catching. Towards December and January it becomes a "scare-bird," and "the brace-bird on a thistle" is then the better plan for sharped birds. I do not understand Mr. Pering's purse net. CATCHER.

Club Reports.

AMBLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 18th. Moved and seconded that annual show he held Nov. 11th, and Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead) he judge for same. Also decided to hold a First Feather Show July 8th. Four new members were enrolled—Messrs. C. Badmin, J. Fitzsimmons, J. Dawson and Son, and W. Smailes and Son.—J. T. Crackett, Sec.

BRADFORD WEST C.B.A.

At last meeting we arranged schedule of members' shows for coming season, viz., two F.F. shows and three winter shows. We have made a good classification, catering for all varieties of Yorks., Nor., and Brit. The special list exceeds any other given by the Club—over £5 and two silver cups to be competed for. It is the committee's desire to induce all members to compete for these specials and help make shows a success. We are also arranging lectures, rambles, etc., which will be published in due course. Any fancier wishing to become a member can do so on payment of the first subscription (entrance free), and will be eligible to compete for specials. Meetings held Red Lion Hotel, Four Lane Ends, on second Saturday in each month. We shall be pleased to meet new members.—F. Western, Sec.

WIBSEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual tea and presentation of prizes held Mar. 4th, Horse and Groom Inn, drawing together a company of about 100 fanciers, ladies and friends, who sat down to an excellent tea served in best style by our host and hostess (Mr. and Mrs. G. Ormondroyd) and the fanciers in the district know what that means. After tea the tables were cleared as soon as possible, and the room was soon filled. Our President (Mr. A. Hiley) took the chair. The ball was set rolling by a glee from the quartette party (Messrs. J. Atkinson, H. Atkinson, Hiley and Seed). Master W. Lawson gave us a violin solo. Songs were sung by Miss Buckley, Mr. W. Hillas, Mr. Paul Bairstow, and Mr. George Clay. Messrs. Chapman and Shaw gave us a scene from the real life of a tramp and a gentleman's son, causing roars of laughter. The prizes were during the interval presented to the following by Mr. John Crowther, and a vote of thanks was proposed to him by Mr. H. Bairstow. Winners of valuable prizes: 1, Mr. G. Hudson; 2, Mr. W. Mann; 3, Mr. J. Taylor; 4, Mr. D. Sutcliffe. Specials to Messrs. J. Lawson, D. Thornton, Bairstow and Chapman, Swailes Bros., C. Bastow, C. Hardaker, W. Ellerton, A. Hiley, J. Nicholls, W. H. Rhodes, G. Musson, in champion's section. In Extra Novice competition 1st prize was won by Mr. B. Wilman, 2nd, Mr. C. E. Hylton; 3rd, F. Hanson, and the selling class teapot was won by Mr. W. Hillas. Various other specials were won. The second half of the programme was opened by the quartette party, songs were sung by Mr. Pete Bastow, Mr. H. Atkinson, Mr. Miller, Mr. Paul Bairstow, and Mr. W. Chapman. Mr. Alex Wilson gave us one of his old-time recitations, which upset all calculations. A very enjoyable evening (one of the best the Society has ever had), was brought to a close by the chairman thanking all who had helped to make the affair the success it was. All who missed this tea and social missed one of the best the Society has ever had.—H. C. Crossley, Sec.

CITY & SUBURBAN A.C.B.

The Making of Egg Cake and Egg Food

Meeting Feb. 27th, with Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. The following were elected members: Miss Edith Higgins, Mrs. Soanes, Mrs. Stevens, T. L. Sayer, and A. H. Bradley. Mr. H. Armstrong (Barnsbury) was nominated. An enthusiastic vote of thanks was conveyed to Mr. P. H. Harris for the gift of a handsome solid silver cup for competition in the British seedeating section. It was unanimously agreed to continue affiliated to the London Federation, Messrs. A. W. Curtis and W. Sanders being selected delegates. Upon a question being put, it transpired that nine 1910 subscriptions were outstanding: it was decided to leave it in the hands of the Secretary till the end of March. An egg food competition then took place, seven members giving in their names as wishing to take part. A draw was then taken as to the order of competing.

No. 1 (W. Sanders) then commenced proceedings by rubbing through an ordinary 10in. by 5in. wooden framed wire sieve a piece of home-made cake with his hare hands, afterwards passing a hard-boiled egg through by means of a kitchen knife. These were mixed up in a basin, and presented a crumbly appearance of a slightly dark golden colour. The ingredients required for making the cake were as follows: A teacup of maize meal, the same of fine oatmeal, bread crumbs, ground rice, and castor sugar, 1½ozs. beef suet, ¼-teaspoonful of salt, and a pinch of baking powder. These were mixed up together by means of two eggs that had previously been whipped up. To be baked in a slow oven for one hour; if longer, the crust would become too hard. This cake would cost fivepence, and was exceedingly simple to make. Mr. Sanders generally used it after it was four days old. To one egg he used a portion equal to 4 Osborne biscuits.

No. 2 (T. Monger). This member again used a similar sieve but with a trifle coarser mesh. He commenced by rubbing the egg through with a wooden spatula, following with four Osborne biscuits. These were slightly mixed up with a spoon in a basin, and finally repassed through the sieve again. In commencing to feed, Mr. Monger used four biscuits, increasing it to eight as the birds progressed.

No. 3 (E. C. Offord). Great interest was centred upon this member's performance, as he proceeded to use a No. 1 Russwin Mincer (price 4s. 6d.) to grind up two slices of Standard bread that had been previously dried in the oven. This quick process over, he passed a whole egg through a 4½in. by 2in. tubular presser in lightning time, afterwards mixing them together and adding a teaspoonful of maw seed, and half a teaspoonful of castor sugar. He gave four teaspoonfuls of bread to 1 egg.

No. 4 (W. Styles). Again a similar mincing machine was used by this member, with the exception that he had made an improvement upon the cutter which prevented any clogging, and also enabled him to pass the four Osborne biscuits and one egg through at the same time, thereby saving a lot of time and labour. To clean the machine, another biscuit was run through, thus clearing away every trace of the egg. A little maw seed was added in the mixing, and a pinch of sugar to make it more palatable. As the young Canaries grew, so Mr Styles ground up the shell of the egg in the machine also.

No. 5 (W. Knight). At the nominal cost of 4d. this member had made himself a 1ft. square sieve, made with perforated zinc, standing 4in. high, to pass his ordinary piece of bread through with his hands, and with a wooden spatula he pressed the egg through, afterwards mixing it up by means of an ordinary fork. Three days' old bread he preferred.

No. 6 (J. Pooley). Standard bread again was in evidence with this member. This was rubbed through a 7½in. by 4in. tinned frame wire sieve with the bare hands and the egg pressed through a 4½in. by 2in. tubular tin presser whole. This was mixed up and during the process castor sugar was sprinkled over it from a glass bottle with a perforated top, finishing up with a teaspoonful of maw seed. Mr. Pooley gave but 2 teaspoonfuls of bread with one egg, as it was in his opinion better to give too much egg than too much bread, and much cheaper in the long run. When the birds got older, scraped cuttlefish was also added.

No. 7 (J. Lloyd). With an ordinary 8in. wooden framed, wire, domestic sieve. Three Osborne biscuits, after being broken up by the fingers, were passed through with the aid of a wooden spatula, and afterwards the hard-boiled egg, finally mixing them up together.

The basins, spoons, and eggs were provided by the Association, the latter being put into cold water, and after reaching boiling point allowed to simmer for twenty minutes; then taken off and plunged into cold running water. One competitor only was of opinion that the eggs were not sufficiently boiled. The competition was then decided by a ballot from those members present, resulting in Mr. T. Monger being the winner, with W. Sanders second. A silver struck engraved medal was then presented to Mr. Monger by the Chairman, and a bronze medal to Mr. Sanders.—V. Wynn, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN B.B.M. AND F.B.C.

At meeting held in Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle, Feb. 23rd, club medals were selected; they will be presented to winners at next meeting (annual general). Decided, to hold table show classes: Linnet, A.S. Brit., pairs for Hyb. or Mule Breeding, and A.V. For. Mr. Slack, judge. Table show result:—

LINNET: 1, Irving; 2, Hamilton; 3, Steele. SISKIN, ETC.: 1, 2, Bertram; 3, Steele. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, Steele; 2, Noble; 3, Pettersen. FOR.: 1, Young; 2, McKenzie; 3, Steele. Mr. G. Taylor judged.—J. Bertram, Sec.

DALKEITH AND DISTRICT C.C.

Meeting held, Ship, good attendance. Unanimously agreed to postpone classification till next meeting. Proposed that members have half annual subs. paid not later than June meeting; also that nominations for membership be accepted till May (this being an extension) to give those fanciers who are unaware of the new regime a further chance of joining; also that Mr. J. Steel be asked to give a few hints on British at May meeting. New members enrolled, and an agreement to smoke the pipe of friendship with Messelburgh on 18th, terminated a harmonious meeting.—Ewing and Steel, hon. secs.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S.

There was a strong muster of Dublin members at the second annual meeting, held in the Grand Restaurant, Sackville Street. Mr. Fry, Chairman, presided, and in his opening remarks commented on the prominent position which the society had attained since its formation two years ago. The hon. secretary's report and the hon. treasurer's statement, the latter of which showed a bank balance of £13, was passed unanimously. Several new rules and amendments to the rules were carried. The election of officers for the ensuing season resulted as follows:—Vice-presidents, Messrs. Hawkins (Queenstown) and Huggard (Duhlin); hon. see., Mr. D. Carroll, 17 Hamilton-street, S.C.-road, Dublin; hon. treas., Mr. J. P. Rooney; Council (Dublin), Messrs. Fry, M'Donnell, Sheridan, Cloke, Gillen, Stewart, John Lynch, Stitt, Callaghan, Holley, Birse, and James Lynch; (Provincial), Messrs. Keating (Dundalk), M'Entaggert (do.), Mulligan (Sligo), Devins (do.), Tansey (Belfast), Birch (Kildare), M'Quade (Enniskillen), and Mrs. Taylor (Raphoe). The Society's cups, which had been competed for at the Duhlin, Dundalk, and Larne shows, were presented as follows, the runners-up receiving massive bronze medals—Challenge cup, Mr. J. M'Quade (Enniskillen); runners-up, Messrs. Devins (Sligo) and Keating (Dundalk); Closed Ring Cup, Mr. J. P. Rooney; runner-up, Mr. P. Gillen; Novice cup, Mr. D. Carroll (Dublin); runner-up, Mr. M'Entaggert (Dundalk); British Bird cup, Mr. P. Mulcahy; runner-up, Mr. Birse. It was decided to hold the open show on November 9 and 10, a week later than last year. Secretaries please note.—D. Carroll, hon. sec.

WIMBLEDON & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Mr. W. H. Stoakley presided over a good assembly at adjourned annual meeting, held March 6th. Two new members were elected, considerable correspondence was read, a report of the last meeting of the London Federation was given by Mr. J. Carson, and a silver medal presented to Mrs. Thynne as prize for best bird shown by a lady at recent pair show. The most important business was the presentation of the report and balance sheet by the Secretary (Mr. H. Smith). The report showed that during the year they had lost 19 members and gained 26, making a net gain of 7. There had been an average attendance of over 40, as compared with 28 last year and 23 the previous year. The shows had been most successful, and there had been no mishaps. The general account showed a balance in hand of £20 3s. 11d., while the total cash balance, including show balances, is £23 16s. 1d. Total assets are £29 7s. 7d., and the liabilities nil. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, said the report had been presented in a most delightful and concise manner, and the balance sheet in such a clear and businesslike way that everyone could understand it. He thought they would have to search the country over to find another secretary who could have done his work so well. Some slight revision of the rules was then made; the number of committee being altered from seven to nine, and the date of the annual meeting from February to March. Election of officers:—Pres., Mr. F. R. J. Piper; Vice-Pres., Councillor C. How, Mr. J. G. Warley, Mr. E. J. Lamb, Dr Spencer; Chairman, Mr W. H. Stoakley; committee, Messrs. J. Carson, E. W. Dell, H. Dixon, A. H. Dyke, F. P. Found, G. Griffiths, F. W. Owen, P. Rorke, and E. J. Whittome; hon secretary, Mr. H. Smith. Mr. F. W. Owen and M. J. Carson were appointed delegates to London Fed., and the meeting gave instructions to Secretary as to filling up voting paper for the Federation officials. Show business occupied the remainder of the time. Decided, that annual show he held Queen's Hall, Nov. 14th and 15th, and that Mr. J. Robson be one of the judges. Young bird show, July 3rd, Mr. Robson to judge. Also decided, to revert to old system of counting points in judging competitions, except that each competitor before scoring must have named four of the birds selected by judge.—H. Smith, Hon. Sec.

BY A HOST OF DELIGHTED READERS.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL FOR 1911.

The most marvellous Handbook ever issued to the Bird World for the popular price of SIXPENCE.

REMEMBER: Last year the whole large edition was sold clean out in less than a month. Many would-be readers suffered disappointment. The 1911 Annual is also selling like hot cakes. It cannot be reprinted. Be wise: order at once.

Many of the articles included therein are by themselves worth the price asked for the complete work, and amongst those that stand out in this Year-Book are:—

HOW TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL BIRD BREEDER.

By Claude St. John.—This article represents the author at his best. The subject matter leads the would-be aspirant step by step from the rock-bed of his hobby to the very zenith of success. No bird breeder can afford to miss this highly instructive contribution, written as it is by such a popular and true hearted fancier as Mr. Claude St. John. Read it before embarking on the business of the 1911 breeding season, and it will both help you to cut down your expenses to the minimum (by avoiding waste) and to breed young birds with greater ease and certainty.

BRITISH BIRD-KEEPING FOR THE WORKING MAN.

By W. J. Pitcher.—The experiences of a Yorkshire working man. The author shows in a most interesting way that it is not always the one with the big aviaries that derives the most pleasure, but often the working-man, whose only hobby after a day's work is his birds. He advises the various kinds of birds that lend themselves to the requirements of the working-man hobbyist, and how they should be fed and cared for.

By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his sytem of feeding, management, etc.

BUILDING AND FITTING AN OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.

By Henry Meeds.—Advising the cheapest and best methods to adopt in building and fitting up an outdoor bird-room or aviary. Giving full dimensions for same, and how the internal fittings should be put into place to the best advantage. The article is accompanied by a photograph of an ideal type of out-door bird-room, which enables the reader to more easily grasp the subject matter of the article.

THE TREATMENT OF, AND MEDICINES FOR, AILING CAGE BIRDS.

A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels—telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING.

By T. F. Morgan.—Emphasises the point that even "cheap" canaries can be, and are, made to pay. The article explains in detail how a cheap breeding-cage can be made and fitted out, how the canaries should be fed and managed, and closes with a few "Don'ts" that are very timely hints.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.

By H. Norman.—The author gives it as his opinion that wild bird life flourishes in our fields and woods as it does in no other European country.

SOME DISEASES OF BIRDS, AND HOW TO RECOGNISE AND TREAT THEM.

By G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S.—An article from the able pen of Mr. Yates which is of permanent value for reference purposes. It describes in concise, and so far as possible, unconventional terms, the causes, symptoms, and diagnosis of the commoner departures from health affecting the inmates of our cages and aviaries, together with appropriate medicinal treatment. It is a real book in itself and well worthy of the price paid for the whole "Annual."

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY MANAGE A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

By W. A. Dickins.—This article should be read by the secretaries, officials, and members of all cage bird societies, dealing out to them, as it does, many helpful hints on the successful management of a society.

The Most Reliable Authority on Bird Culture.

In addition there are numerous art and other illustrations of the peerage of 1910 in the Bird World. A lovely Coloured Plate of the sensation of the season, the Dartford Warbler, claimed at the Palace for 12 Guineas. Calendar, Postal, and other information, Standards and Descriptions, Lists of Judges of Cage Birds and their addresses, Officials, Cage Bird Societies, etc.

Price 6d. on order from all Newsagents; or 8d. post free.

☞ Secretaries of Societies, Bird Dealers, and others engaged in communication with Birdkeepers, should take up an Agency for retailing our Publications. WRITE FOR DETAILS.

LONDON FEDERATION OF CAGE BIRD SOCIETIES.

The principal business before the delegates of the London Federation who met at "The Feathers," Westminster, on March 3rd, arose out of the "any other business." It was thought that the Federation was "not wanted" by the societies concerned, and the Council considered the question as to whether or not it should be continued. It was generally agreed that it would be better for the delegates to announce the death of the Federation and to give it a decent burial, than to allow it to die a lingering death, and let the Fancy pronounce it "dead." But it was decided to continue it.

The following gentlemen were present: Messrs. R. L. Crisp (in the chair), J. Dewhurst, R. H. Mugford, H. W. Cook, F. W. Thorpe, J. Turner, and J. Bray (West London F.A.), J. Tyson and F. Boxall (L.C.B.A.), W. G. Sanders (City and Suburban A.C.B.), J. Carson and H. Smith (Wimbledon C.B.S.), P. E. Hunt and J. Wyatt (Poplar C.B.S.), W. Penton and R. P. Harper (North London C.B.A.), W. Clark and J. C. Birch (Queen's Park C.B.A.), and P. Adamthwaite, Hon. Sec.

Defaulting Members.

The Council had before them the names of seven defaulting members of the London and Counties O.A. Mr. Bray moved, and Mr. Cook seconded, that the members in question be written to, but on an amendment moved by Mr. Mugford, and seconded by Mr. Turner, it was decided, "That the secretary write to the delegate representing the society and ask him to attend the next meeting of the Council, with information as to the defaulting members."

Federation Medals.

With regard to the Federation medals, the secretary stated that two societies only had participated in the competition, viz., Wimbledon C.B.S. and North London C.B.A., the winners being Mr. C. R. W. Taylor and Mr. Billingsley respectively.

Mr. Tyson asked if all the affiliated societies had been advised of the competition.

The secretary explained that all must have known of it; the delegates and secretaries should have brought the matters before their societies, and the societies could have had from him whatever particulars they wanted.

On the motion of Mr. Bray, seconded by Mr. Sanders, it was agreed to appoint Messrs. R. L. Crisp (chairman), F. W. Thorpe (treasurer), and P. Adamthwaite (secretary), as a sub-committee to purchase the medals (gold, value one guinea each).

The Railway Petitions.

The Secretary said he had had lists of signatures to the petition (to be presented to the various railway companies) from six societies—West London, North London, Poplar, Wimbledon, Queen's Park, and the City and Suburban. He had nine in from the secretary of the Cage Bird Union (Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe), who said he would send the rest in shortly. Mr. Hill (sec. of the Yorkshire Union) had not sent his in, but would do so in a few days. It was agreed to leave the petitions to the secretary to send in to the railway companies at what he considered the proper time.

Insurance Matters.

On the matter of the Fed. insurance scheme the Sec. said he did not think he was very far wrong in saying that all secretaries of affiliated societies had had from him five or six letters calling attention to the scheme; they had also had sent them particulars of the scheme; and the delegates to the Federation meetings had had instructions to bring the particulars of the scheme before their respective societies. Yet only four societies had taken it up. The insurance scheme had cost a lot of time and labour, and he did not, he said, think it quite the thing that only four should have responded. The premiums were not exorbitant. If the members wanted the scheme, they ought to support it. If they did not, he would be glad if they would say so.

Mr. Dewhurst asked if it would be possible to have the rules and conditions, as printed on the coupons, re-printed and circulated. The meeting was of the opinion that it would be cheaper to cancel a number of the books, and issue the coupons as dummies.

It was decided, on the motion of Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Cook, that the matter stand over until next meeting.

The Federation Meetings.

A letter was read from Mr. Cook (sec. of the Poplar C.B.S.), suggesting that the Federation hold at least four meetings yearly.

Mr. Mugford pointed out that, at the last meeting he gave notice of motion that meetings be held monthly, and he thought the motion ought to have been on the agenda.

The secretary stated that as the last meeting was a specially convened one, no such notice could be taken, which explained why the motion was not set out on the agenda.

Mr. Mugford was of the opinion that the delegates ought to meet frequently, whether there was any business to do or not. It would give the societies a better idea of the Federation.

Mr. Wyatt pointed out that some members of his society wanted to know if the Federation had "gone smash"; but his society attached no blame to the secretary of the Federation.

The Secretary asked whose business it was to call meetings. Did he make the work, or did the societies make it?

Mr. Smith pointed out that according to the rules of the Federation a ballot of the members for the new officers should be taken during the first fortnight in March, and as the annual meeting should be held at or about the end of March, and the delegates had not had the balance sheet and secretary's report submitted to them, another meeting before the annual one must be held.

It was decided to meet on March 17th to receive the report and balance sheet. With regard to the annual ballot, the Chairman said that, to put the rule into force, would operate rather hard on those societies whose March meeting had already been held, but the general feeling was that special meetings might be called of those societies and the ballot taken, and it was agreed to enforce the rule.

At this point the secretary rose to say that a lot of hard things had been said about a meeting not having been held for eight months, but in fairness to himself and the Council he would like to point out that in all those months he had only had a stray letter or two, and he did not think it was right he should call some thirty delegates together for such a small amount of business. He could not manufacture work, and, what was more, he was not going to; he had helped them form the Federation, and having been appointed secretary, he was there simply to carry out their instructions. He did not know whether the societies would want him to stand again as secretary; he was not particularly keen "on the job"; but if they wanted him to, he would stand. But it rested with the secretaries as to whether or not the Federation would be a success. They had, in the Federation, the nucleus of a good scheme, if they cared to see that the rules were carried out.

Mr. Thorpe said he rose to corroborate all Mr. Adamthwaite had said. He thought the Federation's one weak spot was that secretaries were not doing their work properly.

Mr. Bray said he thought it hardly fair to put the whole of the blame on the secretaries. If the Federation held regular meetings and let the affiliated societies know that it was alive, the delegates would have more work to do.

The Chairman asked how many societies had sent in their catalogues to the secretary, as per rule, and was informed that only about five catalogues had been received.

Is the Federation Wanted?

The Chairman: It seems to me there has not been sufficient interest displayed; and I think there have been faults all round. It has, however, occurred to me whether the Federation is wanted at all. Personally, I am inclined to think it is not wanted. The Fancy, it seems, does not want these organisations. The old Cage Bird Club died, and the Cage Bird Union might just as well be dead; its epitaph has already been written. And it seems to me the Federation also is not wanted. It is a question we should consider. But, in any case, if it is to end, let us bury it ourselves respectably; it is a child of our own inception, let us give it decent obsequies.

Mr. Tyson was of the opinion that they could not discuss that question without consulting the members of their respective societies.

Mr. Harper pleaded for the enforcement of the rule that meetings be held quarterly; and received as an answer that at the time when the rule was agreed to, there was a splendid lot of work to do, but the case was different now.

Mr. Smith said that the medal business was one matter that might have been considered more fully. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Boxall said that the fact that they had had practically no business during the past eight months proved conclusively that the Federation was not wanted.

Mr. Wyatt said that possibly all members had paid up their subscriptions, so that the Federation had, so far, done its work and served its purpose. (Hear, hear.)

It was moved by Mr. Tyson, seconded by Mr. Cook, that the members be asked if or not the Federation shall go on. It was thought, however, inadvisable to put the direct question to the members of the Federation.

Mr. Smith moved, and Mr. Boxall seconded, that under the circumstances, the Federation disband; but, on an amendment by Mr. Bray, and seconded by Mr. Sanders, it was carried by 13 votes for and 2 against, "That the Federation be continued for another year, and all interested are asked to assist in carrying out the rules." It was afterwards agreed, on the motion of Mr. Mugford, seconded by Mr. Cook, that the words "for another year" be left out.

An addendum of Mr. Mugford's was then agreed to, viz., that the meetings be held monthly from October to March, and two-monthly for the rest of the year.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded a long meeting.

SOUTH WALES ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held Cricketers' Hotel, Llanelly, Mar. 4th, Mr. W. Evans in chair. Two new members were enrolled. Decided that yearly subscription be 2s 6d., and 1s. entrance fee, and that all members pay 3d. per week in contributions. Also decided to approach several influential gentlemen in the town to become patrons.—John Welch, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Meeting held Mar. 4th, club headquarters, Mr. Riseborough being chairman. Mr. Reid moved and Mr. Jeffrey seconded that we hold future meetings at various places to suit country members, as it was felt that it was not advisable to hold all meetings in one particular centre, and as became our designation "The Northern L. C." It would further the interests of the club and increase its prestige. The Secretary was instructed to act re same and report at next meeting. A discussion followed.—G. Davidson, Secretary.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Meeting held White Lion Hotel, Mar. 4. There was a fair attendance. Decided, that we have our next feather show July 1. Following judges nominated: Messrs. W. Reid, J. Stanger, A. Brown, and R. Armstrong; the final selection will be made at meeting, April 1st. Also decided, to give special for best young bird in show, same to be subscribed for by members. I shall be pleased to hear from any fancier wishing to become a member; subs. 2s. 6d.; radius 7 miles. Will members note subscriptions are due by April meeting to be in time for next feather show?—R. H. Dixon, Secretary.

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual meeting held Feb. 27th, Hand and Shuttle Hotel, Tong-street. We enrolled seven new members. A grand lot of specials were promised, besides two gold medals and one silver, and others are expected shortly. The enthusiasm amongst members has reached a very high pitch, which augurs well for the coming season. I have had to resign my position as secretary owing to business reasons, but I have promised to act as assistant-secretary. My successor is Mr. W. Walker, 10, Oddy-street, Tong-street, Bradford, who will be pleased to hear from all intending members. Subscriptions, 3s. per annum (no entry fees).—J. Smith, Assist.-sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 1st, Palmer Hall, there being a very fair attendance. Three new members elected—Messrs. G. Munday, Stacey, and Ellis. Hon. sec. read correspondence from selected judges, and after a discussion it was decided to engage Mr. J. H. Payne as judge for annual show, Nov. 29th. The two new silver cups were on view, and are now the property of the society. On the hon. sec.'s suggestion it was decided to name them the S. Pike and G. H. Acton Cups respectively in honour of two of the best friends the society has ever had. After a discussion it was decided to allot them as follows: G. H. Acton Cup for most points gained during year in Canary classes, and the S. Pike Cup for most points in the British and Foreign bird classes, both to be won outright three years in succession. Date for F.F. Show decided for July 12th. This being Hybrid and Muling Pair Show night judging was started late; but only a few pairs had turned up owing to several members being unavoidably detained. Points won: W. H. Pyke 11, J. Brooker 6, W. Vince 4. Small but select entry. A washing display for novices will be given at next meeting, and it is hoped they will turn up in good numbers, and bring some birds with them for practice.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Meeting, Mr. P. Thom in chair. Date of annual show fixed last Sat. in Nov., as in former years. Other societies requested to note. Judges elected for same: for Crests and Plainheads, Mr. C. Campbell (Glasgow); for Borders, Mr. Mossie (Annbank); for British and Foreign, Mr. M. Craig (Tollcross). A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchinson, Sec.

NORTH SHIELDS & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting, held 37, Howdon Road, March 1st. Attendance moderate, due, no doubt, to the very inclement weather. Unfortunately our chairman (Mr. Hunter) could not get his lecture finished, but will give it in due course. After business the evening was taken up with questions. Several interesting subjects were dealt with, and proved a source of education. Mr. Hunter presided. One new member elected. Next month's programme, an egg bread illustration by Mr. Whittaker, of Border Fancy fame. Members please note.—R. P. Fox, Sec.

EASTFIELD SIDE C.B.S.

Novice washing competition held March 4th, also novice judging competition. Mr. W. Vardy gave a gold-centred medal for best washed bird, and Mr. S. Fox gave a special for the one who judged nearest the judge. Mr. F. Beardall judged both competitions, and his awards gave every satisfaction. When two of them brought in their slips it was found they had placed every bird alike; they were: J. L. Wright and J. G. Wright, and they made a draw for first place, and they had to judge the washed birds. J. G. won by one point. Results for judging: 1, J. G. Wright; 2, J. L. Wright; 3, S. Hawksley. Washing: 1, S. Hawksley; 2, A. Wright; 3, J. L. Wright. If some of them had seen Mr. Vardy's medal beforehand we think the "Mason's Arms" would not have held all the washers, for it was a real good one.—R. Nuttall, Hon. Sec.

WEST BROMWICH & DIS C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 28th, when, after general business, discussion arose over that old question, viz., what amount of green blood do you require in your stock to keep up colour? Mr. Jones (chairman) maintained that the green, known as "Liverpool green," is not of any use unless the Ciunamon is grafted in at least five years back, before that colour which is so much sought after predominates in one's stock. He also maintained that by the same way you also get type and quality. The explanation he gave was very lucid, and much appreciated by the members. He also touched on inbreeding, explaining how he paired related birds together to get the best results; and some unbelievers in inbreeding were, I think, converted. The question arose, which is the best aspect for an aviary? Everyone had a say in this. Some preferred south, some east; but the result was—everyone to his own fancy. This ended a most enjoyable evening.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD, C.B.S.

Social in connection with the pair show prize distribution held March 2. Some 70 or 80 members and friends were present. In the absence of Mr. Gardner, Mr. Dann, the vice-chairman, presided. Before presenting the prizes, he made a few remarks on the show and the programme arranged. He thought the entries (130) were a record for a pair show, and he was surprised at the attendance. He said he was glad to hear the show would result in a profit, no doubt due to the way in which members had pushed the sale of tickets. Mr. Dann said the catalogues were on sale at three o'clock with awards—a creditable thing; just an hour after the opening of show. Also they were greatly indebted to Messrs. Weston, Oldaker, and Walmsley for their able assistance. He referred to the great demand for that well-known book, CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which was the means of putting several shillings 'profit to the show account through the sale of same in hall. Mr. Dann also thanked the artistes for entertaining them that evening; he remarked on the high standard of the programme, and the way in which they (at Highgate) managed things; he hoped they would always keep this high tone in all they did. Mr. Gardner managed to "drop in" towards the end, not too late to amuse everyone by his anecdotes and funny stories.—C. W. Law, Sec.

YORKSHIRE SOCIETIES' PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.

Sub-committee met Mar. 2nd, Mr. D. Sunderland (chairman) presiding, and arranged following official programme for the social evening, which is timed to commence at 6 o'clock prompt:—Selection, orchestral band; chairman's remarks, Mr. D. Sunderland; song, Mr. J. E. Stafford; Yorks. Union C.B.S. prizes, Mr. F. Hammond; song, Mr. M. Speight; National Green-marked Y.C.C. prizes, Mr. W. H. Shackleton; humorous song, Mr. A. Smith; CAGE BIRDS' prizes, the Chairman; selection (violin solo by Mr. H. Greaves), band; Cinn.-marked Y.C.C. prizes, Mr. J. Hartley; duet, Messrs. J. E. Stafford and M. Smith (humorist), Mr. C. Gledhill (pianist), Mr. H. Greaves (violin), Mr. R. Hill (piccolo), Mr. T. Hanson ('cello).—H. Hill, Sec.

KIRKCALDY C.B.S.

Members and friends recently held a supper and concert in Station Hotel, Sinclairtown. The supper was served in excellent style, reflecting great credit on Mr. Roberts, the proprietor. Mr. Adamson (president) took the chair, and expressed himself in a social manner. He was pleased, he said, to see so many members and friends present, and it was a good thing for fanciers to meet so, as it cultivated a good feeling amongst them and tended to the betterment of the hobby generally. The chairman then introduced the presentation, in the form of a pipe, which was to be made as a token of esteem to Mr. G. Arnott (late president). He then called upon Mr. T. Arnott (late secretary) to present same. Mr. T. Arnott handed the members for the honour. Mr. G. Arnott had done much for the welfare of the society, and filled the presidentship with zeal and regularity, and gave his services ungrudgingly for the society, and his kindly and friendly manner had made for him a wide circle of friends. He would therefore ask Mr. G. Arnott to accept this as a special token of esteem from his fellow-members and friends. Mr. G. Arnott feelingly replied, and expressed his thanks. Songs and recitations were rendered by Messrs. T. Arnott, J. Brown, J. Mitchelson, C. Rae, J. Hutchison, and H. Jordan, with Mr. J. Brown at the piano. A very pleasant evening was spent. The company sang "Auld Lang Syne."

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting, held at Fawcett Street Cafe, March 4th, Mr. J. Farrer in chair. Letter read from late secretary of Cage Bird Union; decided, to take no action in matter at present. A long and interesting discussion took place on the prospects of coming breeding season, and other matters concerning the Association, which brought a very pleasant meeting to a close. J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Committee meeting held Three Tons Inn, Eastwood, Mar. 4th, Mr. R. Cooper in chair. Decided to hold two F.F. shows, first to be held at Eastwood, June 3rd, the second at Jacksdale July 15th. Also decided to fix open show date. A long discussion ensued, but it was unanimously decided to fix on Oct. 28th. Then came nominations for judges, which are to be voted on at general meeting, March 11th, Rutland Arms, Jacksdale. J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

QUEEN'S PARK AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held Maria Stuart Halls, Crosshill, Feb. 24th. Washing exhibition given by Mr. A. Wilson (Glasgow) before a good audience. After washing a few birds, Mr. Wilson gave a thorough exhibition of his method, which was most interesting, especially to younger members. He also explained the working and advantages of his "Perfect" drying cage. A hearty vote of thanks was given him. The new rules were submitted, and copies of same will be ready for next meeting, March 31st, when new members will be welcome.—Robt. Heggie, Sec.

BUCKHAVEN AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held Free Gardeners Hall, Feb. 25th, Mr. D. Henderson presiding. This society continues to make excellent progress at present, having a record membership. Classification for open show gone over; agreed, to give 71 classes: Scotch 5, Border 15, Crest 5, Norwich 15, Yorks. 5, Common Can. 1, A.O.V. 1, Gift 1, Brit. 18, For. 5. Following judges appointed: Border Fancy, Mr. G. Hislop (Stirling); Nor. and Yorks., Mr. J. M'Lay (Kirkintilloch); For. and Scotch Fancy, Mr. A. Cochrane (Edinburgh). "Cage Birds Annuals" were then distributed amongst the members.—John Lawrie, Sec.

MIDDLESBRO' & TEES-SIDE C.B.S

Sixth annual general meeting held headquarters, Crown Hotel. Good muster of members present. Balance sheet submitted, showing balance to the good of £9 2s. After hearing the report on same, this was accepted with satisfaction. Following officers elected: President, Sir Samuel Sadler; Vice-President, Dr. Howel; Chairman Mr. J. Hanson; Vice-Chairman, Mr. C. Watson; Treasurer, Mr. G. Harker; Auditors, Messrs. T. Wells and C. Mallory; Assistant Secretary, Mr. J. Swinsco; Secretary, Mr. A. Wake; Committee: Messrs. R. Unthank, W. Thompson, (Rev.) B. Wilton, T. Gibson, G. E. Lancaster, J. W. Thompson, W. Rand, C. Mallory, J. Unthank, M. Darnborough, E. Ward, G. Brown, W. Appleyard, F. Salmon, W. Emerson, J. Barnes, J. Carr, S. Jenkinson, J. Greenfield. Also carried, that we hold annual show Oct. 21st, and that Mr. G. Harland judge Canary section, and Mr. C. Houlton British birds and Mules. This brought a very good meeting to a close.—Arthur Wake, Secretary.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Meeting held March 1st, headquarters, City Hotel, Wine Street, when Mr. W. H. Manley presided over a good attendance. Classification for matched pair and British bird show at headquarters March 11th adopted; 19 classes in all, birds to be staged at 2.30, entry fee 6d. per cage, with prize money on sliding scale. Four specials were kindly given: 2s. 6d. for best matched pair, cake for 2nd best matched pair, 2s. 6d. for best British, and 2s. 6d. for most points gained in show. Mr. C. P. Telling judge. For April meeting Mr. F. R. Phillips will give a paper on the "Revision of the Wild Birds Act." Mr. Hudd (Bristol) was elected a member. Mr. Manley gave a most interesting account of the Palace show. Starting with the Norwich, he went through the catalogue with most instructive notes, which were keenly followed. One of the incidents concerning the much-talked-of "talking Canary" was highly amusing. It was being admired by an interesting old lady of mature years, who was saying, "Pretty dear, pretty dear." In the background was a crowd of Yorkshiremen, who were waiting to hear the bird talk, when one in the native brogue said: "How do you expect the bird to talk, missus, with a face like that looking at it? If you look much more it will swear at you."—A. R. A. Carter, Hon. Sec.

NEWARK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Very successful washing exhibition and discussion held at headquarters, Boar's Head Hotel, March 4th. Mr. W. P. Barnes (Grantham) very kindly travelled to Newark to give us the exhibition. Three very dirty birds were put through the wash; meanwhile, Mr. Barnes explained the correct way to handle, wash, rinse, etc. His method was to use three basins of good size, a camel-hair brush, and a silk handkerchief. He preferred the drying cage to the cloths, but explained that many preferred the cloths to roll birds in. On first handling he explained that should a bird be nervous, and escape from the hand, he would give it a rest before washing it, as the wash in itself took enough out of a bird without first exhausting it by its escaping, and probably being bustled in your endeavouring to catch it. The feathers should always be stroked one way, with the tail of the bird resting on the palm of the hand. After using the soap and brush in the first basin, he used the other two to rinse the bird in, afterwards transferring the bird to the drying cage and placing it before a fire (not too close), and in a short time it was put in a show cage and passed round for the fanciers present to inspect, causing many exclamations at the difference the wash had made to it. Mr. Barnes explained that it was as necessary to wash a bird and stage it properly as it was to have a good bird; a good bird badly shown was a good bird spoilt. After the washing a discussion took place, Mr. Barnes telling the members his methods of pairing birds, and stating that for the novice the best method was the old-fashioned one of pairing buff to yellow, and vice-versa, taking the marking (if any) into consideration. He liked the cocks to have size and substance in them. He liked medium-sized hens, as it was from the hens one would get type and quality. He only double-buffed when necessary to get size in birds when wanted for a special purpose, the same as one would double-yellow for fining down a bird. He much preferred sand for cage bottoms to sawdust as a general thing, though for Hybrid breeding it was necessary to have sawdust, to save the eggs, as in the case of many Hybrid pairs the hens had a tendency to drop the eggs from the perches, and it was as well to have the perches as low as possible to save them from being broken. The best time to pair up birds was the beginning of April, but each member must use his own judgment, as birds in a warm room would be in a much more forward condition than those kept in a cold room. After questions had been asked and answered, the Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Barnes; Mr. Wells seconded this, and Mr. Barnes suitably responded. About 50 members and friends were present, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.—W. Lidgett, Chairman.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIS. C.B.S.

At usual monthly meetiug there was a fair turnout of members. After the usual business the members decided to have a "smoker," also that there be a pair show at next meetiug, the members to judge by ballot. We also made two new members, namely, Messrs. Boyd and Hooper.—Geo. Havver, Sec.

FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, Mar. 1st, the president (Mr. T. R. Wallace) presiding over a good turn-out of members. Classes and rules for annual show, October 28th. were considered; rules were passed unaltered; and the only alterations in classes are: a class for Mealy Redpolls in place of gift class, the latter being dropped. Judges were nominated for annual show, but not yet fixed. Mr. Simpson gave report of money received as donations towards secretary and treasurer, which was very satisfactory. The chairman intimated that they had a very important duty to perform, as the present secretary was settled on going abroad in May, and they had to appoint a secretary in his place. The members expressed their regret at losing present secretary, and asked him to keep on the duties till the May meeting, which he consented to do. Members will greatly assist by sending on annual subscriptions as early as possible; it will be impossible to visit all members.—R. Hamiltou, Sec.

UDDINGSTON AND DIST. C.S.

Meeting held Reading Rooms, March 2nd, Mr. Hugh Donnon, vice-president, in chair. Rules were gone over and discussed, several alterations being made. Agreed, to reduce members' annual subs. from 3s. 6d. to 2s. 6d., payable as follows: 1s. as entrance fee for all members, on proposal, which must be paid, on or before first feather show, to be held July, date not fixed; the remaining 1s. 6d. to be paid four weeks before open show. Agreed, to postcard all members for next meeting, first Thursday in April, when rules will come up for final decision. Auditor's report adopted. — A few of the members waited on the secretary at his residence, when the president, Mr. T. Prentice, presented him with a beautiful marble timepiece, and a handsome umbrella to Mrs. Kilpatrick, from the members, as a token of respect and appreciation for services done during the year 1910. Mr. Prentice, in a few chosen remarks, handed over the articles, and Mr. Kilpatrick, on behalf of his wife and himself, briefly replied, and thanked the members for their kindness, which was far beyond his expectation. The company was entertained to a nice tea, prepared by Mrs. Kilpatrick, a very happy evening being spent.

HALIFAX C.S.

Annual general meeting held March 4th, Griffin Hotel, and there was a very large attendance. President Mr. Ross in chair. Balance-sheet read and passed unanimously, showiug the society to be in a sound financial condition, with a balance of £42 16s. 9d. in hand. The president had a very pleasing duty to perform in the presentation of prizes for the series of shows during past season. Championship classes: 1st prize, F. Townsend; 2nd, H. W. Walsh; 3rd, E. J. Cundall; 4th, S. Haigh; novice classes: 1st, S. Heap; 2nd, E. Ellis; 3rd, W. Simpson; 4th, Burdikiu Bros. Mr. A. Dearden also presented the winner of the novice classes with a gold centre silver medal, and Mr. S. Haigh presented Messrs. Stott and Moore with an alarm clock value 10s. 6d. for most entries made by a novice not in the society's prize money throughout series, which kindly actions, I am sure, are much appreciated by the members. Messrs. Armstrong and Sunderland were appointed scrutineers of ballot papers. Results: Presideut, Mr. A. Ross (again re-elected, which by the applause appeared to give every satisfaction; the members evidently realise that in Mr. Ross they have a capable leader and a good worker); vice-presidents, Messrs. F. Lee, Councillor H. H. Sutcliffe and F. Armstrong; secretary, Mr. J. F. Thackray (again re-elected, aud by the unanimous vote the members are evidently well satisfied with his services, and I think he holds the record in the Yorkshire Union for length of service in this position. I am sure there is not a better); assistant-secretary, Mr. H. Whitaker (re-elected for the eighth time); auditors, Messrs. Armstrong and Sunderland; delegates to Yorks. Union, Messrs. H. Whitaker, H W. Walsh, and H. Lord; sub-committee, Messrs. Ball, Haigh, Lord, F. Burdikin, Whitaker, Clegg, and Pilling; stewards, Messrs. Ball, Haigh, and Dunn. Hearty vote of thanks to the officers for their services was proposed by Mr. Child, and seconded by Mr. Armstrong, and was respouded to by the president. Two new members were enrolled, which brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—H. Whitaker, Assistant Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual dinner held Sydney Arms, March 1st. In the absence of the president, Mr. G. Grant, occupied chair, and was supported by Messrs. T. J. King, J. H. Payne (Gloucester), J. Houghton (Gloucester), A. S. Treasure, W. Pounsett, J. Madagan, D. Lewis, and a large number of members and friends. Ample justice having been done to the good things nrovided by host Smith, and the loyal toast having been duly honoured, Mr. King rose to propose the toasts of the Cheltenham Cage Bird Society. This, he said, he was very pleased to do, as it was some 30 years ago that he, in conjunction with two or three more fanciers, had started the society. Of course, like all other societies, it had had its ups and downs, but he was very pleased to congratulate the members on its present prosperity. It had been steadily growing for some years, and its membership was larger than it had even been before. Speaking from his own point of view, he should like to see more members take up Crests, which he thought were preeminently the finest birds bred. In asking the company to drink to the success of the Cheltenham C.B.S., he coupled with it the names of Mr. Lamb and Mr. Treasure. Mr. Grant thanked the proposer of the toast for the kind things he had said, and also the company for the way they had drunk to it, and reminded them that the only way to keep forging ahead, was to do as they had in the past pull together. Mr. Treasure, in responding, thanked them for the way they had supported him in the past, and said that the society was never in so good a position as at present; it had a membership of nearly 60, a balance on the right side, and plenty of enthusiastic workers, and he thanked the Gloucester members for the great help rendered. Incidentally he mentioned that at the last show there were 700 exhibits, and he ventured to prephesy that they would reach 1,000 next time. An excellent programme had been arranged by Mr. D. Lewis, in which the following gentlemen took part: Messrs. King, H. Yiend, C. Yiend, Scrivens, D. Lewis, G. Smith, Salisbury, and Stopworth, with Mr. Tibbles as accompanist. Votes of thanks to the chairman and Messrs. D. Lewis and W. Pounsett, for arranging such an enjoyable evening, brought the proceedings to a close.—A. S. Treasure.

The Shows.

BANGOR AND DISTRICT O.S.

Members' Show, held Feb. 18, proved a success, as we have a balance of 2s. 8½d. It was well supported, no less than 96 birds being entered. All classes were guaranteed, so we have a good lot of fanciers on the committee; and they worked well to get a good entry. We hope to get a lot more fanciers to join for our annual show.—W. Altken.

WALSALL AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Table Show held Mar. 4th, Vine Hotel, Cross Street. The Canary Class did not turn up very well, but the British bird classes were very good, some fine birds being staged. Mr. J. A. Tonks (Wednesbury) judged to the satisfaction of all. Afterwards he went round and explained to the members the different points in their exhibits.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Annual pair show held Mar. 4th, headquarters. There was a very poor entry considering the handsome specials offered; only 31 pairs were staged. We should like to see more enthusiasm shown by the members at this fixture. Some excellent pairs were on view, and admired by the numerous visitors. Specials were won by, viz.: Silver medal (gold centre), best Yorks., E. Norton; 2s. specials—R. Pawson, T. Flint, and J. Smith. Messrs. C. E. Hall and J. STOCKTON-ON-TEES & DIS. C.B.S

Annual Pair Show and Britisb Birds, held Mar. 2nd, Leeds Hotel, when 175 birds were shown—the largest the members have ever got together. The room was packed with visitors. Mr. J. H. Yeates took special for most birds in Canaries, also cup for three nominated birds; Mr. Sanders took special for most points in British; Messrs. Lowes and Son cup for three nominated British birds. Mr. A. Wake (Middlesbro') judged Canaries, and Mr. F. Marwood (Thornaby), British birds; and they gave every satisfactiou.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual pair show held at headquarters, Avondale Hall, March 4, wheu an interesting collection of Canaries, British and Foreign birds was on view. The entries were somewhat less than last year; but owing, we understand, to a change in the secretaryship the arrangements were made somewhat hurriedly and to this fact the shortage of entries may well be attributed. Some good Crests were staged by Mr. Yeoman, while Messrs. Thorpe and Mazzoni put down some good Yorkshires. In the British bird classes, Messrs. Vale and Brighty seemed to have things all their own way, the former securing special for best insectivorous bird in show with a lovely Grey Wagtail in splendid condition and well put down. Special prizes went somewhat cheaply, one class with only four entries having three specials. The arrangements were well managed by the new hon. secs., Messrs. Priest and Gooch, who were supported by Messrs. Askew, Sandy, and Brighty. The judges were Messrs. Robson (Canaries), and Frostick (British and Foreign). The show was well attended. Messrs. Crisp, Tyson, and many other well-known fanciers looked in during the evening.

DOUGLAS.

With a view to creating further interest amongst the members, the Manx Canine F. and F.A. a short time ago decided to hold montbly sbows, the first of which took place in the Salisbury Hall, Douglas, 9th Feb., and from the keen interest shown by fanciers and the public, was very successful. In the cage bird section twelve classes were provided, most of which were well filled. The arrangements were in the hands of a capable committee, ably presided over by Mr. G. Robertson, with Mr. T. H. Watterson as secretary. Judges, Mr. J. Cannell (Norwich, British, and mules), and Mr. T. Hogg (Yorkshires). Amongst the Britishers were some rare specimens, particularly a Yellowhammer and three Linnets, all shown in the pink of condition, the property of Mr. E. Gale, a well-known and successful exhibitor. Mules were a good lot, a four-pointed Goldfiuch and Canary belonging to Mr. W. H. Gill winning special for best bird in show. The Norwich and Yorkshire classes contained some good birds, the principal winners being Messrs. T. Hogg, W. Wade, and J. Turner. Two specials for most points, presented by Mr. Thos. Witherspoon, were won by Mr. T. Hogg and E. Gale.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

Very successful pair show held March 2nd at clubhouse, Woolwich. In the absence of Mr. Meades (who, we regret to hear, is away on sick leave), the secretarial duties were admirably carried out by Mr. Woolgar, assisted by some of the older fanciers. There was a capital entry, especially in Norwich, the birds being very uniform in type and capitally matched, and the competition exceedingly keen. In several cases it was only the superior staging that turned the scale, one or two grand pairs standing down through not having had the necessary tubbing. The champion section was a walk-over for Mr. Meades' birds, which were in grand fettle and well matched. The novice Norwich were divided into yellow and buff cocks. In the yellows Mr. J. Smith staged the winners, closely followed by a pair belonging to Mr. H. Hearn. In this class there were some lovely buff hens, particularly those put down by Messrs. H. Woolgar, W. Wood, and C. Hall. The pairs for Mule breeding were not numerous, but of more than average merit. The British birds were quite as plentiful as the Canaries, and it was hard to separate some of them, particularly the birds in the Goldfinch class, among which we noticed some very smart field-moulted birds. The winner was owned by Mr. J. Smith, and is a bird he secured as a Greypate. The Palace novice winning Bullie again stood first in his class. The owner of this fine bird is quite a young fancier, and is getting a taste of the sweets of victory early in his career as a bird-lover. There was a capital attendance of fanciers, all of whom appeared keen upon their hobby, and eagerly anticipating the approaching breeding season. Mr. H. Norman placed the awards.

BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

Annual pair show held February 21st, Abbett's Cafe Room, Market-street. Birds were staged in good time, but owing to the disastrous weather a great number of our birds and members stayed at home. Our judge (Mr. Burns) was very sorry he could not have fifty pairs to judge, but we must look to our stock first, weather and bench afterwards. Mr. Burns' awards met with general approval.

PRESTON O.S.

General meeting held March 2nd. After the business a most interesting pair show and judging competition were held; splendid teams of birds were staged by Messrs. A. Burrows and T. Barton in the novice section, and Mr. R. Auderton in the open section. Before the judging, which was most ably done by our worthy chairman, an interesting judging competition was held, most of the members joining, and some really promising judges were "unearthed." This was won by Mr. R. Anderton, Mr. Brewer, quite a new beginner, being a good second. Mr. Dent then performed, with the following results:

NOVICE: 1, Burrows; 2, D. Metcalf; 3, 4, vhc, and special for most points, Barton. OPEN: 1, and special for best pair shown, Leeming Bros.; 2, 3, hc, and special for most points, Anderton; 4, Leeming Bros. The best thanks of the society are due to the gentlemen who gave specials, viz., Messrs. R. Taylor, J. Pyke, J. M. Mapp, and J. Harwood.—J. P. Leeming, Secretary.

HULL C.B.S.

Second monthly show held Oddfellows' Hall, March 6th, Mr. T. Perkins judging. Three classes were provided for British birds, which brought together 38 exhibits, two Canary pair classes for champion members with 23 exhibits, and two Canary pair classes for novice members with 28 exhibits, making a grand total of 89. Points gained count for society's points cups, for most points gained at all shows during year. The following is the position of all parties, including this show:—Champion Section: Calam 59, Stamford 35, Precious 32, Brumby 16, Cliff 10, Prentice 9, Barwick 4. Novice Section: F. F. Potter 38, Douse 23, Frith 19, Longhorn 11, A. Clayton 11, Lightfoot 9, H. Sowden 8, Ridley 7, R. M. Clayton 6, Gresham 5, Smith 4, W. E. Sowden 4, Calvard 3, Hogg 3, Girling 3, Howe 2, Riley 1. It was very late when judging finished, and there was not much time left for the forty members present to look at the birds.

WATFORD AND DISTRICT C.B.S

Pairs show held Conservative Hall, a splendid room for the purpose, March 4th. The entry was a record, there being 133. The quality was excellent. The hon. secretary, Mr. W. Quantrell, deserves great praise for the splendid arrangements made, and the members paid him a well-merited compliment by giving him a record entry. Messrs. R. Finlay, A. Tucker, A. S. Sears, and J. Groves rendered willing and valuable assistance as stewards, and things went so smoothly that judging was over, awards up, and catalogues out quite early in the afternoon. Special for best bird in show went to a magnificent Blackbird shown at its best by Mr. W. Quantrell, special for best Foreign, Mrs. Webb's beautiful Amazon Parrot. There was a long list of other specials, some 25 in number, and consequently the competition was very keen. A large number of fanciers and the general public visited the show Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

De Von & Co.

Have got the entire consignment Not a bird was sold off the SS. Miltiades to any other dealer. They were shipped direct to us from our trappers at Melbourne. Now you know the reason for the malicious lies circulated by disappointed rivals who waited at Plymouth for 48 hours in the hope of buying a few pairs of birds from the ss. Miltiades to execute their orders at 8s. per pair and similar silly prices. After the failure of this event a representative was sent under a cloke to try and buy finches from

De Von & Co.

If you really want Australian finches call at 114, Bethnal Green Road, London, and inspect our magnificent stock in show condition and hardy enough to turn out of doors, at prices within reason.

Then visit dealers who are GOING to have some arrive SOME day at 8s. per pair PERHAPS.

Don't be gulled by impecunious people in the manger who cannot get the birds themselves and would prevent us if they could. Place your orders with the largest shippers of Australian Finches in the world and don't forget.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS.

We have received orders for over 600 pairs from France and Germany, where you are told they are flooded with these finches. No others are due to arrive until August next, when we shall receive another consignment. We offer at present Gouldian finches 18s. pair; Mask finches 10s pair; Long-tail Grass finches, 10s pair; Bichenos 15s pair; Zebra finches 7s 6d pair; and Budgerigars 5s pair.

De Von & Co.

Can also supply the following African, South American, and Siberian birds (see price lists).

Largest importers of Gold and Fancy fish in the trade. Cuttlefish 8d. lb., 7 lbs. for 3s.; Ants' Eggs 1s. 6d. lb., 7 lbs. for 7s. 6d.; Insectivorous food 6d. lb., 7 lbs. for 3s. Trade supplied.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

THE STOCK BOOK.

COMPILED BY G. E. WESTON.

MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Well-known fanciers have said of the "Stock Book":—"It makes bird breeding easy." This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice to breed bis birds as they should be bred.

NOW IS THE SEASON YOU NEED IT.

This "BREEDING ROOM REGISTER & BIRD KEEPER'S ACCOUNT BOOK"

(copyright) offers in a handy form a means of keeping—

The complete pedigree and description of every bird in one's room. A full record of the season's breeding experiences. An account of every young bird reared, and how it was disposed of. A register of one's doings at the shows (the most complete and useful yet devised). A cash account for the year. A profit and loss account of the season's proceedings, and a balance-sheet showing how much one has invested in the hobby.

A Series of Registers will thus furnish a concise record of the career of a fancier as a breeder and an exhibitor from year to year, or over any number of years.

Many useful Emergency and other Hints of great value during the Breeding Season will also be found in its pages.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous Issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Send a postcard for my 1911 free illustrated catalogue and advice to breeders.

If you want an exhibition bird, or good stock birds, likely to breed winners, all I ask is that you will send me particulars, and let me send you birds birds on approval, and compare all others.

It is a simple fact that I receive every week scores of letters similar to the following. The numerous visitors to my rooms have ample opportunity for proving this: "49, Avenue, Bentley, March 1, 1911.—I received bird safe, and am well pleased with it. I do not wonder at your birds taking prizes at the quality you send out. The buff that I received from you, and now this yellow, I defy any man to get better stuff for the money. They are here to be seen by anyone.—W. T. Swain to Joe Thomas." "Bontnewydd, 11/3/11.—Received bird safe, and very well pleased.—R. Roberts to J. Thomas." "Hanworth, 10/3/11.—Bird arrived safe, and is undoubtedly what I asked for—a real good one.—J. Dimes to J. Thomas." Etc, etc.

I guarantee equal satisfaction to you.

OGDEN BROS.

Now that the show season is over we have a few of our winners for sale, real good bargains for anybody requiring to lay a foundation to build up a strain, as we have done one that has a world's record: three real clinking yellow stock hens, 55/- each, that we guarantee, worth double; properly matched pairs, any price between 15/6 and 60/- per pair; clears, green marked, or cinnamon marked; our winnings at Yorkshire Union shows this last four years exceed that of any other (see Crystal Palace report, 1911), 3 first, 2 seconds, 2 thirds, championship diploma for best Yorkshire in show; inspection invited, or send cash to Editor, and we will send on approval the best value in England: Dudley Hill, Bradford.

THOMAS'S WINNING YORKSHIRES

have earned a reputation by their consistent winning throughout the season at all the leading shows. The following facts, which can easily be verified, are sufficient evidence in support of this claim.

During this season I have won over 60 first prizes, 40 seconds, 40 thirds, 30 specials in hot competition, including all the leading shows. I have bred birds that secured premier honours at this year's Crystal Palace show. My customers also have had wonderful success on the show bench with birds bred from matched pairs supplied by me. Proof of this is filed, and open for the inspection of all.

At the present time I am in a position to put any fancier on the highway to success in breeding for the show bench. I have 30 pairs which I had reserved for my own breeding, and which I find I have not now room for. These are for sale at 30/-, 35/-, 40/-, 50/-, to 100/- per pair.

I have also recently acquired the entire surplus stocks of certain well-known exhibitors in Yorkshire, who have bred some of the best Yorkshires living to-day. These are all caged off separately, and I can supply some real gems, with the right blood in them, from these reliable strains at following prices: Cocks or hens, yellows or buffs, in clears and ticks, also a few varicgated, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- each upwards; matched pairs, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- upwards. Full particulars supplied with birds. Strain and sex absolutely guaranteed. Every pair unrelated, and properly matched to produce the right stamp. This is a genuine opening for anyone to improve his stock. Special easy terms where necessary to bona-fide fanciers. Cages 3d. extra. Every bird on 7 days' approval. For other prices see my adverts. on pages 268 and 269.

high-class Yorkshires, any of this season's winners for sale; well matched pairs, 15/-; single birds, 7/6 upwards; approval: Ramsbottom-st., Accrington.

CHESHIRE'S CHAMPION YORKSHIRES

The same strains as the winners at all the leading shows; guarantced the best and cheapest obtainable; cocks from 5/-, hens from 3/-; properly matched pairs from 8/-; on approval; cash or deposit: Ernest Chesbire, 26, Crawford-st, Bradford.

KNIGHT'S YORKSHIRE BREEDING PAIRS

at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- to 20/- are equal to those charged double and treble for, as supplied by self-styled champion Yorkshire exhibitors. The following letter received from a 20/- pair purchaser abundantly confirms the fact:—"Sir,—Birds arrived in splendid condition; am more than pleased with them; in fact they are equal, if not superior, in every respect to pair I paid £3 for to Mr. ——, whom doubtless you will know as one of your Yorkshire champion exhibitors. You are at liberty to make what use you think proper of this, provided you omit names, for obvious reasons which you will quite understand.—T.L." Having 30 to 40 pairs still unsold, amateurs and novices desiring to breed own winners need not now pay extravagant prices charged by professional exhibitors and dealers, but save money by placing their orders for season's breeders with a 30 years' continuous breeder of Yorkshire varieties only, and thus ensure proper style, type and quality, cheaply by comparison. Few surplus hens bred as best, but rather on small side, 3 for 10/- until sold. Season's reduced list sent on forwarding post card to Jonas Knight, Allerton, Bradford, Yorkshire.

SUTCLIFFE & SON.

We have bred and sold more winners in marked birds than any other fancier, also won the 10 guinea cup for Green marked Yorkshires this season, and winning the Cinnamon marked championship for 9 years, also special for best bird in show, with clear birds. This is sure proof of the quality of our stock, including highest honours at the Crystal Palace; we have a few extra good show and stock birds for sale, price from 15/- to 60/- a pair; state wants; three days' approval; inspection invited: 1, Kitson Street, and 1, Back Kitson-st., Cragg-rd., Windhill, Shipley, Yorkshire.

H. H. TOWERS,

winner of Cinnamon-marked Championship Trophy, 1910-11, with over 40 points more than any other competitor. At the last two Palace Shows I won moe premier prizes than all other exhibitors put together in cinnamon marks, taking 4 1sts and 5 2nds. This is proof, not a wild statement. I have also won trophies in all other varieties of Yorkshires excepting greens, but I have no wish to join in the present advertising competition, and will let my birds speak for themselves. I simply promise to deal with any enquiries to the best of my ability. I guarantee and give satisfaction. Send stamp stating your wants, on cash or deposit terms, and if birds are not suitable I will at once return your money. I have an unflighted green marked yellow, 7 inches long, at 25/-, just the sort to breed winners; also some very fine buffs from 15/-; I have a few yellow cocks and various hens at prices ranging from 8/- to £2; also several winners cheap; write at once to: Colne-rd., Glusburn, nr. Under the White Rose.

THE grand amalgamated dinner, prize distribution, and social, held on Saturday last at Bradford, under the auspices of the Yorkshire Union, the Y.C.C., the C.M.Y.C.C., the N.G.M.Y.C.C., the O.N.P.C., and the Y.C.B.B. and M.C. was a decided success. There was a record attendance, and everything passed off as smooth as possible. Mr. David Sutherland makes an ideal chairman for a gathering of this description, and in Mr. H. Hill they have a secretary second to none; they are, too, well backed-up by a strong committee composed of the secretaries and presidents and other officials of the various clubs interested.

PRIZES made a grand show, and were greatly admired by the visitors, many of whom had come a long way to see them, and to take part in the social gathering. They were one and all delighted at the reception given them. From all directions they came—Hull, London, Manchester, Sheffield, Leeds, and in great numbers from the area covered by the Yorkshire Union.

TWO of our popular judges appeared to be enjoying themselves hugely during the dinner—and afterwards as well. Who were they? Seats had not to be left for long, before they were appropriated. I saw two Norwich, one British, and one Yorkshire trying to sit on three chairs, but the Norwich were too stout and the British too much like a Hawfinch in body for them to be comfortable.

JIM BAILEY'S "not-getting-out-at-Manningham" tale appeared to tickle the ladies immensely.

OPEN Norwich Plainhead Club held their general meeting during last Saturday afternoon at Bradford, and had a moderate attendance. Business was got through very quickly, though, sad to relate, they have not got all "subs" in yet, and are a little to the bad. But this would be wiped out if members would only attend to their duties. A collection was made on behalf of the club, and a nice little sum was realised—just to give the society a good start for next year.

OPEN Valley C.B.S. had a very practical lecture on wire cage front and seed box making, by Mr. Smith, of Cleckheaton, and as Mr. Smith is by trade a tinner, he was the proper person to give a few hints on that work, which to the uninitiated is a sore puzzle indeed. The solder in the hands of the novice has a bad habit of sticking where it should not stick, and of running where he doesn't want it to run. Many good wrinkles were given. The members turned up in excellent numbers, and altogether a very pleasant evening was spent.

*A Clever Blackbird.

One day I caught a Blackbird and put it in a cage. I thought it was no good, so I asked my father to let it go. He got a hairpin, however, and fastened same on the door, and then came indoors. We watched Mr. Blackbird; he kept pulling at the hairpin, and he let the door down. He repeated this several times. So my father let him go. The bird flew round the garden several times, and then disappeared. We left the cage in the garden with the door open, and when we got up next morning Mr. Blackbird was in his cage.—Geo. Jenkinson, 18, Julian Street, Grimsby (age 13).

A Sparrow's Coolness.

A passenger who was waiting for a train in one of the Underground Railway stations observed a Sparrow hopping upon the rails in search of crumbs. A train came into the station from the direction in which the passenger wished to travel, and he had leisure to watch the Sparrow. It allowed the engine to come within a few feet of it, and then, instead of flying away, it quickly hopped off the rail upon which it stood, and hopped into the space between the rails. There it lay until the train passed over it, when it jumped upon the rails again and resumed its search for crumbs.—Taken from "Chatterbox" by Master William Sharples, 16, Dixon Street, Waterhead, Oldham (age 14 years).

*An Obedient Parrot.

My father and a friend one day were arguing about a Parrot which we had. Father said the bird would do anything he told it, but the friend would not believe it. So they took the Parrot about two miles out in the country, and there, before its eyes, placed a five-pound note under a large stone. They then came home with the bird, so as to let it go in search of the note. After the bird had been gone an hour, they noticed it flying homeward without the note; but when it landed on my father's hand, it dropped five golden sovereigns into it. The bird had been to the bank and changed the note, and this ended the argument in my father's favour. (Told by a friend.)—Albert George, 10, Grafton Street, Rochdale, Lancs. (age 12).

THE BIRD-LOVER'S LIBRARY.

"Britain's Birds and Their Nests: Described by A. Landsborough Thomson." 21/- net. W. and R. Chambers, Ltd., London and Edinburgh.

The main reason for the publication of this book—this much is stated in its preface—is Mr. George Rankin's series of coloured plates. Readers of CAGE BIRDS will require no sort of introduction to Mr. Rankin, examples of whose art have been issued by us both in the form of coloured plates and in half-tone reproductions. In the book before us no fewer than 132 paintings are reproduced, representing as many different species of birds known to nest in the British Islands. The birds and their nests and eggs are depicted with this artist's characteristic care, and there is a charm about each painting which is peculiarly his. There is, however, no rigid adherence to any one form of representation; the backgrounds are delightfully varied in character, and the natural scenery is faithfully portrayed; and where it was impossible adequately to show the eggs of a given species, either through their being inaccessible to the onlooker, or because the parent bird is seen incubating them, a separate picture of the egg has been inset.

But it must not be thought that these 132 coloured plates are the only value of the work; an allowance must be made for a certain amount of modesty on the part of the author of the text, who, in the preface, ascribes to these plates the main reason for the publication of the book. As a matter of fact, Mr. A. Landsborough Thomson is to be congratulated on his careful and accurate handling of the text. Over two hundred species are dealt with, and these include nearly if not quite all the species which nest in our Isles in appreciable numbers, besides a few rarer birds of special interest. The purpose of the text is, it is stated, "to give in popular language an account of the natural history British breeding birds, considered as such." And this purpose has been admirably adhered to. The arrangement of the book is based on a scientific classification, and the system and nomenclature adopted are those followed in Howard Saunders's "Manual." A capital introduction to the work is contributed to by Mr. J. Arthur Thomson, and it has the added quality of complementing it in no mean manner.

We can confidently recommend this volume of 360 pages and 132 coloured plates to our readers. It is at once authoritative, comprehensive and concise; the paintings are faithful and delightfully chaste in colouring, and the text couched in language which it will require no special or technical knowledge to understand.

How to Become

A Successful Bird Breeder.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

"CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL. 55

The chicks should be out on the fourteenth day from the day the fourth egg was laid. Now is the time to be careful. Don't get too excited or impatient wanting to hurry on the hatching process. If the eggs "pip" all right, the chances are vastly in favour of their hatching without your assistance far better than with it. Leave the hen quietly alone: she knows more about these matters than you. Excitement and worry are very bad for her at this time, and are apt to give her "stage fright," when she will simply ignore the existence of her tender offspring, and leave you to take over the whole business and manage as best you may.

Do not at once satiate her with a profuse supply of egg food. Give a small quantity freshly prepared twice on the first day, and afterwards three times daily if convenient, always aiming at giving just as much (and no more), as the pair manage to clear up a short time before the next supply is due; and see that the supply is perfectly fresh and sweet and served in a clean pan every time. The actual quantity given at each feed will depend upon the parents and the number of the brood, so that it must be gauged by observation during the first few days. As the brood increases in size day by day, the quantity will, of course, need to be increased. On the third or fourth day, according as the hen appears to be feeding well or only fairly, give a scrap of green food, and afterwards continue this supply (fresh, of course) two or three times daily. Again, let the increase be gradual, to avoid setting up undue looseness in the hen. A little summer rape should also be added to the seed diet, and if the hen does not take freely of the egg-food sprinkle it with maw. At the end of a week or ten days a further supply of cracked hemp will prove a valuable addition, particularly where a large brood has to be catered for.

THE YOUNG BROOD.

As long as the hen continues to feed the brood and treat them well no good will come of any efforts to improve upon her methods. Some hens will rear their young almost entirely upon seed; others upon green food; and yet others upon mostly seeds and green food. In either case if the young thrive upon their pabulum, whatever it is, do not pester the parents to try to make them feed upon something more in accord with your own ideas of the fitness of things. And there should also be no great desire to hurry the young away to do for themselves. A well fed brood may leave the nest any day after the twenty-first from hatching, but if the hen treats them well, I prefer to let them remain with her until they are at least a month old. By this time they will probably be able to husk rape seed themselves, and will get along nicely with the addition of egg food daily until it is seen that they are cracking Canary seed quite freely.

Put them in a moderate-sized cage at first, and give a supply of egg food daily—mixed rather dry—and a boxful of a mixture of nearly equal parts Canary and rape seeds. As soon as they are cracking the Canary seed freely gradually cut down the supply of egg food and withdraw the rape seed, bringing the birds on to a diet of Canary seed only as a staple, with a little rape seed given separately every second day, a little egg food twice a week on the alternating days, and a pinch of hemp on two other days. Plantain stalks, and similar seedy green foods, may be given in moderate quantity three times a week, but do not supply succulent green leaves until they are about two months old. Keep a piece of cuttle-fish in the cage, and have the floor strewn with clean gritty sand. See the birds have access to pure fresh water always for drinking, and offer the bath daily in warm weather. Given these simple requirements and absolute cleanliness throughout, the trouble of birds dying soon after leaving the parents will be almost unknown. They may, of course, be transferred to a large flight as soon as they are feeding well on Canary seed.

Should the hen be addicted to plucking and begin to maltreat the young as soon as the feathers are breaking through the quills, don't try to cure her. The chances are you will not succeed; and even if you did, the young will have to suffer much during the process. Look around for a suitable pair of better disposed parents with perhaps an unusually small

By W. J. Pitcher.—The experiences of a Yorkshire working man. The author shows in a most interesting way that it is not always the one with the big aviaries that derives the most pleasure, but often the working-man, whose only hobby after a day's work is his birds. He advises the various kinds of birds that lend themselves to the requirements of the working-man hobbyist, and how they should be fed and cared for.

By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his system of feeding, management, etc.

BUILDING AND FITTING AN OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.

By Henry Meeds.—Advising the cheapest and best methods to adopt in building and fitting up an outdoor bird-room or aviary. Giving full dimensions for same, and how the internal fittings should be put into place to the best advantage. The article is accompanied by a photograph of an ideal type of out-door bird-room, which enables the reader to more easily grasp the subject matter of the article.

THE TREATMENT OF, AND MEDICINES FOR, AILING CAGE BIRDS.

A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels—telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING.

By T. F. Morgan.—Emphasise the point that even "cheap" Canaries can be, and are, made to pay. The article explains in detail how a cheap breeding-cage can be made and fitted out, how the Canaries should be fed and managed, and closes with a few "Don'ts" that are very timely hints.

By J. H. Booth.—Dealing with some of the foreign hardbills commonly imported into this country, and their management

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.

By H. Norman.—The author gives it as his opinion that wild bird life flourishes in our fields and woods as it does in no other European country.

SOME DISEASES OF BIRDS, AND HOW TO RECOGNISE AND TREAT THEM.

By G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S.—An article from the able pen of Mr. Yates, which is of permanent value for reference purposes. It describes in concise, and so far as possible unconventional terms, the causes, symptoms, and diagnosis of the commoner departures from health affecting the inmates of our cages and aviaries, together with appropriate medicinal treatment. It is a real book in itself and well worthy of the price paid for the whole "Annual."

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY MANAGE A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

By W. A. Dickins.—This article should be read by the secretaries, officials, and members of all cage birds societies, dealing out to them, as it does, many helpful hints on the successful management of a society.

THE MOST RELIABLE AUTHORITY ON BIRD CULTURE.

In addition there are numerous art and other illustrations of the peerage of 1910 in the Bird World. A lovely Coloured Plate of the sensation of the season, the Dartford Warbler, claimed at the Palace for 12 Guineas. BEAMISH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held club room, Bird Inn, Mar. 11th, Mr. Mark Crosby in chair. There was a good turn out of members. Mr. J. Hands was appointed judge for nest feather show, July 8th. We made two new members, Messrs. G. Weddle and J. Boyle, and added eight extra classes to our nest feather schedule.—W. Knowles, Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

General meeting held Mar. 6th, there being a large attendance. After the geueral business a washing competition took place, special for best washed bird going to Mr. Buckley. A fancier friend has promised a gold medal for Mules or Hybrids bred during season 1911. Decided, that it go to the member gaining most points with young Mules or Hybrids at the July, Oct., 1911, and Jan., 1912, shows. Now is the time for the members to be looking to their birds, and I hope they will give the winner a good run for the medal.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

A cup and medal have been given by Mr. G. Ball for competition amongst novice members, the member gaining most points throughout year to hold cup for twelve months, any member winning it twice in succession to receive it as his own property. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Ball for providing the cup and medal. Cup obtained by our worthy chairman from Mr. Allman was allotted to the champion gaining most points throughout year. Mr. Dowie kindly promised to give a medal to winner on giving up cup. A vote of thanks was accorded Messrs. Allman, Dowie, and Clews. Towl Bros., Secs.

LEADGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual meeting held headquarters, March 4th, Mr. E. Westthorp in chair. There was a poor attendance to read balance sheet read, which showed 10s. 10½d. on the right side. Election of officers next Pres., Rev. W. B. Coney; Chairman, Mr. E. Westthorp; Vice-chairman, Mr. J. Powell; Treasurer, T. J. Colling; Secretary, J. A. Turnbull. Decided, to hold young stock show July 8th, and annual show January 6th, 1912. Also proposed, to hold open Linnet show for House Moulted birds at next monthly meeting, 10s. for 1st, 5s. for 2nd, 2s. 6d. for 3rd; 1s. for 4th; entry, 6d., to be paid at time of entrance; birds to be staged by 6 o'c. Mr. J. Stanger (Pelton Fell) has consented to judge. —J. A. Turnbull, Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S

Meeting held March 11th, Portland Arms, Jacksdale, when a fair number of members turned up. Mr. W. Holmes in chair. Chairman read correspondence from selected judges as to terms for judging first feather shows. Passed, to engage Mr. J. Adnitt to judge at Eastwood on June 3rd, Mr. E. Fox at Jacksdale, July 15. Judges voted on for open show, Oct. 28th; their replies will be placed on the agenda for next meeting. The judging and washing competition notified to take place did not come up to expectations owing to very few members taking part, only six entering in the judging competition. The winner was W. Turner; B. Simpson runner up—and a difficult lot to place they proved to be. The washing competition was void; there was not an entry made. Will those members who have not the new rule cards please apply for one or attend next meeting, April 8th, at Three Tuns, Eastwood, 7.15 p.m.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Annual general meeting, held rooms, High Street, Edinburgh, March 4th, president, Mr. Cochrane, in chair, before a good gathering of members. The balance sheet was submitted; though the balance was small, it was on the right side, and considered satisfactory, and was passed as correct, on the motion of Mr. Arrighi, seconded by Mr. Turner. Following office bearers elected for ensuing year: President, Mr. J. Turner; vice-president, Dr. Galloway, Messrs. C. Sykes, F. A. Watt, T. Erskine; committee, Messrs. Workman, Aitken, Goodfellow, A. W. Watson, W. R. Finnie, Hoyle, Livingstone, Bald, and Winter; auditors, Messrs. R. Craig and A. Cochrane; secretary and treasurer, John Allen, 5a Place, Leith. A new scheme was proposed by one of the members and heartily approved of, details of which were left in the hands of a sub-committee, to be submitted at an open meeting to be held for the purpose, April 1st, when I hope to see a large gathering of fanciers. If this scheme is accepted at the general meeting, it is anticipated that it will very much popularise the club, and will further assist the British Bird and Mule Fancy.—John Allen, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Horse and Jockey Hotel. Mr. Havenhand presided. Mr. Richinson, secretary, gave a most interesting paper on the breeding of the Norwich Canary. I was rather surprised to see such a small attendance, the subject being in such able hands. After a few introductory remarks he launched out on the operation of breeding. The first thing which claimed his attention was the breeding cage (30 by 15 by 11), with sliding wire partition nearly in the centre. A cage of this description has many good points; there is no fighting when the birds are pairing, which saves a lot of plucking of the young, and a good flight cage in the winter. Feeding: Spauish Canary staple food; maw seed, and gold of pleasure, mixed, one teaspoonful twice a week, a little summer rape on other days, and rape on other days, rape seed (soaked 12 hours and boiled 20 minutes), mixed with biscuit once a week. For green food he uses green shoots obtained by setting rape seed; and there is no fear of inflammation; he pairs up about the end of March, giving egg food at the beginning of March. He takes note of both birds and weather. When the first egg is laid he takes it away and places it in a numbered partition to be replaced when the third egg is laid. He removes the cock the same night, replaces the eggs, and lets the hen sit and bring up the young by herself. He supplies plain food during incubation, but on the night of the 13th day he places in cage yolk of egg and biscuit, and a small portion of crushed hemp seed. When the young birds are 14 days old, he puts in clean nest pan. At three weeks old keep a sharp look-out for plucking, and put the youngsters in the nursery end of the cage, and by the time the hen is ready for sitting again they are generally doing for themselves. You may now, he said, transfer them to the flight cage, to get them strong, and in good condition for the moult, which was a subject he told us he was not going to touch on. A general discussion followed on green food, during the summer, chickweed being the favourite. Cock birds not fertilising eggs—attributed to birds not being mature, and to climatic changes. It was stated that one thing which would bring the cocks into condition was iron in some form or other, green food, Parrish's Chemical Food, and tincture of steel. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Richinson for the very able manner in which he had handled his subject.—J. Hibberson, Correspondent.

PORTOBELLO C.B.S.

Meeting held March 7th, Mr. Bell occupying chair, owing to illness of our worthy president, Mr. Matthew. Members expressed the hope that Mr. M. will have a speedy recovery. Mr. Leckie promised a paper on "The Twite and Redpoll," for April meeting.—J. Bell, Secretary.

HEBDEN BRIDGE & DIS. C.B.F.A.

Annual general meeting held February 28th, when the following officers were elected:—President, Mr. J. H. Harrison; vice-president, Mr. T. Judson; treasurer, Mr. W. Simpson; secretary, Mr. A. Roberts. A pie supper was provided to which the members did full justice, the rest of the evening being spent in a sociable manner.

THURSO O.S.

Annual general meeting held committee rooms, Feb. 28th, Mr. W. Dunnet (chairman) in chair. Annual balance-sheet submitted and passed. Office-bearers and committee of management duly elected. The only change of importance to outside fanciers was that of secretary. Mr. Donald Shearer, grocer, Thurso, one of the original members, accepted office as hon. sec. Date of next show not fixed definitely, but will be announced shortly.

NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT (Permanent) O.S.

Meeting held Grapes Inn, Platt-st., March 11th, not many members turning up. The president, Mr. T. H. V. Hayter, in chair. Proposed by Mr. J. Walmsley, and seconded by Mr. Stopper, that date for first feather show be July 1; agreed to. Proposed by Mr. J. Wood, and seconded by Mr. T. H. V. Hayter, that open show be held October 21st, 1911; carried. This brought business to a close.—J. Bunn, Secretary.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

This young society continues to progress satisfactorily. At meeting held Mar. 6th, Mr. J. Rathbone (Wolstanton) and Mr. J. Butturs (Newcastle) were elected to membership. Re the cup recently presented to the association, it was decided that it be won outright by the member who gains most points with four nominated birds at the nest feather and annual shows. Young bird show fixed for June 22nd (Coronation Day), as this will be a general holiday. Local bird lovers will have an excellent opportunity of spending a pleasant hour with birdy friends and feathered pets.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

AYR AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Annual general meeting held Good Templar Hall, New Bridge Street, 6th March, the president (Mr. J. Forbes) in chair. Secretary submitted balance-sheet for past year, and same was accepted. Agreed that annual show be held Academy Hall, Fort Street, October 28. Mr. C. C. Irvine intimated his resignation as secretary and treasurer, and same was reluctantly accepted. Election of office bearers: Hon. Pres., Mr. R. McKay; pres., Mr. J. Forbes; vice-president, Mr. C. C. Irvine; auditors, Messrs. R. Aitken and J. Stitt; secretary and treasurer, James Sloan, 141, South Harbour Street; committee Messrs. Cameron, Girvan, Brown, Kelly, Hunter, Boyd, Muir, W. McKay, Bell, Campbell, J. and T. French, Lyall, Aitken, and Lindsay. Seven new members were proposed and accepted. New members will be made welcome, and any fanciers desirous of joining may have full particulars from me. Ann. sub. 2s. 6d.—James Sloan, Hon. Sec.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting held beadquarters, Village Schoolroom, Alexandria, March 7th, Mr. A. Lees, Hon. Vice-President, in chair. Lord Inverclyde and Peter Denny Esq., had it was announced, given handsome donations to the funds.. The Chairman introduced the lecturer, and in doing so said that these meetings the committee purposed should be held here on the first Tuesday of each month, at 8 p.m., when papers would be read by authorities on different subjects. The club was but in its infancy, and the committee would be pleased if all interested in cage birds within the eight mile radius would join. This club had no connection with any societies "gone before." On the first Tuesday of last month a very interesting meeting took place, when an exhibition of matched pairs was held. The discussion on the different pairs was carried on by the President, Secretary, and members, and was of a very interesting and instructive nature. The subject for the evening was "British Birds (Hardbills) and their Management," and he had pleasure in asking Mr. Hannah to oblige.

Mr. Hannah, who was received with applause, said: My remarks will take the form of a chat about the management of the most familiar of the hardbilled British birds. British birds are finding increased favour amongst bird breeders, and each year sees a substantial increase in the ranks of British bird fanciers. No doubt this is in a great measure due to the immeuse popularity of Mules and Hybrids and their continued success on the show bench to-day, which has certainly increased the value of British birds, more particularly in the case of Greenfinches and Bullfinch hens, those varieties being much dearer to buy, and good specimens more difficult to get than formerly. When deciding to go in for the keeping of British birds, the first thing to be considered is the choice of a place in which to keep birds.

The lecturerer advised strict attention to ventilation, and gave the design, size of cage, and exhibition points of each specics, dealing also with suitable seeds (which he exhibited) and the proportions to give, urging all to give as much natural feeding as possible. He finished up with colour feeding and the suitable varieties for said purpose. After numerous questions, to which Mr. Hannah had no difficulty in giving satisfactory replies, a hearty vote thanks was accorded him. Five new members were admitted, viz., Messrs. W. Taylor, P. Harkins, A. Adams, J. Laig, W. Harrison. At next meeting we are to have a lecture on breeding Canarics for exhibition.—A. H. McLean, Hon. Sec.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, February 25, Mr. J. Muir, presiding. Judges for annual show considered; they will be finally settled on at next meeting, March 25. The members passed a unanimous vote of thanks to Mr. W. Francis Sutton for the very able services rendered the association.—W. Clubb, Sec.

ASHINGTON AND HIRST C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 11th, Mr. Rowley's, Stationrd., Mr. J. Miles presiding over a good attendance. Classification came in for discussion, when we decided to have 27 classes at annual show, Nov. 11th. We also elected two judges this year, so as to get the show opened earlier. We elected Mr. T. Dixon (Bedlington Station), whom we had last year, and Mr. H. Seely (Choppington), one for the even numbers and the other the odd numbers. Three new members were proposed and accepted, viz., Messrs J. Willis, G. Trefry, and Furness. Next meeting April 22, when we will be pleased to hear of any fanciers wishing to join.—F. Barron, Secretary.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

Members and friends met at the New Mechanics, East Street, March 10th, when a Smoker was arranged and a supper served in excellent style by Mr. J. Martin. Mr. W. L. Smith (vice-chairman) took the chair, and expressed himself in a manner calculated to cultivate a good feeling among the company. He wished success to the Shields C.B.S. The ball was set rolling by a song from Mr. Dains, who was encored, and had to oblige. Mr. Guttery followed with a comic song. Followiug this came the star turn—a presentatiou to our chairman, Mr. W. Thompson, for his continuous attention to his office. It took the form of a silver-mounted ebony walking stick, and framed photograph of a group of the members. Alderman J. Cullen made the presentation, and said he was very proud to have the honour. He was proud to be among men who looked after their feathered pets. Mr. Thompson feeliugly replied. He was, he said, taken by surprise, as he did not know what the meeting was for. Other songs were given by Messrs. Mason, Addison, and Reporter. A selection on the gramophone was given by Mr. J. Crass. Recitations were given hy Mr. W. Howden. Mr. Pino was pianist. A pleasant evening was spent by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King."—Jas. Barrass, Secretary.

DUNFERMLINE & W. OF FIFE O.S

Annual Social Gathering, held recently. The supper was purveyed in first-class style by Mr. Inglis. The Right Hon. Lord Bruce occupied the chair, supported by Dr. J. Ross (chairman of the Carnegie Dunfermline Trust, the trust being generous benefactors of the society), also Mr. T. Harrower (vice-president, accompanied hy Mr. A. Hynd, secretary, Mr. W. Black (Charlestown), secretary for the Horticultural Society there. After a few remarks hy the chairman, a very enjoyable programme was at the disposal of the company. The principal item was that of a presentation to Mr. P. Dudgeon, who so kindly took over the secretaryship when the society was in a fix owing to the very sudden death of the late Mr. J. Templeman. His Lordship, in making the presentation, said he hoped that Mr. Dudgeon's health and happiness would be long as the barometer (this was the article he received), that now stood set fair. Mr. Dudgeon suitably acknowledged the gift. The following gentlemen kindly contributed to the programme: Lord Bruce, Messrs. W. Brown, R. Campbell, A. Thomson, E. Pride, J. Boyle, J. Young, A. Kilpatrick, J. Rankine, W. Beveridge, and W. Black (Charlestown). Mr. T. Walters acted as elocutionist. Gramophone selections were rendered hy Mr. A. Burt and Mr. Dickinson acted as accompanist. The following toasts were proposed: "The King," hy Lord Bruce; "Impeeiug Forces," by Mr. W. Black; "Carnegie Dunfermline Trustees," by Mr. T. Harrower; "Patrons of the Society," by Mr. J. Young; "The Society," by Mr. P. Dudgeon; "The Chairman," by Mr. J. Hunter; "The Accompanist," by Lord Bruce. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne," brought a very happy gathering to a close.—John Buchanan.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held heaquarters, Sydenham Hotel, Small Heath, March 8th, all members being present with the exception of our Chairman (Mr. Willmott) who, being at Nortbampton, was unable to get there in time; but he sent a very pleasing letter of apology. Chair occupied by Mr. J. Hughes. Three new names for membership submitted. Mr. Russell was introduced. Previous to this a nice muster of birds had been placed for judging, Yorkshires being very prominent; several nice Borders and British birds also were shown. These Mr. Russell had carefully gone through while the members transacted the business. The birds were now placed in order of merit down the centre tables, and Mr. Russell, taking his position at the head of affairs, received a most hearty reception. He then proceeded to take the birds, holding the pair, or single bird, up for inspection, drawing attention to their faults. He told how he had tried the Lancashire Plainhead as an ideal hen for size, himself breeding some splendid type and winners this way. Another question was the type of hen bird to obtain for this result. Questions were soon being put forth by all. The birds done with, all settled down to debate on the feeding of the old birds and the young, their serious complaints, and how to avoid them; the best way to make or give egg food. Here Mr. Russell again excelled in sound wisdom and judgment. Mr. R. has bred and exhibited some of the finest Crests that ever graced a show bench, viz., "The Queen of Crests" (which, I believe, was 1st no less than five times at the Crystal Palace), and he has sold birds for considerable money. His advice in the feeding of the young was carefully noted. He strongly advocated the removal of the cock bird in every case. It is the feeding, he said, that the young get in the feeding, that produce size and quality. Of first 14 days course, if the birds were typical, the use of oatmeal in the way suggested would be a great factor in the producing of such birds. Also, when the young were removed from the old bird, don't be hasty in the giving of seeds in any form. His custard and bread recipe, in his case, not once, but many times, had proved its great value to rear the young when away from the parents. In one case he sold a young bird, when all hope seemed gone of his ever rearing it, for £15. The correct way to make the milk sop we so often hear of opened the eyes of many of the listeners; and this was gone well into. And we should not forget the chief item, viz., linseed, and its wonderful power when old were lacking in feeding perbaps the second or third nest of young. A hearty vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. Russell by Mr. J. H. de Mailett, seconded by Mr. Wright. It had been a red-letter night, and the information and instruction could not have been gathered in a more pleasing way. We welcome intending members at next meeting, April 8th.—J. Sheppard.

SOUTHEND & S. COUNTIES O.S.

General monthly meeting held beadquarters, Mar. 8th, when Mr. A. E. Pattrick read an instructive paper on "Breeding Yorkshire Canaries," which was much appreciated. We are looking forward to the introduction of several new members. By-the-way, why are some of the old faces so long missing?—Wm. E. Lockwood, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa House, 7th Mar., Mr. Bracegirdle in chair. Secretary stated the pair show held 15th Feb., at Boot Inn, had been a very great success, birds (both Yorkshires and Norwich) being well shown and in good numbers. The judges, Messrs. Whitlow and Wright, gave every satisfaction, and there was a capital attendance of fanciers and friends. Prize money was then paid to winners. A vote of thanks to the judges for their services was passed. Mr. T. Wright has kindly given a cash special for nest feather show. A communication from the Cage Bird Union was read, and evoked some discussion.—J. Swindley, Hon. Sec.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

Fourth annual meeting held Church House, March 6th, Mr. E. A. Walker presiding. The usual business over, the treasurer reported a satisfactory balance, notwithstanding a slight decrease in gate money at annual show. Following office-bearers elected:—President, The Hon. Arthur Stanley, M.P.; vice-president and hon. solicitor, W. Kennedy, Esq.; chairman, Mr. E. A. Walker; Mr. T. Johnson, jun., was elected to the vice-chair in place of his brother; committee, all the members; hon. auditors, Messrs. R. Hunter and G. J. Johnson; hon. treas., Mr. W. Moss; and hon. sec., Mr. T. H. Tiffen. Rules were revised, and alterations accepted. A number of new members were admitted. Having left licensed premises for more suitable quarters, it is very gratifying to learn that a strong list of patrons has been secured, which is a good omen for our future. The vice-president and hon. solicitor having recently gone over to the "States of Matrimony," the members marked the occasion by presenting him with a handsome polished oak smoker's cabinet. Mr. Kennedy having thanked the members for their good wishes and beautiful present, said he would be pleased to render any assistance he could to further the interests of the society. July 8th was fixed for nest feather show, and 25th for annual show. A suggestion to include a few local pigeon classes at the latter show was favourably commented upon. Mr. C. Houlton (St. Helens) was nominated cage bird judge, and since the meeting that gentleman has been engaged for both shows. Votes of thanks terminated meeting.—T. H. Tiffen, Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH B. & M.C.

Adjourned annual general meeting for the election of officers for year held headquarters, "Feathers" Hotel, Great Chapel Street, Westminster, Feb. 22nd. Present: Messrs. J. Robson, A. Silver, J. Dewhurst, G. Thurling, T. R. Trower, W. A. Loft, H. J. Full-james, A. J. Marley, A. C. Askew, W. Page, W. A. Shepherd, W. H. Vale, and J. P. Carr. Committee elected following officers for year: Chairman, Mr. J. Robson; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Dewhurst; hon. solicitor, P. J. Nicholls, Esq.; hon. treasurer, Mr. T. R. Trower; hon. auditors, Mr. C. Cooper and Mr. A. Silver; joint hon. secretaries, Mr. A. Plumbridge and Mr. J. P. Carr. Mr. Lott was asked to take office as vice-chairman, but declined. Two new members of the committee, Messrs. W. A. Shepherd and W. Page, were accorded a hearty welcome. Committee meeting followed, Mr. J. Robson in the chair. Letters read from Messrs. Longden, Hurst, and Hopwood, which secretaries were instructed to answer. Carried, that Hybrid Cup be sent to Mr. Longden under conditions of Rule 13. Also unanimously carried, that a diploma be sent winners of club cups, a suitable design to be discussed at next meeting. Mr. J. W. Ford (Swansea) and Mr. A. Morris (Ilford) were elected members. Mr. Full-james presented to the club an entire new classification of all birds on the club's list. A portion of this new classification was gone through by the committee, but being a late hour the remainder was postponed until next meeting. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded meeting.—Plumbridge and Carr, Secs.

GRAVESEND AND DIST. F.S.

Annual general meeting held at Bat and Ball Hotel, Mr. Gates (chairman) presiding, supported by Messrs. Boorman, A. H. Terry, R. Terry, Lambert, Deare, Ibbotson, T. Smith, Lowman, Houlton, Johnson, Jewiss, Gardner, Fox, etc. Report of past season's work on the whole was very satisfactory, as the Society is now in a more flourishing condition. New members have been added, and the meetings of late have been of more interest. It is hoped this year will be a record one. After business a smoking concert was held in the large hall adjoining the hotel, Councillor Goldsmith taking the chair. A very enjoyable programme was gone through, songs being contributed by Messrs. Mitchell, Fox, R. Terry, Coates, Franks, Ibbottson, Gardner, Deare, etc. Councillor Goldsmith said it gave him great pleasure to be present, as it reminded him so much of the very enjoyable meetings he had attended when he was an active member. He wished they could get more support from the outside public as such societies as theirs run purely upon lines of good fellowship, and for no individual profit, were institutions that should have every encouragement. He thought every man who made a hobby of and had a love for dumb animals should have every encouragement. He trusted the coming year would prove a better and more satisfactory one in every way; they were certainly deserving of it. At the conclusion of his remarks Councillor Goldsmith presented a case of pipes to the Secretary (Mr. E. R. Fox), which had been subscribed for by the members. In responding, Mr. Fox said this presentation came to him as a great surprise, and was one that he would greatly treasure. He had endeavoured to do all that lay in his power to make the Society more and more successful, and he was pleased to say they looked like being so this year; but this had not been brought about by his efforts alone, but by the way in which all the members had worked together. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Councillor Goldsmith. A very enjoyable evening then came to a close.

SHERIFFHILL AND DIST. F.S.

A meeting will he held on March 18th in the St. John's Parish Hall, Sheriffhill, to arrange when half-yearly show shall be, aleo to elect judges. Any bird fanciers within a five mile radius of tbe above hall should come up to our meeting on Saturday night, or write to Messrs. Hunter and Stockton, the secs., Kents Terrace, Sheriffhill, near Gateshead, who will be pleased to hear from any fancier, as we want some birdie men among us.—Hunter and Stockton.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Annual meeting, held March 11th, Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, Mr. Albert Hirst, in the chair. Business transacted: Auditors' report and balance sheet adopted, with a recommendation to committee to deal with defaulters re subscriptions; Mr. Percy Illingworth, M.P., again elected president, along with Messrs. Haigh, J. W. Ramsden, F. Carc, and Comyns Lewer, as vice-president; Mr. Albert Hirst elected chairman; Mr. O. Mitchell secretary and treasurer; Messrs. Simonette and Wilcock, auditors. Vote of thanks to all retiring officers. New members accepted: Messrs. C. and C. T. Parkes (W. Wakefield). Resolved, that application he made to combination of specialist clubs to be admitted, in order to uphold cach otber's suspensions. Grant to secretary of £1 1s. for services rendered during past year. In order to clear deficit or balance the following gentlemen kindly contributed and the sum of £1 5s. 6d. was collected in quick time. Messrs. S. Dean, Jones (Bradford), Sykes (Huddersfield), Ridley, Calam and Pepper (Hull), Hirst (Accrington), McMillan (Leeds), Bagnall (Rotherham), Brunskill (Darlington), Spencer (Doncaster), Halliday (Shipley), Holmes (Keighley). A hearty vote of thanks was passed to contributors, which brought a most successful meeting to a close.—O. Mitchell, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B A.

Annual general meeting, held March 7th, in Duncan's, 71, London Street. In the unavoidable absence of the President, the chair was occupied by Mr. W. Hutchison (vice-president). Secretary's report and balance sheet, showing, unfortunately, a loss of £21 9s. 7½d. on the season, was unanimously adopted as correct. A discussion was opened, on the best means of clearing this deficit; it was eventually decided that we get up a subscription sale on the Art Union principle, tickets one penny each, or book of seven tickets 6d., which will give the purchaser admission to a show of Canaries and British Birds, to be held April 25th, in Mr. A. Muir's rooms, Saltmarket, Glasgow. Each ticket will participate in the free draw. The prizes will be "Seven Season Tickets," for the great exhibition, to be held in Glasgow, from May to November, 1911. Correspondence was read from various exhibitors who had kindly contributed the sum of £2 14s. towards clearing this deficit, and the meeting unanimously tendered their thanks to these gentlemen. Moved by Mr. E. Barron, seconded by Mr. J. Brown, that we adjourn meeting until April 18th for election of office bearers, date of show, classification, etc. All duplicates and unsold tickets for subscription sale must be forwarded to me or handed in by date of this meeting. Any fancier wishing books of tickets for sale on behalf of the club, can have same by sending me a postcard.—Fred Bowman, Sec., 5, Parkview, Tollcross, Glasgow.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Meeting held Headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, Mar. 7th, Mr. T. Down presiding. Meeting took form of a table show (for novices only) of matched pairs of Canaries for breeding, together with a lecture on the Yorkshire Canary by Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford). This meeting was by far the largest and most enthusiastic held in Sheffield for some years. Although the lecture was on the Yorkshire Canary, every branch of the fancy was represented. The lecture was a most enjoyable and instructive one. Friend Mundell was never in better form, his little tit bits amusing his audience greatly. Several old fanciers admitted they had learnt a wrinkle or two; so what is the extent of knowledge gained by the novice? Personally, I think, a very great deal, which I trust the breeding results will show. The lecturer gave his own practical experience; he said some fanciers differed from him, but his results had always given him every satisfaction, and for that reason he followed his suggestions to the letter. Of course, he did not say he was right and others wrong, but if those present followed his ideas they would not go far wrong. A number of questions were put in connection with pairing, breeding, etc., all of which were ably answered. We had another grand lot of recruits to add to our list of members—about 15 in all. A vote of thanks to the lecturer and chairman brought one of the most successful meetings of the Fancy held in Sheffield to a close. Next meeting April 4th, table show of British, 2 classes. Judge, Mr. E. F. Smith (Sheffield). — J. A. T. Woodall. Press Correspondent.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held March 7th, Mr. J. Taylor (president) in chair. The feature was the members' pair class, over which Mr. T. Fortnam officiated. He also gave his reason for the various placings, as well as giving the members the benefit of his experience in the Fancy. Result of competition: 1, Myers and Lightowler; 2, W. North; 3, G. Hudson; 4, Gelder; res, W. Gornall; vhc, Gelder; reserve vhc, Myers and Lightowler; hc, Wilman; c, Lowe. Mr. Fortnam then gave a short criticism of each pair, and also some good advice. He advised all to keep size in the cock bird, and always have the hen as fine in quality as possible. He did not mind a little extra feather on the cock's side, but always paired such birds to fine quality hens, of nice medium size. The lecturer then asked members to take a good look at the various pairs, and ask any questions, when he would be only too pleased to do his best in answering them. Needless to say, this was soon taken advantage of. The society is also indebted to Mr. Fortnam for the "Special" to be given at our F.F. Show, July 22nd. Mr. C. Horsley proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer; this was seconded by Mr. H Taylor, and carried unanimously. Arrangements were made for social evening, March 28th, to which all fanciers are heartily invited. A good number of prizes have already been promised, and as the competitions for these do not start until June 10th, any fancier desirous of joining would do well to give his name in to any of our members. In addition to the usual list of specials a medal, value 10s. 6d. will be given, for 1st, a special of 5s. for 2nd, and a special of 2s. 6d. for 3rd most points, with commended birds. Winners of other prizes do not compete for these; therefore, those who do not happen to get in the money at various shows will still stand a good chance of securing one of these latter prizes. The subscription is 3s. per year; entry free on payment of 1s., which amount is reckoned as part subscription. Intending members, don't forget March 28th, 8 p.m., smoker and social evening, tobacco free to every fancier attending.—F. Gelder (Sec.).

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Result of Annual Ballot.

Halliday 134 (elected), O. Mitchell 118, F. Armstrong 84, A. Brown 49, G. W. Holroyd 29; secretary, (unopposed) H. Hill, 15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Little Horton, Bradford; auditors, R. Halliday, 176 (elected), F. Armstrong 152 (elected), R. Garnett 103, O. Mitchell 87, G. W. Holroyd 51, A. Price 27. Revision of rules: Proposed alterations: Rule 7, that no delegates' travelling expenses be paid, 139 for, 154 against. Rule 12 (1) No society shall appoint one of its own members as assistant judge at their own Union open show, 209 for, 99 against; (2) that those societies not holding an open show, and who do not pay a proportion of judges' fees, shall neither nominate, nor vote for Union judges; 168 for, 113 against; (3) that the words "and must publish all assistant judges' names in schedule, along with the classes they will judge," be deleted; 154 for, 117 against. Rule 16, that any society in the Union not holding an open winter show, shall fall to the last show the following year, or by paying their proportion of judges' fees, they shall keep the same date; 241 for, 44 against. Rule 24 (1) That no catalogues of shows be sent to any secretary of Union societies, except one with all awards, etc., marked, to the Union secretary; 174 for, 93 against; (2) that catalogues, not marked, be sent to the secretary of each society, and one with all awards, etc., marked, be sent to the Union secretary, etc.; 89 for, 140 against. Rule 40, that this rule be deleted; 174 for, 76 against. Rule 42 (1) That the novice class limit be £7 7s.; 90 for, 184 against; (2) that there shall be no price limit on the novice classes; 66 for, 195 against. Rule 45: That each society holding an open show, may print its schedule in the Yorkshire Union hand-book; 242 for, 45 against. Rule 46: That this rule be deleted; 90 for, 155 against. Rule 48 (1): That no regular reporter shall judge a Union show; 110 for, 83 against; (2) that this rule be deleted: 148 for, 64 against. Rule 51: That this rule be deleted; 108 for, 158 against. Rule 52 (1): That this rule shall be put into force, and the last six societies holding open shows shall come forward and take the six first feather shows; 96 for, 114 against; (2) that this rule be deleted; 152 for, 58 against. Rule 53: That the annual ballot shall be taken the last fortnight in February, and all rules shall come into force directly after ballot papers have been scrutinised; 194 for, 74 against. That the following be added after the words "no second or further claims to be made after 5 o'clock ou last day of show." But should there be two or more claimants in the claims office on the point of 5 o'clock, they shall all bave a claim. The surplus above catalogue price, etc.—show rule No. 10; 233 for, 47 against. Proposed new rules: 1. That the names of each society holding an open show, shall be separately placed in sealed envelopes and placed in a hat. Ten of these envelopes shall be withdrawn (the remainder to be destroyed), and the ten shall be kept sealed until the end of the show season. The points thus gained at tbese ten shows only shall be counted towards the novice gold medals, and such other Union trophies, as come into existence from this date forward shall be competed for under similar conditions; 169 for, 117 against. 2. That the champion and novice classes be judged first alternately at each open Union show throughout the season; 270 for, 33 against. 3. That no affiliated society shall hold a members' show during the hours an open show is in progress; 151 for, 138 against. 4. That no affiliated society shall hold a members' show during the hours an open show is in progress. Any society violating this rule to be fined £1 1s.; 140 for, 134 against. 5. That the annual ballot shall be taken as follows: A copy of the ballot paper shall be sent to the secretary of each affiliated society, and he shall bring it before the members of his own society and the members present shall vote upon the various subjects, and then return it to the proper quarter; 145 for, 138 against. 6. That each affiliated society shall pay their equal share of the judges' fees; 214 for, 80 against. 7. That the Yorkshire Union shall make a uniform rate of membership fees for all affiliated societies; 135 for, 149 against. 8. That there be a uniform entry fee and subscription adopted by all societies within a radius of five miles of Bradford Town Hall, and that any person paying less than the uniform rate shall not be entitled to the benefit of the Union. This rule to become operative on January 1st, 1912; 112 for, 143 against. Out of 1,143 ballot papers sent out, only 316 were returned, or an average of 31.66 per 100 members. This is one of the worst returns on record, and should be seriously considered on account of the expense and unnecessary labour attached to same. Far better results would be obtained, in my opinion, if only the officials were balloted for, and all alterations or proposed revision of rules should be left entirely in the hands of the Council of the Union. Each society would furnish its delegates with their proposed alterations, and in turn he could bring the same before the Council, and allow them to vote for or against its adoption. This would be far preferable to allowing propositions to be placed on the ballot papers which, if carried, are a menace to the prosperity and welfare of the Union. The Union will have to look to its laurels and set to in a businesslike manner to remove the existing evils attached to the annual ballot. Will all secretaries of Union societies who have not already done so, send in at once the railway petitions in order that they may be returned to the London Federation of C.B.S.—H. Hill, Sec.

LOANHEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Mason's Arms, March 11th, when Mr A. Jardine presided over a good attendance. Two new members were admitted. Election of judges: A number of well-known fanciers were chosen; their names will appear after secretary has come to terms with them. The Chairman then introduced Mr. Mackie (Gorgie). He felt sure the members would give him a good hearing. Mr. Mackie then claimed the attention of every one present for nearly an hour, and at the close answered a few questions to the satisfaction of the meeting, after which the President thanked Mr. Mackie for his very instructive paper. A very hearty vote of thanks was proposed and heartily responded to. Mr. Mackie acknowledged the vote, and a very pleasant hour was afterwards spent in song and story.—Walter B. Smart, Sec.

Birds' Names.

The Marsh Tit does not live on marshes, nor does the Garden Warbler frequent gardens any more than some other Warblers. But these names were evidently given simply to distinguish them from others, although they are very misleading, particularly to young bird-lovers.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

The Extinct Auk.

There are about seventy known mounted specimens of the now extinct Great Auk, most of which are in public museums. The last one sold fetched about four hundred pounds.

First Brood Feeding the Second.

A pair of Swallows built a nest on the beam of a cart shed and reared a fine brood; they then laid again, and when the young were hatched, instead of the two parents feeding the young, there were at times as many as four birds bringing food for them, and two of these were apparently young ones from the first brood.

Twitterings.

I received my copies of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL safely. They are really a remarkable sixpennyworth.—W. Clubb (Falkirk).

We regret to hear that Mountain Ash show, so far as the cage bird section is concerned, has been cancelled.

Our 48th annual show is to be held on November 4th, writes Mr. Geo. Mitchell, secretary of the Brechin C.B.S.

Will secretaries please note my new address, writes Mr. John Goodfellow; it is 12, Violet Terrace, Merchiston, Edinburgh.

I have received the CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL; it is a fine sixpennyworth of useful information.—J. Sheppard (Birmingham).

The Penzance show is, we hear, fixed for November 16th, when Mr. W. G. Poole (Stratford-on-Avon) will judge the cage bird section.

The address in my advertisement in your last issue, writes Mr. H. Mills, should have read: Elsinore, Westwood Avenue, Timperley, Cheshire.

Mr. Thos. Smith, the secretary of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby, asks us to call attention to his new address—10, Lochside St., Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

All meetings and members' shows of the Great Horton O.S. will be held on the fourth Saturday in the month this season, writes Mr. J. Holroyd, the secretary.

I have been elected secretary to the Littleborough C.B.S., and all future communications should be sent to me, writes Mr. J. R. Mayers, 7, New Road, Littleborough.

Mr. J. H. Roe (Birmingham) has been engaged to judge the Oxford and District C.B.S. open show, to be held on October 26th, writes Mr. A. F. Fifield, the hon. secretary.

The Sligo C.B.S have fixed November 1st and 2nd as the dates of their annual show, writes Mr. C. J. Mulligan, the secretary. Will secretaries please note, to prevent clashing?

Mr. William Griffiths, a noted breeder of Crests, of Springburn, Glasgow, has, writes Mr. Alex. McNicol (Glasgow), just returned from Canada, after a twelve months' absence.

I have been appointed secretary of the Hucknall Torkard C.B.S., and all communications should in future be sent to me, writes Mr. J. Nicholls, 43, Yorke Street, Hucknall Torkard, Notts.

I am compelled to give up the Fancy, writes Mr. R. H. Jones (Swansea), entirely owing to family reasons, so am obliged to advertise my Border Fancies and my cages, etc., the latter all my own make.

Kindly say that it is impossible for me to take on judging, writes Mr. W. B. Smart (Loanhead, N.B.), Saturday being the worst day in the week with a baker. I have been asked twice within a week, and a notice of this kind might prevent it.

I have again been elected secretary of the Leadgate and District C.B.S., writes Mr. J. A. Turnbull, No. 1, Percy Terrace, Consett. Mr. Jas. Stanger (Pelton Fell) has, I may say, consented to judge our open Linnet show on April 1st.

I have had CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1911, and must say I have enjoyed reading the contents of it. It is a well-got-up little book, and contains information that could not be got elsewhere for the price.—J. Maxwell, jun. (Queensferry, N.B.).

We have appointed all our judges for the annual show, to be held on December 16th, writes Mr. W. McLaren, the secretary of Broxburn and Dist. C.B.S. They are Messrs. John McLennan, G. Scaife, J. Thomson, J. Mason, and J. Strachan.

I hasten to extend to you my sincere thanks for the photograph of my birdroom reproduced in "Our Canaries," Part 10, writes Mr. F. Boxall (Chiswick). The picture is really perfection, and reflects great credit on your valuable monthly production.

Will British and foreign bird fanciers please note that Mr. J. Dewhurst has kindly consented to judge these classes at our open show on November 8th and 9th? writes Mr. W. C. Lockwood, hon. secretary of the Southend and Southern Counties O.S.

The Royal Tunbridge Wells and District F.A. are holding a members' show on March 22nd in the Friendly Societies' Hall, Camden Road, where it is hoped there will be a large attendance of the general public. The show opens at 6.30 p.m. There will be eight classes of cage birds.

The Bolton and Dist. O.S., writes Mr. P. Brierley, the secretary, have fixed June 17th and July 22nd for their F.F. shows, with Messrs. Brunskill and A. Hirst as judges. Also October 13th and 14th for the annual open show. Will secretaries please note to avoid clashing?

As a token of respect and an expression of our good wishes, the hat was passed round at our meeting held on March 7th, writes Mr. W. Elliott, hon. secretary of the Burton-on-Trent C.B.S., and a suitable present will be made to Mr. Emery, who is leaving England for Australia.

I am sorry to have to part with my stock (which I am advertising for sale in your columns this week), writes Mr. Arthur Noble (Newcastle-on-Tyne), owing to my going to Australia. I expected to "go strong" next season on the show bench, but my "bread and butter" takes me across the seas.

I have been elected secretary of the Malton Norton and Dist. F.S. in place of Mr. G. M. Horsley, who has resigned, writes Mr. James Wilson, 8, Wold Street, Norton, Malton, Yorks. We have fixed November 9th for our annual show, and Mr. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford) will judge the cage birds.

The Glasgow West End Cage Bird Club's membership card and syllabus for the 1911 season is a neat little four-page leaflet. Shows, lectures, exhibitions, etc., figure largely in the programme, and members anticipate having a good time of it. The secretary is Mr. W. Proudfoot, 145, Henderson Street, Glasgow.

Mr. B. C. Smith, show manager to the East Ham C.B.S., writes to say that the following gentlemen have been engaged to judge their shows this year:—First Feather (June 15th), Mr. J. Freer; Young Stock (July 29th), Mr. J. Robson; Annual (November 4th), Mr. H. Norman (who, by the way, is a vice-president of this new society). The membership still continues to increase.

Have received so many replies to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS that it is quite impossible for me to answer all of them; and they still keep pouring in by every post.—W. Dawson (Carnforth).

Allow me a word of praise for your advertising columns. From a 1s. advt. in "CAGE BIRDS" Issue for Feb. 18th, I sold 47 birds, sending north, south, east, and west.—G. S. Ellwood (Blaydon-on-Tyne).

Please thank all who replied to my small advt. in "CAGE BIRDS." I had over 30 letters and cards for my Roller hens—from all parts, including Scotland and Wales. I am unable to answer them all. H. Priest (Henley-on-Thames).

Miss McPherson (Pencaeran, Neath) thanks the many correspondents who answered her advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS," and wishes to state that there were too many for her to reply to individually. She cannot speak too highly of the excellency of "CAGE BIRDS" advertisement columns.

Kindly thank all who answered my advert in "CAGE BIRDS" of Feb. 25, re two Norwich hens. I have had so many letters and p.c.'s that I could not possibly answer them all. But I have satisfactorily made a deal. I think "CAGE BIRDS" a splendid paper to advertise in.—Mr. Walmann (Cambridge)

We have secured the following gentlemen to act as judges at our open show on October 14th, writes Mr. Wm. Whiteford, secretary of the Lochgelly C.B.S.:—For Scotch Fancies, Mr. Wm. Thornton (Edinburgh); for Yorkshires, Mr. J. Ford (Kelty); for Borders, Mr. G. Hislop (Stirling); for Crests and Crest-breds, Mr. G. F. Adamson (Kilmarnock); for Plainheads, Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch); and for British, Mules and foreign, Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh).

For our open show on November 4th, writes Mr. J. W. Lowes, secretary of the Stockton-on-Tees and Dis. C.B.S., we have booked five judges, so as to give exhibitors a good run for their money. We have elected Mr. Halliday (Bradford) for Yorkshires, Mr. S. Dixon (Bedlington Station) for Norwich and Crests, Mr. H. Tams (Longton) for open British and Foreign, Mr. T. Hill (Thornaby-on-Tees) for members' Canaries, and Mr. F. Marwood (Thornaby-on-Tees) for members' British.

Messrs. J. Alexander Dobbie and Co., the well-known proprietors of the Vigorine Grit and the "Lavesine" feather cleaner, etc., of Waverley Works, Leith, N.B., are now giving the Fancy the benefit of their wide and long experience in the shape of the provision of bird seeds (canary, rape, hemp, teazle, etc.) of the finest quality; also cuttlefish bone, biscuit meals, milk powder, grains, etc. The prices are moderate, and readers contemplating dealing with this firm may rely upon getting value for their money and prompt attention to their orders.

Hawfinch Pushing Northwards.

It is reported that the Hawfinch has considerably extended its range northwards during the last few years, and that in some of the northern counties it is included among the birds that it is desirable to protect.

Ruthless Nature.

According to advices from the Caucasus (says the "Pall Mall Gazette") millions of singing birds, which used every winter to find a warm retreat on the southern slopes of the forest-clad mountains of the Caucasus, have suddenly been surprised by the intense cold and severe snowstorms whilst they were on their way from the north. The sides of the mighty mountains, the highest in Europe, and the shores of the Black Sea, are now strewn with small corpses of singing birds, especially Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Robin Redbreasts, Flycatchers, and other birds which in the summer mostly visit these shores.

A meeting of the new Stevenston and Dis. O.S. writes Mr. J. Lamb, the Secretary, will be held on March 21, at the Masonic Hall, at eight o'clock.

As unfortunately our negative of the group of members has proved unsuccessful, will all the members of the Ashton-under-Lyne and Dis, O.S. please turn up at "Lees Clock," Stamford Street, on Sunday, March 19th, at 10.30 a.m., writes Mr. J. R. Colville, the Secretary. Members know what is wanted, so please come.

In the advertisement last week of "Releivo" (the noted remedy for egg-binding), a regrettable printer's error occurred. It was stated that "Releivo" absolutely cures the worst cases in a few minutes "with steaming"; this should have been "without steaming"—an important difference!

A photograph of that well-known Staffordshire fancier and exhibitor, Mr. J. Pitchford (Stoke-on-Trent), of Messrs. Pitchford and Stocker, and secretary of the local cage-bird association, appeared in a recent issue of the "Staffordshire Sentinel," and accompanying it was an excellent account of Mr. Pitchford's career in the hobby, which has been a long, honourable, and successful one.

A very successful career on the show bench has been the lot of the fine clear yellow Norwich Plainhead belonging to Mr. C. H. Goodman, of Kempston, near Bedford, which was pourtrayed on our front page a fortnight ago. In addition to securing 1st and two special prizes at the Crystal Palace, it has won 1st and two specials at Luton, besides numerous other prizes during 1910 and 1911. Mr. Goodman writes: "I thank your artist, Mr. Norman, for the able drawing of my bird."

We have received a copy of the rule book for 1911 of the City and Suburban A.C.B., and note that the popular and very much alive hon. secretary, Mr. V. Wynn (22 Park Lane, W.) has had the cover done in purple and gold in commemoration of the Coronation Year. The society has arranged a most attractive list of lectures, washing, staging, cage making and painting, demonstrations, cricket matches, country outings, discussions, shows, etc., so that a thoroughly interesting season is assured. The secretary will be glad to hear from and enrol fanciers desirous of becoming members.

New W.P.B.A. for Lanark.

A new Wild Bird Protection Act has just come into force (February 21st), for the County of Lanark. Among the species protected are now included the Bullfinch, Crossbill, Dipper, Hawfinch, Jay, Martin, Raven, Sand Martin, Siskin, Swallow and Swift. Among the birds protected all the year round figure the Chough, Goldfinch, Kingfisher, Greater Spotted Woodpecker, and the Barn, Long-eared, Short-eared and Tawny Owls.

An Elderly Ringdove.

I have a Ring Dove that on May 4th next will have been 22 years in my house. He came from Alexandria, Egypt, and was said to be, and probably was, two years old at the time, having been in possession of a previous owner, Mr. Bogen, a teacher of navigation, a long time before he came to me. He is proud to be called "Jim,' and he bows like a courtier. Mr. Ramsden, the Crystal Palace Show manager,, thinks him good for a few years longer. The Dove has got over his moultings very easily since twelve years ago, when we began feeding on mortar from a wall; and we want him to live long enough to worry a house.—Cor. Willson (Grimsby).

Why is a Blackbird Black?

If a naturalist were asked, Why is a Blackbird black? he would be puzzled for an answer, says a writer in the "Dundee Advertiser." I read a paper the other day by a learned Professor on the question, Why is the negro black? and he answered it confidently by asserting that black pigment is necessarily developed as a protection against excessive light. The pigment of the Blackbird's plumage, we may take it, serves no such purpose as this, for though the bird delights in shady places, such as shrubberies, neither it, nor any other British bird not an Owl, can be troubled by the very moderate intensity of the sun in these climes. Nor can black be said to be a protective colour. In almost any conceivable situation frequented by the Blackbird and its brown and spotted relative, the Song Thrush, the Blackbird will be found to be the more conspicuous bird of the two. Supporters of the theory of sexual selection would say that the Blackbird is black because it has been so decreed by feminine Blackbird taste. As the sexes are markedly different in their colouration, the Blackbird comes well within a theory which deals chiefly, though not exclusively, with forms in which marked differences distinguish the two. But the whole hypothesis has fallen somewhat into disrepute, and cannot be confidently invoked in these days as answer to the question raised. Indeed we can no more say with precision why a Blackbird is black than we can say why a Mavis is not black.

The Breeding of the Norwich Plainhead.

By A. W. CURTIS
(Fulham).

A lecture delivered on February 23rd before the members and friends of the Queen's Park (London) C.B.S.

No doubt you will think it a presumption on my part to attempt to add anything to what has already been said about the Norwich Plainhead, so many lectures have been delivered, and so many articles have appeared in our Fancy Press. My remarks are intended chiefly for the ears of the novices, and if any advice given does in any way assist these novices, I shall not regret having been persuaded to make an exhibition of myself.

To the novice just starting in the Fancy, I would advise that a visit be paid to a few rooms belonging to prominent breeders, this with the object of gaining knowledge, re the most suitable cages to buy or make. One fancier will tell you that such-and-such a sized cage is best for the Norwich, whilst another will be an advocate for a different size altogether. But a novice with an observant eye will, after inspecting various makes, very soon detect the disadvantages of some and the utility of others. Select a cage which, in your opinion, is the most comfortable for your birds during the breeding and moulting seasons; be sure to avoid a cage having perches fixed near the bottom and running at right angles to those above them. All perches should be removable, and all fronts removable, too, and those are best made of flat punched bars, for they are much easier to wash and keep clean than the old-fashioned wrapped wire fronts. Do not on any account select a cage having the narrow rail fixed immediately under the front edge of the cage top, for you cannot see what is going on behind it, and you will find it a very good harbour for dirt and red mite.

Points for the Drawboard.

Some fanciers are opposed to the drawboard, or sand-tray; I am not with them, as I am certainly in favour of it for sanitary reasons. For instance, sometimes when a hen is sitting she will have an attack of diarrhœa, when the cage bottom will become very much soiled; then it will be found much easier and safer to withdraw the sand tray, give it a good wash with disinfectant, and return it with fresh sawdust and sand to the cage than to wash out the bottom of the cage. I don't think many hens would stick to the nest during the latter operation.

Again, when we have a cage occupied by a sick bird, it will be found necessary to frequently cleanse the tray; therefore, I consider the sand tray a necessity.

In my opinion, many fanciers are too much inclined to economy with regard to space in breeding cages. This may be all very well if unavoidable, but I must here advise the novice where possible to use good roomy breeding cages. Those used by myself are what are known as two-compartment or double-breeders. The inside dimensions are as follows: Length, 2ft. 9in.; height, 1ft. 3in.; depth from back to front, 11in. I have two sliding divisions for the centre of each cage, one being a dark slide and the other one half wood and half wire. The latter slide I use when pairing up, keeping the wired part towards the top of the cage, so that the cock and hen can see, and also feed, one another through the wires.

When the young are shut off from the old ones, and not old enough to feed themselves, I reverse the slide, the wired portion being placed towards the bottom of the cage; this enables the old birds to feed their young from the bottom of the cage. With the slide in this position, the youngsters cannot annoy the hen by flying on the wires. The wood portion of the slide shields her when she may be sitting on another clutch of eggs.

The dark slide is for use when it is desired to convert breeders to form two separate compartments.

Double or Single?

Novices will find the cage referred to has many advantages over the single-breeder, as no nursery cages are required, and by allowing the young brood half the breeding cage until they are old enough to be transferred to the flight, you are giving them plenty of space for exercise, and this, in my opinion, plays a very important part in the birds' development and stamina. In a room with plenty of wall space I would advise one to make a flight cage twice the length of the breeder already referred to. This should be made convertible; or, in other words, should be so made that in the breeding season it can, with slide divisions, be divided off to form two double-breeders, or four single compartments. The inside dimensions of one I have in use are as follows: Length, 5ft. 8in.; height, 1ft. 6in.; depth from front to back, 11in. This will be found a very handy flight in which to fly your hens during the winter months.

There are one or two other very important items in connection with the breeding cage which should not be lost sight of, although, judging from what I have seen, even in the rooms of champions, one would think the matter not worthy of serious thought. I refer to the size of perch, also the proper position for the fixing of same. A perch should be made large enough for a hen to be able to steady herself upon; at the same time, it must not be so large that she cannot get a good grip of it. The perch used in my own cages, and one I have always found to answer the purpose very well, is from ½in. to ⅝in. in width by ⅝in to ¾in. in thickness. The top should be slightly rounded off, and the sharp arris just planed off the two bottom edges, so that you have a chamfer about ⅛in. across. The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club have adopted the use of such a perch for their show cages.

The position in which perches should be fixed will have to be governed by the width of the nest pans. The perches should be fixed 1in. clear of the pan on each side; that is to say, should the pan be 5in. in diameter, the perches should be fixed 7in. apart.

When fixing a perch, be sure to see it does not touch the back of the cage; you can allow the pin at the end to project far enough to hold it in position. At the same time, see that you have about ¼in. clearance between the end of the perch and the back of the cage; this will prevent a lodgment for red mite. A space of at least ¼in. should also be allowed between the under-side of perch and the top of the cross-bar at the front of the cage.

The nest pan should be hung so that the top edge of the same is about 1in. above the top of perches. This will be found a very convenient height for the old birds when standing on the perch to feed their young from it.

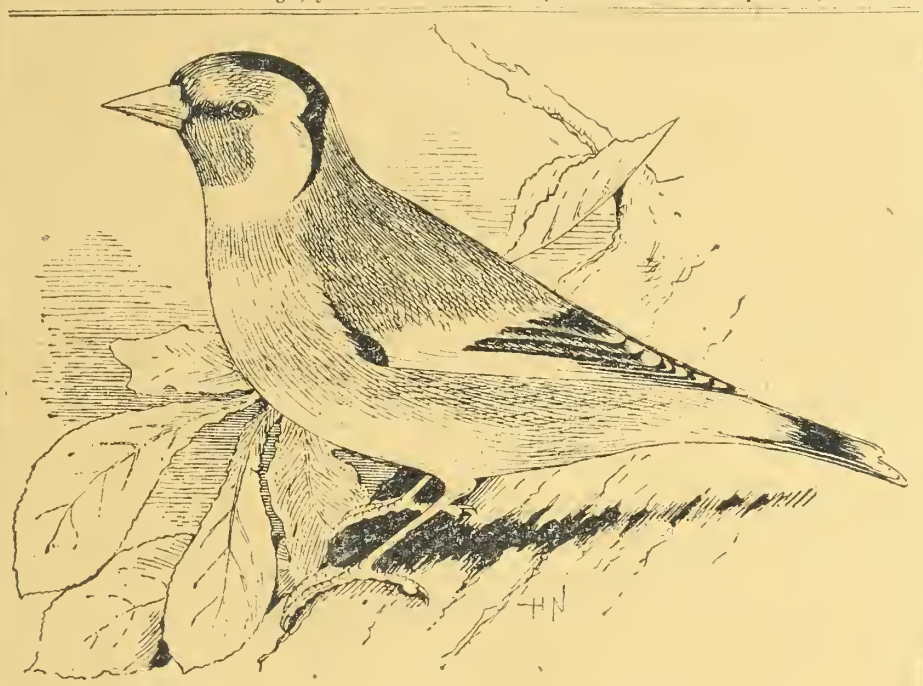
The wire bracket which carries your nest-pan should be hung to the back of the cage on a small brass cup hook. These brackets will be found much better and neater than either screws or nails.

Circumventing the Red Mite.

One other important item in connection with the breeding cage is that before commencing breeding operations it will be absolutely necessary to have it thoroughly cleansed and overhauled. See that every little hole and crevice is properly stopped, and the whole painted out with good lead and oils. If these suggestions are faithfully carried out, there will not be many incubators left for red mite. Where cages are hung on walls, do not allow the backs to touch the wall; to prevent this, at each of the two bottom corners of your cage turn in a screw to within ¼in. of the head. See that the nails from which your cage is hung are out far enough to allow your cage to hang ¼in. clear of the wall. The screws will keep the bottom away. This will allow ¼in. space for a current of air to pass through, and I have no hesitation in saying that you will not be troubled with many mites behind your cages.

It would take up too much time for me to go thoroughly into matters dealing with the construction of cages. I must, therefore, pass on to what may, or may not, be more interesting hints to the novice.

In my opinion, many novices with limited means start breeding birds before they are half ready. I know that when one is first attacked by the fever the consequences are seldom taken into consideration. It is something like love at first sight, and the happy home on the hire system. The raw recruit goes to the Palace Show with about £2 in his pocket, has a look round at the birds, and makes the acquaintance of a gentleman named Crow. Mr. Crow very soon introduces our friend the recruit to a friend of his named Robin. Mr. Crow has already learned that the recruit has come to the Palace with the idea of purchasing a pair of birds, and so takes him to a pair catalogued at 40s. Mr. Robin (the owner) adds his words of praise re the grand pair of pairs they are—guaranteed to breed winners, etc. The recruit is finally persuaded to claim them, lands home with his prize, to suddenly awaken to the fact that he is bankrupt and without even the price of a cage left. He borrows 5s. from a friend, buys what he considers an ideal breeding cage—one of those with a nice little bedroom in the top right-hand corner, and such a sweet little nursery directly under the bedroom. Then the trouble begins. Although blessed with thousands of red mite, not a single youngster comes to encourage his efforts, and the last news heard of him is he is retiring from the Fancy (see advertisement in the Fancy Press). "Owing to business pressure," he says, "all my stock and utensils are for sale." The "business pressure" may be for the repayment of the 5s. borrowed, and we can take it for granted that included in the advertiser's stock will be the red mite he has been so successful in breeding.



Now, we will take the thoughtful novice, also with limited means, and watch his mode of procedure. He makes it his first business to join a society as near home as possible, so as to avoid unnecessary expense in travelling. His next business will be to make himself sociable and agreeable to his fellow-members, to whom he might hint how delighted he would be to have the privilege of being allowed to look at their birds. This will give him the opportunity of acquiring that knowledge re cages, etc., already referred to. After some weeks of membership (during which time the novice has never missed a meeting, lecture, or members' show), we find him seriously thinking of getting his bird-room in order, ready to receive the birds that he is thinking of buying.

If at all handy with tools, he will proceed to lay out some of his pocket-money in purchasing boards, fronts, etc., and start to work making cages. This he will find a very interesting pastime, but not interesting enough to make him neglect his club meeting, or to make him lose sight of the fact that before his education or apprenticeship even as a novice is completed it will be necessary for him to visit a few open shows, and there take particular notice of the birds in the prize cards. The winners will give the novice an idea of the type of bird required, and will be a guide to him when selecting his breeding pairs.

We will take it for granted that by this time the thoughtful novice will have made his cages, and that all paint and enamel on same is thoroughly dry and hard, seed hoppers and drinkers properly fixed, perches in their proper positions, hooks in ready to receive nest-pan, brackets, a supply of seeds, nesting material, cuttlefish, etc., to hand.

We will also take it for granted that the thoughtful novice has already made up his mind as to the most likely place at which to obtain a pair or two of birds at a reasonable figure. If in doubt, he seeks the advice of an honourable fancier. The result will be that with ordinary luck the thoughtful novice will become a successful fancier and a credit to the fraternity. To become a successful breeder and exhibitor will take much longer than the novice imagines, and I am afraid that a large number are disappointed at the end of their first season if they have not succeeded in breeding a first prize winner. If some of them would only try to review their methods of the past season, they would very often find that they have been trying to travel at such a rate that they have run past themselves.

Pairing to Produce Exhibition Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries

By J. C. Barnes (Sheffield),

The Yorkshire.

Of late years, the Yorkshire has gained very considerable ground as regards popularity. At one time the Norwich Plainhead easily held pride of place as to the numbers bred and the entries at shows. Now it is practically a toss-up which of the two breeds takes precedence. In the North of England I can unhesitatingly say that the "long and slim" variety is easily top of the poll.

The Yorkshire is a grand and very attractive bird, and can rightly claim to be the "gentleman of Canarydom." The greatest essentials are position, quality and length. Colour counts very little; at the same time, don't overlook it, for remember that what decides superiority in the Norwich often decides the issue in the Yorkshires; so colour is of use to a certain extent.

In producing up-to-date specimens, always have as much length as you can possibly get on the cock's side, with long legs and as upright a position as possible; also good colour. The hens I like of extra good feather, standing straight up, showing a little breed (swagger), neat and narrow, and of medium length. The length comes from the male bird, and type and quality from the hen.

To Obtain Length.

To obtain length, the Lancashire Plainhead has played a very prominent part. I should not advise breeders on a small scale to be dabbling with the Lancashire, but those who go in extensively for the production of the bird should resort to it as occasion demands. There are at the present time any amount of suitable lengthy birds, "ready made," to be got at a reasonable price, and it is far better to purchase these than to be experimenting. You will save time by so doing.

Should any of my readers desire to try their luck as regards length production, procure a yellow Lancashire cock (known as a "washer" with the Lancashire breeders), a bird of good length, but lacking the amount of feather so much sought after in the "Giant of Canarydom," and deficient in "sulky" skull character, i.e., browing.

Run such a bird with the very best feathered and smartest typed hens (yellows for preference) you have at your disposal. The progeny from such crossing should be of extra good length, and the best of them should be retained for future breeding and matched up to the best advantage afterwards; or a season after, shall we say?

Obtaining "Swagger."

Now, as regards position and swagger, the Belgian is responsible for these. Here again I should advise small breeders not to tamper with the Belgian, as he is a very dangerous customer to run into one's stock. Extreme care has to be brought into play to use the "hunch back" successfully. He is, without doubt, the pioneer of thin necks so detrimental in many of the Yorkies at the present time. My advice to you, if you are short of "breed" in your stock, is to purchase a "ready-made" article. Such are to be got at a reasonable figure, and you will act wisely in so doing. To those who are experimentalists, and wish to try their hand at producing position and nerve (or swagger, breed, and so forth), get a good quality yellow Belgian hen as long as possible, and run her with the longest and best feathered buff cock you have. Keep the best of the progeny, those thickest in neck and of the best type. Shun those with extremely thin necks, by all means, for once you get thin necks into your stock, it is a job to rectify them. Use discretion when crossing with the Belgian.

Quality of Feather.

Quality is obtained by the method I have quoted as regards the Norwich; that is, by keeping the best feathered birds you breed, and by using variegation. Another very safe method is to use a little cinnamon marked blood. Procure a good yellow cinnamon marked cock, and run him with one or two of your best-positioned dark eyed buff hens. Take notice, I advise best-position buff hens. The cinnamon marks are not so good in position, quite, as the green marked variety; therefore, utilise the best positioned damsels. You must keep Yorkshires erect and "straight as gun-barrels," as the show reports say. By using the cinnamon marks you obtain magnificent quality, soft silky texture of feather, and good colour.

Length of leg is also of very great importance. Birds that are short, or low, on leg are of very little use to a good breeder. There must be plenty of daylight between the legs.

Fashionable Faults.

The most prominent faults that cling (more-or-less) to the Yorkshire are as follows: Thin necks, wings that cross at tips, guttered backs, drooping tails, stilty legs, and frilly breasts. Shun these as much as you can. The main drawbacks of the Norwich are small heads, coarse and flat heads, browing, "roach" backs, looseness around thighs, and length of barrel. Avoid these failings.

The Roller Canary: Its Breeding, Training and General Management : :

By

The following is the third instalment of this instructive article upon the sweet-voiced Roller Canary.

You will find that the red-mite pest will be your great trouble in a warm room. If your cages are not fitted with perches that have a metal trap fixed to one end, you can very easily make a trap perch. Take a piece of willow, dog rose, or elderberry (or if none of these are available, one of your ordinary perches will do), and bore a hole, say, ⅛in. in width and about 1in. deep down both the front and back of the perch. Here you have your trap, and if you have any red-mite in your cages, they will in the daytime harbour in the holes you have made inside your perches, and all you have to do to destroy them is to take the perch out of the cage and knock it over a fire; this is a simple but effective way of keep the number under.

If you are handy with tools, you can make for yourself flight and shutter cages before the breeding season arrives. The first of these you will require to use will be the flights, into which you will transfer your youngsters.

Joining a Club.

Should you desire to become a member of a Roller Club, choose the one nearest the locality where you reside. The ordinary club meetings are held once in each month, and are very useful and instructive, as birds are often brought to the meetings and their song described; judging competitions are held as well as members' shows. Attend as many of your club's meetings as you possibly can, and do your part in helping the officials to make your society a successful one.

Perhaps a little information to the uninitiated as to where the different societies are located will be beneficial. In the South we have the British Roller Canary Club. Coming Northwards there is not another until we get into South Staffordshire. Here the Midland Roller C.C. have their headquarters at Wolverhampton. Passing on through Staffordshire there is not another club until Manchester is reached. What are the fanciers in North Staffordshire doing, I wonder? This place, I know to be a little hot-bed of feather fanciers, and according to the pages of CAGE BIRDS those good-looking Potters (I say good looking, because they are credited with making their own mugs) have three cage bird societies within a space of six miles. Surely one of them is energetic enough to add a Roller section to their club? I should propose that different secretaries put this question before their members, and should it meet with their approval, publish a notice in CAGE BIRDS (with the Editor's permission) inviting local Roller fanciers to the next meeting. Having spent a number of years in the Potteries, I know there are plenty of fanciers of the German Canary in the district, and at the present time there are two fanciers, one at Goldenhill and another at Newcastle, both members of a recognised Roller society. The Provincial Roller C.C. have their headquarters in Manchester, with Bolton and Wigan, boasting one each, this giving Lancashire the lead with three clubs in one shire.

Passing on into Yorkshire, we have two—Leeds and Wakefield. Some years ago a contest was held at Llanelly, but the gallant little Welshman seems to be sleeping now. The same term may be applied to Scotland, as there is not one Roller club over the border.

Marking Rings.

Any member of a society that is recognised by the British Roller C.C. can purchase this club's rings through the secretary of his own club, and with his rung birds is eligible to compete in the B.R.C.C. points competition. Another new feature is to be added next show season, which commences in November. The Provincial Roller Club are giving their patronage to their members exhibiting at other shows in the form of specials. A hint to friend Percival (the Secretary of the Provincial Roller C.C.): in the majority of cases some small, useful household article would no doubt be as acceptable as a medal.

[Since the above was written two other Roller Societies have been formed, viz., the Grimsby and Cleethorpes Roller C.S., and the South Wales Roller C.C.; and the Oldham C.B.S. have, we are informed, decided to enrol as members, fanciers of the Roller Canary, and to hold a show for the benefit of these members.—Editor.]

It is a fact that the Roller is becoming very popular, and its clubs are showing balance sheets very much on the right side. It is a variety that is easy to breed, as the hens, on the whole, are remarkably prolific. You have not to consider, in mating, such things as flat heads, hollow necks, crossed wings, etc. No hand-washing or colour-feeding is necessary. Your aim is song, and it would be a revelation to a Norwich breeder, who has not had the experience, to visit a German breeder's training room; probably he would not see a single bird; yet at the same time he would hear many singing behind the closed doors of their shutter-cage, and singing in a style warranted not to make the head ache. The prejudice that exists about size and colour very soon dies when a fancier takes up this variety.

Preparing for the Breeding.

In the matter of preparing the birds for breeding, the Roller is the same as other varieties.

You will be able to judge when a hen wishes to go to nest: she will move rapidly over the perches, flapping her wings and uttering shrill calls. In her beak she will carry any loose bits of material that can be found in the cage; she will pluck out her own feathers for this purpose. At other times, generally the first thing in the morning, she will drop down on the perch, droop her wings and, raising her beak upwards, utter a rapid "se-se-se" nasal-like call.

When you notice these signs in one of your hens, start her off to nest at once, as a hen in this condition will often begin to lay eggs about the cage; and this will often throw a hen out of condition for the whole season. Put a wire slide in the middle of one of your breeding-cages, and place the cock on one side and the hen on the other. If your cock bird is in equally as good a condition as the hen, it will not be many days (in fact, hours in some instances) before they will become reconciled to each other. This you can judge by the actions of the birds themselves: the hen calls to the cock and he feeds her through the wires of the slide.

You can then remove the slide. Place a nest-pan between the perches—in such a position that the latter will come below the rim of the pan, yet come close up to its side to prevent it from rocking. A small handful of moss should be placed in the rack or cage bottom. A bath should be hung on one of the doors, or placed inside the cage. The former method of providing a bath is the best, as the water is kept cleaner, but in either position fresh clean bathing and drinking water should be provided daily the first thing of a morning for preference; and if convenient, the bath should be removed about mid-day, but it will do no harm, that is, to birds used to bathing, if it is left on all day and until the morning when the youngsters hatch.

Give a liberal supply of cuttlefish bone, in addition to the usual supply of gritty sand.

Holding Her Own.

The Roller hen will hold her own with any other variety in building and destroying her nest, if they can be called nests, as sometimes they will fill a nest-pan with material and leave a small hole in the centre, but, as is oftener the case, down one side. Young hens, in particular, seem to take a delight in spending their time in constructing a nest, and the next minute pulling it all out of the pan on to the cage bottom, only to repeat the process over again and again, until it is near the time for them to lay.

Often some of these unwise virgins are "caught napping," so that when the first egg arrives there is no nest. To guard against a contingency of this kind, it is better to provide the hen with a lined nest-pan, then the egg will not get damaged by rolling about in the bare pan. Old hens, or those that have "gone through the mill" before, do not generally give one this trouble, but whatever kind of a nest your hen makes, do not interfere with it until you sit her, for she will only pull it all to pieces again. And do not worry the hen by continually looking at the nest-pan to see if there is an egg, as the hens often sit for hours in the nest before laying.

An experienced eye can easily detect when there will be an egg on the following day; the hen will appear dull and listless, the abdomen will have a full and swollen appearance, and in nearly all cases will rest that night in the nest. Don't rush her off the nest the next morning, but place a small piece of green food in the wires of the next compartment—place it high up so that the hen can see it; this will have a tendency to cause her to leave the nest. Then shut her off from the nesting compartment by the wooden slide, and with a small tea spoon take out the egg and substitute an earthenware dummy one. Repeat this process each day until the morning of the fourth day; in the meantime make a proper nest in another nest-pan. Take care that the material is pressed in as solid as possible. Then on the morning of the day when the fourth egg is laid, put all the eggs together in this new nest.

The Lizard Canary & Its General Management.

A lecture delivered by H. Cooke before the Hanley and District C.B.S.

In his opening remarks Mr. Cooke said it afforded him very great pleasure to comply with the request, and as far as time, opportunity and ability would allow, he would do his best to do justice to the subject. Mr. Cooke also intimated that he would have preferred that some older fancier should deal with the subject, but he was not going to make any apology in introducing to them the Lizard Canary—a bird in his estimation unequalled in the Canary tribe. According to the verdict of many others who had had a lifelong experience, the Lizard Canary was a bird that was well worthy of the front rank. He very much regretted, he said, as a Lizard fancier he stood alone in the Staffordshire Potteries; but he assured us he was none the less proud of the Fancy, and nothing would give him more pleasure and encouragement than to hear of others taking up the Fancy—he would welcome them heartily, and would be willing to assist them all he could.

The lecturer added that he would be very pleased to answer any question that might arise out of the lecture, and with this he plunged into his subject.

About the Birdroom.

First of all, let me say a word or two about the birdroom. My birdroom does not get the full benefit of the sun; still, I generally get very fair breeding results. I have no need to cover any of the windows except a little when I am colour-feeding the birds. Where the birdroom is fully exposed to the glare of the sun, no matter how much ventilation there is, you cannot keep your birdroom at what I call a normal temperature without shielding about one-third of the window during the summer months. Plenty of fresh air without draughts upon your birds is very essential to health, and you must not forget to keep your birdroom free from damp through the winter months. Draughts and damp, remember, are two great enemies to the feathered tribe.

As regards cages, I strongly recommend a uniform size; that is, all of similar pattern, as well as accurate in sizes. The Lizard Canary should, if possible, be kept, in a separate cage during the moult, and also during the show season, as by having two or more birds in one cage they are liable to pluck each other.

Some fanciers prefer double-breeders, but for myself I prefer a single cage, about 18in. wide, by 16in. high, and of 11in. boards. I find these cages very suitable for breeding or moulting purposes. Of course, if you require a larger cage, you might have one or two made on the three-compartment principle, to correspond with three of the others when placed upon the rack, or hung upon the walls, as the case may be; then when the slides are drawn these cages come in very useful for flights for the stock birds during the winter months.

About the middle of March I start "cleaning down" by beginning the white-washing of the room, also what cages I have limed inside. Before replacing the cages, I give a coat of turpentine upon all the joints, and any other place where pests are likely to get; this is a great preventive of red mite. My cages that are painted I paint both inside and out—inside, light blue, and outside black.

When to Pair Up.

I generally pair up at the beginning of April, that is, providing the birds, of course, are in good condition—and by this time they should be in first-class form. The cock bird should be in full song, the hens moving smartly from perch to perch, flapping their wings—which is a sign that they are in a favourable condition. But until you see these signs by all means keep them separated, or you will be disappointed in the results. I know that there is a tendency to try and get young birds early, especially if you hear of others who have them. You at once begin to think you are a long way behind. But take my advice, have patience, and you will be well rewarded before the breeding season is over.

Start to give your birds egg-food about the middle of March—one teaspoonful to each bird every other day. Also, use hemp, rape, maw and inga seed, besides the best giant Spanish Canary. The inga seed prevents the hens to a great extent from becoming egg-bound. When pairing birds with the object of breeding youngsters suitable for the show-bench, think well of the standard you are aiming at, and remember that you have only one year in which you can show, as no Lizards are fit for the show-bench after their first year.

The Ideal Lizard Canary.

The following is a description of the Lizard Canary: Like all other Canaries, Lizards are of two varieties, namely, Jonques or Silvers, or Gold and Silver Spangled. These are divided into four classes, namely, Golden Spangled Clear Cap, Silver Spangled Clear Cap, Golden Spangled Broken Cap, and Silver Spangled Broken Cap.

The cap of a Lizard should be oval in shape, extending from the beak to the base of the skull. There should be no dark feathers on the top of the beak, and the cap should be cut off clean over the eyes, leaving a fine, dark line at the sides of the head, called the eye-lash. The skull should be wide and proportionately long, rather flat than otherwise on the top. The ground colour of a Gold Lizard is a golden bronze of a soft neutral tint. The Silver Lizard is a warm silver-grey in colour, and it is customary to colour-feed Lizards for the show-bench. This colour-feeding considerably alters the colour of the birds, giving them a much warmer tint, the gold turning into something of a chestnut colour, and the cap into a deep orange-red. Colour-feeding enriches the Silver Lizard very much, giving the bird a soft warm shade, and this is most distinct in the head. The effect on the body is a soft velvety grey, and the softer and more velvety the shade of ground colour appears the better the bird is considered. A green tinge in the ground colour of a Lizard is a serious blemish.

A broken cap or miss-capped Lizard is one that has dark feathers on the head, other than the fine lines over the eye forming the eye-lash. A bird whose cap runs down below the base of the skull is called over-capped.

The spanglings on a bird should commence well up in the neck, increasing in size to the wing coverts. Each row of spangles should be separate and distinct, perfectly lineable down the back. On the sides of the bird the rows of spangling should commence with the lacing on the butts, increasing in size to the central row down the back. The wings and tail feathers should be black, and the outer edges fringed with gold or silver, as the case may be.

The wings should meet at the tips. The size and shape of the bird are of importance. The breast should be round, full and wide, and the back broad and full. The lacing feathers on the wing butts should be of nice size, clear, and distinct, lying regular. The covert feathers on the wings should be the same, and the outer edges clearly defined. The work on the breast, sometimes called rowing or lacing, should be soft in colour, and lineable. The beak, legs, and feet should be dark.

You must bear in mind that what the cock bird is deficient in, as regards show points, you should try to balance by means of the hen. Correct matching tends to correct breeding; no other word spells success.

Like Produces Like.

In mating up, you should put gold to silver, and silver to gold. Someone may say, cannot we put two silvers together, so as to gain size, or two golds together to get more colour? This has been tried both ways, but without much success. You lose size with the golds this way, and the silvers come too rough in feather and very cloudy in spangling. I certainly advise the ordinary method of mating, which is, gold to silver, and silver to gold. Also try to keep the size up by using the largest birds for breeding with, for, after all, "Like produces like." I usually pair a clear-capped bird to a broken-cap. You might then have a long-capped bird. If such is the case, it is wisdom to pair it to a very heavy-broken cap, or even to a non-cap. That is a bird I admire, for, as a rule, you will find that non-caps have the best of spanglings.

I usually run one cock bird with two hens, and have had very fair results. He should be put in with the hen that seems in the best of condition. Keep him with her until she has laid her third egg, and then let him have two or three days in a cage by himself, before transferring him to the other hen. I always take the eggs away as laid, putting in a dummy; then on the night when the third egg has been laid I replace them. By doing this you will get the young hatched as nearly as possible at one time, in which case the young all have an equal chance of being fed. I only give the hen plain seed when she is sitting, but on the night before the eggs are due to hatch, I place in the cage a little egg-food in readiness for feeding.

You may perchance have a hen that is a bad feeder, for there are some that will not feed, no matter how you try to coax them into doing so. When a case of this sort arises you should transfer the young to other nests of young of about the same age, if you have any.

There is a lot of difference in the matter of feeding by hens. Some will take a lot of egg-food, some hemp, or rape seed, while others will feed mostly upon dandelion. But much depends upon the parents. Sometimes a hen will fall off feeding through the heat; in this case give her a little Epsom salts in the water.

Mr. Cooke at this point thanked his audience for their kind attention, and also tendered his best wishes for the future prosperity of the Society. A warm discussion followed, and the general opinion was that a most enjoyable evening had been spent, besides its being helpful and instructive to every fancier present.—G. LAWTON, Secretary.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE IS BOOMING.

SOME DETAILS OF OUR SCHEME.

That Cage Birds League is booming there can be no doubt. The number of letters received containing congratulations and applications for membership has been simply phenomenal, and when in the near future we are able to put forward the complete programme of the League, we have no doubt that it will be accorded the hearty support of the whole cage-bird keeping fraternity. And to promote Cage Birds League amongst bird-keepers generally and exhibitors and cultivators of prize cage birds, we have devised the following scheme.

Every exhibitor of cage birds must "catch a pal." That is to say, he must make it his business not only to join Cage Birds League, but to enlist a brother bird-keeper.

Every member of the League may, if he chooses, assign half the value of his annual subscription in special prizes to any society or show in which he takes a special interest. The other half will go towards the progressive and protective work of the League. By catching a pal from the ranks of outside birdkeepers, a member is thus enabled to materially help the special prize list of his particular society.

Cage Birds will underwrite or guarantee special prizes under this scheme to the value of £1,000. The practical result of this idea in a society whose membership totals some forty fanciers may be seen thus:—

The annual subscription to the Cage Birds League will be 1s. (cost of membership badge, 6d. extra)
Forty members of local society each join the League and donate 6d. to the special prize fund of their society £1
And each "catch a pal" for the League £1
Total value of Prizes for Local Society £2

A local birdkeeper may be disinclined to join a local bird society, but may like the idea of subscribing to Cage Birds League.

On the foregoing basis there would not only be Two Pounds' worth of prizes for the local society, but Two Pounds' worth of funds for the work of the League.

An independent paid Secretary will be appointed to Cage Birds League, and if necessary, clerical assistance will be given him to see that letters are promptly attended to and the work of the League discharged in a businesslike manner. An Advisory Committee of responsible fanciers will be selected to superintend the aggressive and defensive movements adopted by the League in the interests of birdkeepers.

The allocation and division of the special prizes due to each society will be left entirely to the League members in the society concerned. The prizes will be selected from £1,000 worth of real oil paintings and water-colours handsomely framed—constituting magnificent ornaments for the fancier's home.

To encourage secretaries and fanciers to enlist members in the new League, we shall offer the following

CASH PRIZES AMOUNTING IN ALL TO TWENTY POUNDS.

£5 cash to the individual fancier who, between the dates of March 10th, 1911, and March 11th, 1912, secures the greatest number of recruits to Cage Birds League.

£5 cash to the Society whose nominations to the League between March 10th, 1911, and March 11th, 1912, are the most numerous.

£3 cash to the individual fancier who nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

£3 cash to the Society which nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

And Four Cash Prizes of £1 each to societies whose total nominations to the League show the best average per member.

SOME ALTERNATIVE PROPOSITIONS.

But a League member who is not interested in show matters is not bound to contribute his quota to the development of the exhibiting interest. He may donate half his annual subscription to the League to any one of the following ideas:—

LITERATURE FUND.—For the dissemination amongst poor bird-keepers of useful literature calculated to enlighten them and improve the conditions under which their birds are kept in domestication.

DEFENCE FUND.—For the protection of bird-keepers by legal or other process from swindlers, or unjust attacks by moneyed faddists and sentimentalists. For the general protection of bird-keepers' interests.

Failing any specific instruction from a League member as to how his donation is to be expended, it will go towards the

GENERAL PURPOSES FUND.—For the development and progressive work of the League, advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

BADGES.

A neat and unobtrusive design for members' badges has been approved, and will be ready in about three weeks' time. These badges will be sold at sixpence each.

We hope members will wear their League badges at every possible opportunity. They will be found to be attractive yet subdued and refined in appearance, with no suggestion of "advertisement" (except of the C.B.L.), about them. The badge will serve as an introduction between bird-keepers—an outward and visible sign, so to speak, of the "bond of good-fellowship" it is the object of the League to establish—and to bring the fact of the existence of the League into wider notice. We are looking to the use of the badge as likely to greatly help the furtherance of the objects of Cage Birds League.

BRANCHES OF THE LEAGUE.

It is hoped from time to time to form in the different centres branches of the League, but this work must be left for the moment, until the main body is in a thoroughly sound financial and operative state.

The temporary Offices of Cage Birds League are at 154, Fleet Street, London.

I should like to become a member of your Cage Birds League, and I wish it and Cage Birds every success—J. O'Brien (Everton).

Sir,—I should like to see far more good-fellowship between fanciers. I don't know of anything more needed. I sincerely hope to see a large number of fanciers ready to form a union between bird-keepers through the country.—Alexr. Elrick (Fraserburgh).

In reference to your Cage Birds League, will it make any difference to me not being a fancier? I only have a few birds kept for a hobby, but I am a lover of all birds, and I have taken Cage Birds for many a year now, and I have Cage Birds Annual for six years past.—J. Willcock (London, N.).—All bird-keepers and lovers are welcome members.—Editor.

Sir,—In reading over your Cage Birds League scheme, it appears, to my mind, very commendable and comprehensive, and one that should have a very far-reaching tendency towards the welfare of fanciers and those who keep birds of any description. I sincerely hope that when once started it may advance rapidly towards the goal its originators are seeking to attain. We have had the Cage Bird Club, also the Cage Bird Union fiascos; let us hope the creation of a more simple scheme may, with judicious training, develop into a magnificent body of contented fellowship. One or two thoughts suggests themselves; possibly they may already have been decided upon. One is that a copy of the information and objects of the League, as contained in the issue of Cage Birds dated March 11th, may be printed in leaflet form, and supplied to the various secretaries throughout the United Kingdom, for their further distribution amongst members, who, in their turn, would place one wherever they see, or know, a bird is kept, introductory with the object of "catching a pal"; these leaflets could be supplied free, or at a small cost, per 1,000. I am bringing the matter before our members at our next meeting. With every good wish for its success.—W. O. Brooke, Sec. of the Bournemouth and Dis. C.B.A.

Sir,—I think your intimation of starting a league of bird-keepers is a very good idea, as it is time for every bird-lover to combine to protect the hobby. I, for one, would be only too pleased to join a league. If a league or union were formed, and every one paid so much to enter, contributions to be paid weekly or monthly, we would all have a little protection to look forward to. Your badge of membership is a good idea, too, for, if worn as you propose, it would bring bird-keepers together more than at present is possible. I think it one of the best ideas, if not the best, ever put before bird-keepers.—"Linnet" (Middlesbrough).

Sir,—We see Cage Birds to the front again, as usual, with a new scheme, to protect our hobby. My brother and I wish you every success. These folk, and, of course, old maids included, who interfere, would rather cuddle and kiss the not too clean nose of a pet lapdog; they are welcome. "Is it cruel to keep birds in cages?" has been asked repeatedly. We say: No, not properly cared for, as all birds should be. We recently gave a few Greenfinches their liberty. The result was, the postman came and told us that a bird was wanting to get into our birdroom. A few minutes later two gentlemen told us that two of our birds had escaped and were trying to get back again; we went outside and saw the Greenies which we had given their liberty. We ask, if these birds had detested cage life, would they have wanted to go back to captivity? My brother and I, and hundreds who know something about birds, honestly believe that after birds have been caged a few days, they forget they have ever had their liberty. Success to Cage Birds League is our wish.—Keymer Bros. (Gorleston-on-Sea).

I hope you will get the support you deserve for Cage Birds League; it just fills the gap, and should "go," and be a great success.—F. G. Joiner (Portsmouth).

I want you to enrol me a member of Cage Birds League, for which I encloso 1s. subscription and 6d. for badge, to be sent when ready. It deserves every success.—C. Watts (Bow).

I have found your paper, Cage Birds, invaluable, and have taken it from the first. I like the idea of the Cage Birds League, and wish it and you every success.—A. Richards (Plymouth).

A "Cage Birds" Fancy Dress.

One of our readers, Mr. E. J. Hill, of Eastbourne, has designed the above novel and effective fancy costume for a roller skating carnival, the birds being cut from "CAGE BIRDS" coloured plates. The hat is in the form of a cage, with a bird inside; and Mr. Hill carried a "CAGE BIRDS" poster in his hands.

I congratulate you on Cage Birds League and its success, and will send on my subscription as soon as there is an intimation that you are prepared to enrol members.—H. Thorp (Lymm).

Sir,—I see that you are forming a Cage Birds League. It will be a good thing for all bird lovers, and I wish it every success. I have been a reader of Cage Birds for the last four years, and will do all I can for the League. I am not connected with any society in this district, but I am a member of the Kirkcaldy and Dysart Cage Bird Societies. I am glad to see by your last issue that the League is going to be a great success. I wish to become a member, and will forward my money next week.—John Laurie (Falkirk).

Sir,—At last the Press are beginning to move in this matter, and Cage Birds, in coming forward with and extending previous suggestions and inviting bird-keepers for their views on the subject, should be congratulated. I am pleased my proposals which I made through the National British Bird and Mule Club, and also my letter in your issue of November 19th, 1910, are beginning to bear fruit. The N.B.B. and M.C. proposed discussing the matter, after their annual meeting at Crystal Palace Show, but the hour being late, it was not policy to attempt the business, and it was postponed. The great question to-day is the "Bird-keeper and his hobby versus the Faddists," who, if you let them have their way, would largely cripple and practically destroy it. Therefore, to prevent this, it behoves the bird-keepers, all over Great Britain at least, to band themselves together and prevent such a catastrophe. Now, how and which is the best and easiest means to accomplish this object, at the least possible expense; also will the bird-keeper have enough enthusiasm in him to carry it to a successful issue? There are plenty of able and willing helpers who should be ready and capable of forming such a league. How shall it be begun? What shall be its objects? How shall it be financially carried on? All these matters should be fairly and carefully discussed before the league is launched on its career. Its objects, rules, etc., should be simple, plain, and to the point; long and tiresome rules would be its downfall. Call it the Bird-keepers' League. It should take in all bird-keepers as well as cage bird-keepers. You ask for suggestions; here is one: Call a conference of all London and suburban fanciers' associations; let each be represented by its president or chairman and secretary. Invite all newspapers, journals, etc., interested in bird life, the Royal Zoological Society, the Wild Bird Protection Association, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and any other society likely to be interested; and large seed, food, and cage providers, dealers, etc. Surely out of such an assembly of able men interested in bird-keeping it would be possible to bring the matter to a sound and successful issue. You would want a hard-working, energetic secretary. The president or chairman of every London and suburban bird-keepers' association would form a Central Committee, who could elect their secretary, treasurer, president, and any other officers. You would require solicitors and probably a small central office. You could have eight or ten local centres throughout Great Britain. All bird associations in county towns could be its local agents. The subscriptions need only be a small one, say, all societies 5s. year, all seed and food dealers 3s. 6d. year, and all members a 3d., 6d., or 1s. button; life members 10s. 6d. Donations could also be contributed to its funds. Silver and gold tokens to be worn on watch-chain, pin or brooch could also be provided. When formed, it should be soundly and heartily supported by all bird-keepers, fanciers, exhibitors, all bird clubs, seed and food providers, cage-makers, bird dealers, etc. Its branches in every town through the local bird club should bring it to the notice of the seed and food provider, and through him get the support of the principal small bird-keepers, who exist in large numbers, and who never read papers relating to birds; yet thousands of them are most enthusiastic lovers of our feathered pets. I have this illustrated in the petition the National British Bird and Mule Club are circulating amongst shopkeepers, some have got between 200 and 300 to sign, and perhaps not one fancier amongst them. Even if the League only banded together the members of all bird clubs and associations, it would be strong enough to combat many of the stringent regulations, which the bird hobby is being bound up with. Apathy has been the bird-keeper's and dealer's misfortune. Up to the present he has let all these laws and regulations creep up and bind down his hobby. Has he no enthusiasm left in him to now wake up and support this reasonable and sound project? Again, looking at it from a social point, it should cause good feeling and friendship amongst bird-keepers. Look what the cycling clubs did for cyclists. Bird-keepers themselves should form it, and run it themselves. No one paper should do so; no one man should do so. Now, will papers, societies, traders, fanciers, etc., drop petty and sometimes frivolous jealousy, work hard, assist and help in the one common object to form a sound and substantial league to promote good fellowship, help and assist one another in all objects appertaining to bird-keeping? Then and only then can such a league be an assured success. In conclusion, I might mention I offered the committee of the N.B.B. and M.C. to distribute the petition, which the sub-committee of that club will shortly ask the Home Secretary to receive, and also wait on the London County Council re alteration of Wild Bird Laws. In doing this myself, Mr. A. Silver, and Mr. Cook, and other traders got some 1,000 signatures at the Crystal Palace Show. We have left copies at some 1,500 seed and bird dealers' shops in London and suburbs, which means 40,000 signatures. We have also got some 150 wholesale and seed importing firms to support same. I am also sending one to every bird society in Great Britain, asking them to assist the N.B. and B.C., and get their members to sign. When one has been engaged in this hard canvassing for a month amongst merchants, traders, fanciers, etc., one begins to get some fair idea of the difficulties you have to contend with in trying to do something to help the bird-keeper.

T. R. Trower.

North London.

Sir,—I shall be very pleased to become a member of the Cage Birds League, and I wish it every success.—J. H. Alfred (Pontlattyn, near Cardiff).

Sir,—Each week shows that the Cage Bird League is an institution with great possibilities, and it will be of great benefit to the Fancy. The point made by Mr. Birch, of Skelmersdale, re writing to C.B.L. members for reference when dealing with a stranger in some distant part of the country is good. If it is possible to have a representative in every town, and a list published, which might be purchased from you at a small cost, I think it would be the means of preventing cases of fraud, like we have heard of from time to time. Can we send our subscription on at once, and is it intended to have forms of membership to sign? As soon as I know it is fairly started I intend to start recruiting to fill the League ranks. If you have forms I shall be pleased to receive some. With regard to the badge, I suppose we shall have further particulars later on. I can well understand the difficulties attached to the launching of such a scheme, and know patience must be exercised, but if issued in different forms it will give us a choice which to have. Again thanking you for the benefit you are conferring on the Fancy, I wish Cage Birds League every success, and Cage Birds increasing popularity.

F. Thomas (Ramsgate).

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of poper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES.

Various.

Confederate.—(1) If you are breeding the Rollers specially for their song, or to train as songsters, and not merely as feeders for the better-class birds, it is not advisable to keep them in the same room as the Yorkshires. By doing so the song will certainly deteriorate and that of the young birds be corrupted. (2) Keep in an equable place and out of reach of draughts, and add to 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, to the water for a few days. Shake well together. (3) Rather too fine for my entire approval, and deficient in calcareous matter for laying hens and growing young. If you could collect it with a little coarser grain, and smash up a little old mortar and mix with it it would serve your purpose very nicely. (4) Colour is of little importance in a Roller. A clear bird would suit best, of the opposite colour to the cock. Thus, if he is a variegated yellow, get a clear buff hen, but if he is a variegated buff then get a clear yellow hen. About 2s. 6d. or 3s. 6d. would be the probable cost of the hen. (5) Freshly ground pyrethrum powder is best and cheapest. Any large chemist will supply it. But it is, after all, of extremely little use about birds and cages. (6) Should have been on a separate sheet for Mr. Weston. The cock is more decidedly green above, more yellowish-green below. Hen has a decidedly greyish tinge all over. (7) There is one on "The Roller Canary" in our Nutshell series, post free, 2½d. It will also be dealt with in "Our Canaries" in due course. (8) Part 7 of "Our Canaries" treats fully of egg binding. This is the biblical "few" is it not. Next, please!

Canaries Losing Sight.

J. C.—Your letter misses one or two important points which would have helped to elucidate the trouble. Is there any "watering" or other discharge from the eyes, and does the complaint appear to spread from one bird to another occupying the same cage? As you mention the nice "shelly" nature of the sand you are using, I am rather inclined to think it may be the cause of the eye trouble by being loaded with tiny sharp fragments of shell which adhere to the beak and feathers and perhaps get forced into the eyes when the birds are fluttering about after bathing, etc., and eventually set up inflammatory processes, or it may be contaminated with some chemical substances before you collect it. Discard this sand altogether for a time. Wash out cages with a 1 in 40 solution of Jeyes' Fluid. Scour perches with same, and afterwards keep them perfectly clean. Bathe the birds' eyes daily with a solution of boracic acid until better, and give the birds a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a time. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for three days, and afterwards give 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a week or two. If the trouble has not disappeared in a month write again, referring to this reply, and give above particulars. Also say if you have painted or distempered the cages recently, and what they are done with.

Sea Sand (F. Dodd).—Yes, if sea sand is clean and of a suitable size it is excellent stuff for use in cages. So long as it is from a clean and uncontaminated part of the coast, there is no danger of its doing your birds any harm.

Norwich Not Singing (D. Davies).—See reply to "F. J. Langley" about cock not singing, and treat your bird the same. For green food give two leaves of dandelion daily, instead of what you are giving now. If this does not bring it in song, get someone who understands the business to look at it, and tell you whether it is a cock.

Not Sang Since Moult (E. P., Birmingham).—He is probably only waiting for the Spring to arrive before resuming song. It is not uncommon for some cocks to do this after their first few seasons. In addition to the staple seed diet, give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar and also a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle, and a morsel of banana. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. This should suffice to bring him into song in the course of a week or two, assuming, of course, he is quite well, as you say, and that he is kept under healthful conditions.

Feathers in Flight (No Name).—Most of the feathers enclosed had the appearance of being moulted, and are quite sufficient to show that at least two of the hens are in moult, one probably a rich highly-fed buff, and a variegated pale buff. You should discover these birds, cage them separately, and treat them the same as advised to "E. Godry." If you fail to discover which are moulting by watching them, cage all up separately, or in couples, for a day or two, or, better still, treat all in the flight alike. Being all subject to the same conditions, it is quite likely that all are more or less "soft," in which case the treatment advised will benefit all.

Losing Feathers (E. Godry).—The hen will not necessarily be prevented breeding this year by losing a few head feathers now. Keep hen in a cosy and equable place, but not overheated—just away from the cold side. In addition to the staple seed diet, give a scrap of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts of hemp, teazle, and millet, and a morsel of banana. Dissolve half a teaspoonful of crystals of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in one ounce of sherry, and give 20 drops of this in the water every second day until feathers cease dropping. Do not mate until the beginning of April in any case.

Boil on Wing (E. H.).—I suspect the trouble originated with an abnormal feather growth. In addition to the usual seed diet give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed twice a week for a month or so, and on each of the remaining days give a leaf of dandelion, spray of chickweed, or morsel of banana. If you could get it to take a mealworm daily for a time it would prove very beneficial. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and a pinch of Epsom salts twice a week for a month, and on two other days 20 drops of chemical food. When a "head" is formed, prick it with a clean needle, gently press out contents, wash clean, and then anoint daily, until healed, with lanocyllin or zinc ointment. If it begins to grow again, paint it daily with a feather dipped in tincture of iodine.

Outdoor Aviary (F. Thompson).—It is not possible to say how you can equalise the temperature in your aviary without having some knowledge of it, or at least a rough sketch showing its construction and position in relation to other buildings. Of one thing you may be certain, that with such conditions as you name at this season, you would be sure of disaster during the warm summer months. I suspect it is a wooden structure with single walls, and probably the best way to remedy the fluctuations would be to line it with matchboards, and fill in the space between the two walls with wool waste or sawdust, and making ingress for fresh air near the floor, and an outlet in the roof, so that a constant change of air could go on when the door was shut. The small size of the structure is one great cause of the fluctuations. If you will send me a rough sketch of the place, and say of what it is built, show places of door, and any ventilating space you may have, and windows, I will do my best to give you more definite advice next week.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Outdoor Aviary (A.J.B.).—(1) Laburnum is generally reputed to be poisonous to poultry and pigeons if they eat the seeds, but although I had a large tree growing in my garden to which both the poultry and pigeons had free access at all seasons, and standing within a few yards of the pigeon-house, I cannot speak from experience, only to say that no calamity ever happened, nor, so far as could be seen, any ill-effects. But whether these feathered creatures picked up the seeds of the laburnum or not I cannot say. Still, if your tree is of no particular value, I would say remove it and run no risks. Box, privet, holly, guelder rose, flowering thorns, and currants may all be used quite freely. Ornamental shrubs, as such, are of little or no use, as the birds will not allow them to make any headway. (2) If you mean for the aviary, you might dispense with nest pans, and hang about the wicker travelling cages used for Rollers with the short bars removed, or the hundred-size cigar boxes with half the lid sawn off and hung up endwise. Failing these, use the square Norwich nest boxes made of wood.

Almost Bald (No Nom-de-plume).—I doubt whether any treatment will be of much use until it coincides more nearly with the normal moulting season. Keep the bird in a comfortable temperature, and in addition to a staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape, give a piece of bread about the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, slightly dusted with a mixture of two part flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give this every third day for a month. On two other days each week give a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana, and on two other days a spray of chickweed, groundsel, or a leaf of dandelion. In the drinking water give ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and 20 drops of chemical food every second day for two or three weeks afterwards. Allow bird to bathe freely in fine weather. Anoint the bare places with carbolised vaseline three times a week for a fortnight.

Wastes its Seed (Matt. Grant).—In the first place, the sample of seed you sent which had not been in cage is a most unsuitable mixture as a regular diet for Canaries. It consists mainly of canary, with a fairly large proportion of millet, red and white, ditto of gold of pleasure, a small proportion of hemp, mere traces of rape, teazle, and inga, and a large proportion of dirt. See that the cage and perches are kept quite clean, and the floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana. Give a little green food four times a week. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day. This will set matters right.

Breeding in Aviary (John Wave).—I take it your idea is to turn the birds loose in the aviary. By doing so you will absolutely court failure. This aviary is simply a fairly large cage, and at its full capacity will accommodate at most seven birds with no allowance for breeding. If you turned in three hens and one cock, and put in five or six nesting boxes you might have a fair chance of doing something with them. This is the utmost you should attempt, and the young should be removed as soon as they are well able to do for themselves.

Sex and Breeding (F. J. Langley).—A 1910 cock, if in good health and condition, should have been in full song before now. Give it a morsel of sponge cake with a few drops of sherry on it, and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal part hemp, inga, and teazle. If it shows no signs of coming in song in, say, a week or so, I should doubt its being a cock. Certainly it is possible for a Norwich hen one year old to breed, and your hen will undoubtedly do so if in good condition if mated in two or three weeks from now.

Hen with Asthma (J. W. E.).—I suspect what you think is a little asthma is really the outcome of a chill or exposure to draught. Keep her in a fairly cosy place, not overheated, nor yet cold, as equable as possible and perfectly free from draughts. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for one day, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Sore Feet (A. McDonald).—I cannot quite understand why your bird should tremble so when pecking at its irritable legs, if, as you say, it is in the best of health. To cure the irritation, bathe the legs and feet daily in a warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid dissolved in a tea-saucerful of hot water. After bathing for a few minutes, dry gently, and annoint them sparingly with Lanocyllin, or, if this is not available, zinc ointment, though the former is quite the thing you want. In a few days the legs should be quite cured. It might help them to dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, in the drinking water every second day for a week. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean. Read rule 7. Stamped envelope did not reach me.

Ailing Rollers (G. C.).—They have most likely been exposed to draughts or great fluctuations whilst flying loose in the room. Quite probably they may have exposed themselves to such conditions by roosting in places where they would be exposed to chills during the night, or perching about draughty windows by day. Cage them up now and see they are kept in a comfortable and equable, but not heated, place. Feed on a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give each half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a leaf of dandelion or morsel of banana, and twice a week also a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whiskey, six each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Will they Breed? (Dulwich).—It is not exactly "the whole truth and nothing but the truth" for anyone to say that a hen will not breed simply because it sings. Lots of hens, and especially Rollers, warble and twitter more or less, and also breed quite successfully. Still, on the whole, I prefer seeing hens "keep their proper place," and not assume too much the masculine characteristics. You have probably been keeping the birds too warm and feeding them too generously, which has brought them into condition much too early. In normal circumstances they should not have been mated yet, but as the hens are so forward you had better let matters take their course now. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape only. All other seeds give separately, a pinch now and again, and supply all such items as are advised in "Canary Breeding for Beginners" for preparing birds for breeding, and give two leaves of dandelion daily. Beyond this you have only to exercise patience for a little while, and things will come right in due course.

Frequent Fits ("Fritz," Manchester).—The bird is evidently a typical epileptic subject, and it is extremely doubtful if you will do it any good at all. You ought to have said how you feed, and under what conditions it is kept. Give a staple diet of plain Canary seed only. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape separately, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw. Twice a week give a morsel of bread and milk, and on two other days a bit of banana. On each of the remaining days give a spray of chickweed or groundsel. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, in the next week give as much bromide of potassium as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day. Then repeat the two weeks in the same order. Report result in a month, and also say whether the bird has probably injured its skull some time by fluttering about the cage—that is, before the fits commenced.

Prolapsus (P. Muscott).—Unless the hen has laid an egg which has escaped your notice the cause of this trouble is most likely severe constipation. If necessary, give a few drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water, or a little crisp, young groundsel or chickweed to make the bowels act freely, but do not make them very relaxed. Keep the hen in a cage by herself, and quite quiet. For treatment, bathe the protruded part quite clean in a lukewarm solution of Jeyes' Fluid—about 1½ teaspoonful in half-pint of warm water. After bathing, dry gently, and carefully work back the protruded part within the vent, to as near its natural size as you can get it. Use no force; coax the part back rather than force it. Then insert a tiny piece of gall ointment in the vent. If the part is again extruded repeat the above treatment at once, and continue doing so until it retains its normal position. It would be best not to mate the bird this year.

Out of Condition (G. H. R.).—Adopt the treatment advised to "W. G. H." for the hen, and follow it in all respects as given in that reply.

Roller Hen Unwell (Puzzled).—Treat your bird in all respects the same as advised to "W. G. H." Also treat the one that droops its wings in the same way, except that you need give her the rhubarb and salts mixture for two consecutive days only, and then go on to the other mixture. Your cages are placed in as good a position as they could be in the room in question.

Septic Fever (J. Tilby).—Who told you the bird died of this complaint—a post-mortem examiner, or just a friend? If the latter, I should scarcely let it concern me. I do not think you have this complaint in your stock, but if you had, you certainly did wrong to remove the two birds to another room; that, in all probability, would only have infected the other room. It would have been better to let them remain where they were, and, of course, adopted stringent disinfecting measures. To provide against any contingency you should get the book on "Septic Fever," which our Manager would send you for 7d. post free. Meantime treat the birds for a fortnight as advised to "W. G. H." and write again if anything seems to be going wrong with the birds, giving details of your feeding and general treatment. This time you give no data whatever.

Yorkshire Dull (W. G. H.).—Feed on a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. After the first week give the bread and milk only twice a week, and add a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet, on the days when the bread and milk is withdrawn. Limit the diet to this until well. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of columba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Both samples of seed are of good all-round quality.

Wheezy Belgian (R. G. M.).—See that the bird is quite free from draughts and great fluctuations of temperature. Keep in a box cage in a quite comfortable, but not overheated, place—that is, keep it just away from the chilly cold side. Give a staple diet of plain canary only every second day. Every second day give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of banana; give a leaf of dandelion or spray of chickweed four times a week. Limit the diet to this until better. Withhold bath for the present. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another fortnight afterwards. Mixture: Two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and ten grains of iodide of potassium. Any chemist will mix this for you.

Shutter Cages (M. L. S., Leicester).—What you refer to are generally called Roller singing cabinets or song boxes. You might have seen one illustrated in our advertisement columns the last week or two. They are usually made of metal, with folding doors and ventilating apertures, and sometimes with glass panels in the doors. Cages are made to fit into these boxes in which the birds are kept. The main object of the boxes is to prevent the birds getting too loud in song, and also to tone down a song which is already too high, and prevent the bird corrupting others, as when placed in the cabinet and the doors more or less closed as required, the volume of sound is considerably toned down, and the other birds in the same room do not hear the same objectionable "high notes." A cloth thrown over a cage would only produce the effect in a very minor degree, though it would be better than nothing. The S.W. aspect of room will not make it too light, and, other points being suited for the purpose, it should make a very good breeding room. The mice in out-door aviary might greatly disturb the birds, but would not, save in quite exceptional circumstances, eat them. And you might easily have cleared them out by using "Virus" say once a year. See Mr. Weston's column re British Birds.

Ventilation and Moulting (Constant Reader).—(1) I cannot very clearly understand your sketch in respect to its position in relation to other buildings, and you leave me in the dark as to what material the end containing the door and its opposite end are constructed with. If feasible to take a piece out of each of these ends six by eight inches in the angle nearest the highest point of roof and insert in these spaces small frames to fit them covered on each side with perforated zinc arranged so that the holes in the zinc are not in juxtaposition, these would make quite serviceable outlets for impure air. To prevent the violent inrush you mention through the space over the window, cover these spaces similarly on both sides with perforated zinc, and I think this will give you quite efficient ventilation without draught. If you get Part 10 of "Our Canaries" you will find a very good and clear illustration of the bird-room you refer to, which may help you to understand the article which appeared in CAGE BIRDS, to which you also refer. (2) See reply to "E. Godry" re hen moulting, and treat her as there advised. If there is no very striking difference in the temperature of the place to which you have removed the birds and the one they occupied before, I do not think you need be anxious about the other hens.

Squeaking and Wheezing (R. A. W. G.).—Are these noises constant or only occasional, or worse at night than during the day? The replies to these questions would have been useful. Make yourself quite sure that the bird is not exposed to occasional draughts; see that he is in a position where the temperature is fairly equable, not very warm by day and extremely cold at night; and that he does not hang near or over burning lights in the evenings. Stop your present mode of feeding and adopt the following for a month. Staple, a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days twice a week give a pinch of the seed mixture you have been using, and four times a week two leaves of dandelion. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Feeding Breeding Pair (L. W. E.).—You would have done better to have kept the birds apart until the end of this month. Now, however, you had better let matters take their course, if the hen shows any signs at all of beginning to nest. In addition to the staple seed diet, give a small teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and linseed. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage all through the season. Continue the above diet until hen commences to lay, then gradually drop off the extras and give only the staple diet, with a little egg food once or twice a week, whilst sitting. For all the details and varying points that crop up, you cannot do better than get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

"Swollen Vent" (C. Power).—If you will kindly explain exactly what it is you mean by the term "swollen vent," I shall be pleased to try to help you.

Seeing Each Other (Geo. Grover).—I suppose you mean with regard to their song, and, if so, I can say that it makes no difference to either Linnet or Goldie whether the birds hang within sight or otherwise. They will sing either way.

Identity of Bird (W. F. Wilbee).—The body sent is that of a Marsh Tit—one of the commonest members of the Titmouse family, though not by any means common as a cage bird.

Mate for a Hen Goldfinch (Tre-pol).—There are several species which can be mated with a hen Goldie; you cannot very well better a cock Siskin or a cock Redpoll. If you wish to put her up with a Canary, try a young yellow Border Fancy cock. Such a bird would be inexpensive and very suitable. Or you could use a yellow Roller Canary cock.

About a Chaffinch (N.E.N.).—Your question is a very difficult one, for you give me no information to help me to arrive at an opinion. Does the bird seem in any way ill—is he "mopey" and dull? Or does he seem hoarse and to have lost his voice, owing to a cold? I may say, however, that such a note as you describe—a thin, rather plaintive, long-drawn note—is one peculiar to the Chaffinch in the breeding season.

A Tale of a Peacock (Contra).—There is not the slightest truth in the tale you mention. It is amazing, however, how many people can he found who accept this brilliant effort of some one's imagination as being a "marvellous ornithological fact." Don't you swallow it, anyway (excuse the joke).

Method of Mating (A. Hart).—Much the easiest and most certain method of breeding Linnet Mules is to pair a cock Linnet to a suitable hen Canary. A wild, newly-caught Linnet is not, of course, the kind of cock Linnet I advocate, but a steady bird in full, "fierce" song, and with a deep, slate-blue beak—house-moulted preferred. With regard to the feeding, note the reply given "W. D. Hull," and invest in the "Nutshell" booklet—it contains just the advice you want.

Loss of Linnets (W. D., Hull).—Your feeding, in my humble opinion, is to blame for the loss of your newly-caught Linnets. Your method would be quite all right for birds seasoned to cage life, but for newly-captured birds it is not adequate. You must invest 2½d. in the "Nutshell" booklet, which deals with the Linnet (published by CAGE BIRDS). In it you will find full details of the correct feeding and treatment of such birds as you bought. I hope they were strong and healthy when you got them; no system of feeding, of course, is of much avail with weakly birds.

A Trio (Kingston).—(1) This large cage would hold a dozen birds nicely. But you would not be likely to get breeding results. (2) You could keep any of the common, small Finches with the Bullies. If you go to the limit in numbers, however, I advise you to have only cock birds in the cage. Only have one Chaffinch and one Bramblefinch. (3) This is answered in reply No. 1. The hen Canary would no doubt try to nest, but the other birds would be practically certain to ruin her attempts at bringing up a family. If you turned in, say, four hen Canaries with two cock Linnets, one cock Goldfinch and one cock Greenfinch (steady birds), then you might get some young successfully reared. If any of the cock birds turn "savage," remove them. The cock Greenie might possibly offend in this way.

All Four Off-colour (W. E. Jones).—It seems very odd that all four Larks should go off-colour at the same time. Are you sure they have had nothing in the food line which could have upset them—no possibility of the food having gone sour or bad? I suppose you give them some variety in the way of food, and see that their cages and themselves are quite free from insects? The latter can be very troublesome to Larks. However, I feel inclined to advise you to change their food (I hope you don't give this in wooden boxes, which are quite impossible to keep sweet and clean), and wash out all the food and water vessels in a fairly strong solution of permanganate of potash. For one day, stir into three tablespoonfuls of drinking water a teaspoonful of syrup of buckthorn. For several days afterwards dissolve in the water fresh daily as much crystals of citrate of iron and quinine as will cover a shilling.

In an Aviary (Maryda).—I don't want to discourage you, but take my advice and don't build too high your hopes of getting Mules and Hybrids in your aviary with a mixed lot of birds. Under such circumstances breeding becomes a very uncertain matter, as the birds are prone to interfere with each others arrangements, and hen Britishers do not often successfully bring up their "babies." The fewer pairs you put in, the better your chances. Six pairs I should put down as being the limit. Add a cock Siskin and cock Redpoll to your two Linnets and Goldies, and let the hens be two medium-sized Bullies, one Chaffinch (she will be in the nature of an experiment), two Greenies, and two hen Canaries. I do not advise you to put in a hen Twite, as she would be sure to attract the cock Redpoll, or one of the Linnets, and any young from them would be of small value. As regards protection during inclement weather, your plan seems a sound one, though another six inches to the slope (fan) of the roof would be a decided improvement, and at least one board should run the whole length of the wire-netting front at top. I wish you luck.

Use Our Picture Postcards.

The Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid (S.H.).—Would this Hybrid be worth trying for? you ask. My answer is "Rather." If you succeed in rearing an acknowledged specimen, you will make both a name and money for yourself (that is, if you choose to sell). By "acknowledged" specimen, I mean an example which is accepted by the Fancy generally, and Hybrid experts in particular, as being a genuine Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid—in other words, an example which carries with it clear evidence of its parentage. Such a bird (a male) would carry all before it on the show bench. A Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid has not been seen within my memory; and that extends back quite a goodly number of years now.

The Case of a Linnet (Thomas. Linnet).—I really don't see what else you can do; you have tried almost everything, apparently. These cases of birds obstinately refusing to moult are not easy to deal with, and sometimes every remedy and dodge one tries prove futile. I wish you had told me where you are keeping the bird. If he is in a cold room, move him at once into a hot living room and cover his cage over at night. This is quite one of the simplest and best means of getting a bird into moult.

A Goldfinch Mule (A. Clancy).—A Mule will copy the notes of any other bird (or some of them), but he does not substitute them for his own original song—he tacks them on thereto. If your bird has had a "soft" moult, that is an all-sufficient reason for his present niggardliness in the matter of song. He cannot be expected to sing stoutly and continuously until he has thrown off its effects. Give him a course of Parrish's Chemical Food (obtainable of any high-class chemist). In two tablespoonfuls of drinking water stir a small teaspoonful. Give this for two days (fresh daily); then every other day for at least a fortnight (plain water, of course, in between).

As Mate for a Hen Bullfinch (Norwich Crest).—I think you would be foolish to attempt to change the mate of the hen Bullfinch, seeing that the Norwich cock has been with her now several months, and that they agree so well together. My reasons for giving you this advice are as follows: The average hen Bullfinch is of a most peculiar disposition, and inclined to resent the "intrusion" of strange birds into her cage, even when the latter is a large one containing a number of species, and it is not the actual breeding season. At the latter period, when she is piping away and feeling even more "merry and bright" than usual, she can be very nasty indeed, and woe betide any stranger (particularly one of the male sex) the unwary owner introduces into her cage. If he be weak-hearted and nervous, he will get hunted around and thrashed unmercifully by a regular squeaking vixen, and if the owner does not mercifully intervene, the would-be lord and master will soon be reduced to a feathered bundle of physical wreckage! And cock Canaries are the easiest of victims. Unless they have been with hen Bullies regularly, they are scared at the mere sight of them. And when a poor fellow finds himself alone with a black lady, who promptly screeches at him and goes for him open-mouthed—well, there is a regular circus in next to no time. And a hen Bullie resents a change of mate (once she has become attached to some particular bird) worse, I think, than any damsel I know. So if your hen is an average sample, let well alone, and save the cock bird you designate "No. 1" from having a hot time

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Budgerigar Weak.

M. B. W.—These birds do drink a little, and I should put a little chemical food in the daily supply of water and leave it to take what it will of it. Continue to keep a little crumbled biscuit about, also crushed oats as well, as the regular seed diet. As soon as you can get it free from frost, supply flowering (seeding) grass ad. lib. I should give it the magnesia every fourth day unless the voidings become watery, then stop giving the laxative. I should not distress it by catching it oftener than each fourth day—you must leave it to get what chemical food it can in the ordinary way. It would be a good plan, as it takes a little biscuit, to soak this before crushing, in the chemical food, then when dry crush and supply to the bird as required. As soon as you can get it plenty of green seed it will quickly improve.

An Ailing Parrot.

C. M. B.—This bird is in a very bad way, and I am afraid you have applied to me too late; but there is still hope. Stop tea sop in any form, also the egg and table scraps, suet pudding, etc. It can have vegetables without gravy. It can also have plain biscuit and stale crusts of household bread moistened (not saturated) with chemical food and water in equal parts. The boiled maize is also wholesome, but it must be prepared fresh daily as it soon turns sour. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and the following seed mixture: Canary and millet seed two parts each, and hemp, maize, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds one part each—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. I take it that all the swellings are hard; if such be the case, they may all be lightly touched with tincture of iodine so long as the skin remains unbroken. The swelling on the feet should be fomented with hot water (not scalding), dried, and then touched with the iodine tincture—use a camel-hair brush, which must be well cleansed after use. The bird will benefit by being sprayed twice weekly with tepid water—use a fine sprayer and keep carefully out of draught till dry. Please report progress in a fortnight.

Cockatoo in Poor Condition.

Cycle.—Continue to give the chemical food and water four times daily; give the chemical food and water in equal parts. Also give it about a tablespoonful or rather more of boiled maize daily—it must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour—boil till soft, but the corn should remain whole; drain away all water, and dry by shaking in a cloth before supplying to the bird. A little boiled rice (boiled in water), supplied as dry as possible, should also be good for it, as a change about with the maize. Put ten to twelve drops of extract of malt over the boiled maize or rice. If you can induce the bird to take this soft corn, it will be a great help while it is in poor condition. Supply the ordinary diet as well; try this for a fortnight and let me know the result. Do not let it have more than the four daily drinks at present.

Budgerigar Not Breeding.

A. B.—Though your particulars are pretty, yet they give me but little to go upon. After carefully reading your note it appears to me that you have no husks in your aviary, and the hen cannot find a nest receptacle to her liking; if this supposition is correct, put up at once two husks for each pair of Budgies you have in the aviary, and things may then improve. I should certainly remove the cork bark; this is very different to ordinary wood, and is very unwholesome for such birds as nibble it. Catch this bird up and give her two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak from a quill and repeat the dose after a week's interval. For the next month keep their drinking water well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food, and keep a piece of ripe apple in the aviary and give a leaf of fresh lettuce as often as possible. As you can procure flowering (seeding) grass free from frost, give this ad. lib. You would find our Nutshell booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our manager, very helpful.

Blue Tanagers, etc.,

F. Simpson.—Though I have had a pair of this species in my aviary for four or five years, yet I am unable to give you any distinctions as to plumage, but I was always able to pick my bird out by its snaky head and neck compared with that of the female. I have seen undoubted hens that rival the cocks in brilliancy, sleekness, and purity of coloration. A cock Maroon or Scarlet Tanager would, I think, agree with it in the cage. While I never say anything is impossible, yet I consider the event of Tanagers attempting to breed in your cage so improbable as to be not worth attempting to procure a mate for it. The Shamah is a good bird, a fine songster, full of character, soon becomes really tame and chummy, but it is very unsafe to put it with other species in a cage. For a bird of this character your cage is none too large for its sole possession. A Shamah, when it gets to know you, will follow you about like a dog.

Lavender-headed Lovebirds.

J. R. Barrett.—(1) The Lavender-headed or Madagascar Lovebird frequently nests very early in the year. I have heard of several nesting already this year. If your birds are showing signs of going to nest, supply with leaves and thin bark to line their nest with, but newly imported birds, or birds spending their first year in England are very erratic and attempts at nesting have been brought to my notice in practically every month in the year. (2) It is by no means an easy task to tell the sex of an odd Bronzewing Mannikin, nor yet to pick out a pair from a crowd save by their demeanour, the distinctions in their plumage are almost infinitesimal and these comparisons only apply to adult pairs. The distinctions are not great—the hen is a little smaller than the male, with a narrower head and more tapering beak (the upper mandible of the male is distinctly arched), the black of her upper surface is not so pure, the breast patch is a little smaller, as is also the metallic shoulder band, but these distinctions are only slight, and perhaps again her plumage is generally a little less glossy than that of the male.

A Sick Cordon Bleu.

A. M. M.—The bird is suffering from the effects of importation, and it is a species difficult to establish. I much fear you will lose one or both, but while "there's life there's hope." In addition to canary, white millet, and spray millet, give a slice of apple or banana, whichever it will take a little of. Also supply a little milk sop, made with boiling milk, crumbled sponge cake and ants' eggs, not too sloppy—the ants' "eggs" should be sorted out free from all dust, chips, etc., and only the clean "eggs" used. As other insects are almost unobtainable now, give it two or three small mealworms daily; that is, if it will take them. For one day only put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and as it will not take chemical food and water add two or three drops of brandy to the daily supply for a few days. If you can handle bird without distressing it too much, a drop of chemical food from a quill direct to the beak could be given twice daily. If it can be got to take freely from the milk sop there is hope for it, but it must be isolated from your other birds, as it is quite possible the trouble is infectious. The main thing for it is separation from its fellows, warmth and quiet. Please report progress. Glad to note the Singing Finch has recovered and is doing so well.

What Parrot? (C. M. D.).—Your bird is a female Red-sided (New Guinea) Eclectus Parrot, not yet in its full mature plumage. It should be dieted on seed mixture—Canary, white millet, hemp, paddy rice, dari, oats and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a tin in its cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, little sponge, or Madeira cake as a tit-bit, nuts, a little greenfood, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. If it will not bathe you must spray it, twice weekly, in the summer, and once a week in the winter. It can be kept in the verandah during the summer months, if you do not keep it in a draughty position.

Java Sparrows and Combassous (H. J.).—Grey Java Sparrows certainly do breed in captivity, but less freely than the White variety. They rear the young mostly on seed and green food, but I should certainly give a little soft food just before the young are due to hatch—any good mixture will suffice—or a mixture of crumbled sponge cake and ants' eggs, made crumbly moist with boiling water, will fully meet their needs. There was a fully detailed article on this species about five or six weeks ago in our pages. Combassous are shy breeders in this country, but there is no reason why they should not do so, save, perhaps, that they have not previously bred—that is, speaking without looking the matter up.

The Pekin Nightingale (Fred. Shore).—The Pekin Robin or Nightingale is a fine songster; a good one closely resembles the Blackcap in its vocal melody. It requires a diet of soft food, ripe fruit, and some live insects, mealworms, spiders, beetles, etc. It is very fond of a bath, and should have one daily. It is a hardy species, and if treated as above should thrive and do well if not subjected to draught, but it needs no coddling. See our Nutshell booklet, "The Pekin Nightingale, and How to Keep it," 2½d. post free from our manager.

A Squalling Grey Parrot (Parrot Lover).—It is fear that causes the squalling; this is evident from the fact that it is silent when alone. Be very quiet and as still (steady) as possible when feeding, cleaning, etc., also arrange a screen so as to half cover its cage till it has become more accustomed to you. As soon as it thoroughly knows you, the squalling should cease. If you are quiet and steady in attending to it, it will soon gain confidence. Do not permit any of your young folk to frolic about in its vicinity. I should keep a tin of seed mixture in its cage. You had better inform me, through the Editor, how you are feeding it, and if you know how it was fed before you got it. Our Nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot, and How to Keep it," 2½d. post free, from our manager, will help you in treating your bird.

Lovebird Nearly Bare (Daffodil).—I presume your birds are really Budgerigars; if so, separate them. Give the bare one two drops of tasteless castor oil from a quill direct to the beak, and lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Give several doses of the castor oil with three or four days between each dose. Diet: Canary, white millet, spray millet, and crushed oats, also green food, grit, and cuttle bone. As soon as you can get it free from frost, supply liberally flowering (seeding) grass, as much as it will eat. If the bird will take any of it, keep a slice of ripe apple between the cage wires. If you send me details of your treatment and how long you have had them, I possibly can help you further. See our Nutshell booklet, "Budgerigars: How to Keep and Breed Them," 2½d. post free, from our manager.

Breeding Cutthroats in a Cage (F. Hobart).—Cutthroats will breed in a "Canary double-breeder," but one with a little more head room is better. No, take out the nest boxes and hang up a Hartz travelling cage in one corner, after removing the fittings and cutting away two of the bars, so that the birds can get in and out. Supply hay and long grass for nesting material, and do not pry into their domestic arrangements till the young leave the nest, when the nest should be taken down, the material burned, and the nest cage baked to destroy parasites, as this species is rather liable to annoy them when nesting in a cage. When they are feeding young, supply green food ad lib., also a few ants' eggs and a little soft food, consisting of crumbled sponge cake and ants' eggs made crumbly moist with boiling water.

What Bird? (E. V. C. D.).—I was over at the Museum and spent some time with one of the attendants, going through the skins of Serinus and its allies, but I was unable to fix the exact species of your birds, but they are some near species to the Green Singing Finch, and the treatment you are giving them should suffice to keep them fit and well. The trivial name "African Canarice," is so generally used, that it is no help in defining the species, but I have a friend residing in the district your birds come from, and I am asking him if he knows the exact species, but it will be six or seven weeks before I get his reply; when this comes to hand I will insert it in this column. If you rear young, I should be pleased to receive particulars.

Budgerigars and Finches (Novice).—There is only room for two pairs of birds the size of Budgerigars in your cage, and even then the young must be removed as soon as able to fend for themselves. What I really advise you to keep is one pair each Green and Yellow Budgerigars, or in lieu of one pair of Budgerigars you could have Blue-wing Lovebirds. I really cannot take the responsibility of advising you to keep Finches in a cage, even in an aviary. One frequently picks up a Finch with wing or leg broken, when such a mixture are kept together. My advice is: Keep to Budgerigars. See our Nutshell booklet, "Budgerigars and How to Keep and Breed Them," 2½d. post free, from our Manager.

Yellow-naped Amazon (Constant Reader).—After spending some hours at the British Museum and going through the skins, there is not much doubt but what your bird is the Yellow or Golden-naped Amazon (Chrysotis palliata); this species is found in Mexico. I found a good deal of variation in the various skins, as to extent of the yellow areas, and I cannot doubt but that your bird is correctly named as above. If there is any material colour change after the moult I should be pleased to have a description. You will find the dietary for Amazons given to more than one correspondent in recent issues.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

S. Hirst.—Acute inflammation of the bowels, together with pneumonia, caused death of bird. The origin I do not think contagious, but induced by adverse weather changes.

Merrit.—Your bird was affected with "red mite," which accounted for the restlessness and continued uneasiness. The exciting cause of death was pneumonia. Examine your birds, and, if affected similarly with red mite, spray them occasionally with a solution of sulphurretted potash 1 drachm to the pint, using the solution warm. For the lung trouble, if occurring at any time, get your chemist to prescribe the following mixture: 1 drachm of aromatic spirits of ammonia, 1 drachm of sweet spirits of nitre, 2 drachms of simple syrup, and ½ drachm of concentrated infusion of gentian; twenty to thirty drops of the mixture to be given night and morning in the drinking water.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Scottish B.B. and M.C. (Paul Pry).—You will find that a report of the annual meeting appears in this issue.

The Use of Clap-Nets (W. T. Walton, F. Fishburn).—We will deal with your letters next week; thanks for writing us.

An Article (F. Litchfield).—We will see if we can get an article on the lines you suggest.

A London Society (C. Watts).—Thanks for your kindly letter. You will find a list of all the societies, with the secretaries' names and addresses, in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which has been posted along to you. The London societies commence on page 104.

A Testimonial (A. Lovelace).—We are glad to know that you had so satisfactory a deal, but regret that we cannot publish your letter. Why not send your testimonial direct to the party named, so that he can utilise it, if he chooses, in our advertisement columns?

A Fancy Dress (E. J. Hill).—Many thanks for the photograph, which we are trying to reproduce. Please don't speak of it as "a liberty"; we like readers to take liberties of this description with CAGE BIRDS.

Lecture and Sketches (J. I. Mackie).—We are extremely obliged to you, and will find a corner for your contribution in our next issue if possible.

A Removable Perch (E. J. Reynolds).—Sorry, but this perch has more than once been illustrated in our pages in the past.

Teaching Canary Mules to Sing.

Sir,—Will any of your readers tell me how to teach my Linnet-Canary mules to sing? I have three mules, one Goldfinch and one Linnet, in a room to themselves. I would be very grateful if someone would tell me what bird I ought to buy to teach them. They are last year's birds. Lover of Birds.

The London and Counties O.A.

Sir,—Kindly permit me, in your valuable paper, to express my regret that through the negligence of the committee, also the non-attendance of the members of the above society, I, as secretary, and also our president, were reluctantly compelled to resign our respective offices. We have worked strenuously for the past two years to keep the society together, but, unfortunately, we have not received the support we should have done, consequently have had to close the society on March 8 last. I, as secretary, had to submit several of the members as defaulters to the London Federation as far back as November last, but, to my surprise, their names were not brought forward until March 3 last, which I consider a lack of energy on the part of someone.

Her First Egg When 21 Years Old.

Sir,—At the village bakery of Rolleston-on-Dove, Staffs, now famous through Sir Oswald Mosley's wholemeal bread campaign, an African Grey Parrot, after twenty-one years' captivity, has laid two eggs this week. It was bought by the writer in Birmingham when quite a young bird, perhaps a year old, and has been in the possession of the proud owner twenty years. So, I take it, she has celebrated the attaining of her majority by doing her level best to propagate her species. It is none too common an occurrence for these birds to lay eggs, but surely not after the lapse of twenty years? I thought you would publish what might be of some interest to your numerous readers, and, as a reader of your valuable paper of many years' standing, permit me to wish you every success.

The Proposed New Society for Bellshill and District.

Sir,—In reply to "Bellshill Tyro" regarding the formation of a Cage Bird Society in this district, I venture to think that it would be unwise to attempt such a thing in this district as yet. There is no doubt there are a good many fanciers in this district, and with a little encouragement we could soon have a good number of exhibitors too. I think the neighbouring club, "Holytown and District O.A.," gives this encouragement. This club holds a very good club show annually, and has three cups for competition (one of the cups came to Bellshill last season), and at the end of last year finished up with a balance of £9 on hand. I think "Bellshill Tyro" and other fanciers of the district should throw in their lot with the "Holytown and District O.A.," and support it. I think it would be better, as we would then have a healthy and prosperous club, whereas to form another in this district we might have trouble to keep it in existence. A meeting of the above society takes place on March 21st in Masonic Hall, New Stevenston, and I would invite "Bellshill Tyro" and other fanciers to come and give their support.

Siberian or Russian Goldfinches and their Management.

Sir,—In the hope that a few words on Siberian and Russian Goldfinches will be welcomed by the novice, I will try and tell them how I manage mine. Siberian or Russian Goldfinches, they are named, though which of the two places they come from it is very hard to say. Why do they call the largest Siberian? Because they are a little larger than others, and, being very fat, they look monsters when they first come in, being fed on their way to this country on inga or niger seed, which is very fattening; and, being in those small cages, they have not much exercise. The largest are then picked out and marked with "S.," to identify them as "Siberians." Now, you send for a Siberian Goldfinch; we will say you go for one, to a dealer; you find that he has from 300 to 400 birds on hand. You select the largest he has, and you are well satisfied. Or, should you send away for one to the dealer, he will no doubt, by your paying his top price, send you a large bird, and when the bird arrives he no doubt suits you. Now we will say that you have a good large bird. You start to feed him your way, and the consequence is the bird commences to go thick; or, in other words, goes soft. Then comes the death and funeral of Mr. Goldie. I might here say that there are nearly as many hen Goldies as cocks imported into this country—Russians, of course. Mind, if you go to select Goldfinch, choose one on which the red, or blaze, comes behind the eye. I am reminded of a fancier whose bird room I visited some three years ago. I saw in his room two very good-sized Russian hen Goldies paired up to two bonny yellow Norwich hens. He was so pleased with the idea of what he was expecting from them. But when I told him they were hen Goldies, he laughed at me, and made the remark that he had paid a big price for them. But I saw that friend at the back-end of the breeding season, and the first thing he said was the Goldies had laid eggs. The dealer was not at fault, for he chose them himself. Now, the way I feed mine, and get them on to their staple food, is as follows: 1lb. of hemp, ½lb. of linseed, ½lb. of inga, or niger seed, ½lb. of maw, and ½lb. of summer rape; add to this mixture ½lb. of good bold canary seed. Mix all together, and give inside the cage. A stock cage is the best for this kind of bird. This you will find illustrated in the Nutshell Booklet on the Goldfinch published by Cage Birds. This cage, I find, comes in grand for the foreign Goldies and Bullies, and they fairly enjoy themselves after being in those small wooden (wicker) cages for such a length of time. I crush plenty of white sunflower seed, and strew it on the bottom of the cage; and of this they are very fond. I place their water inside the cage. The water I use is boiled, and every other day I give in the drinking water a little sulphate of soda or a little Epsom salts. Before doing this I used to lose a lot of these birds. At first I don't use any sand, but I always see that they have a lump of cuttlefish bone placed in the wires of their cage. They will do justice to this, too; and it helps them to digest their food. After they have been in my hands a week, I strew a little sand on the cage bottom, adding more each week. A lot of these birds, I find, swallow their seeds in large pieces. While I am writing this I see one that is trying to throw his food back. Some of them will only eat linseed and sunflower; others only inga and sunflower; others hemp and sunflower, and some maw. So, by mixing as mentioned, they each choose what they like. I always see that each bird has a mealworm or two each day for the first week; after that time I give them one every other day for a fortnight. I mind, too, that these birds have a bath every day if they wish to take one. After they have been in the stock cage for a fortnight or three weeks I give them a run into a flight a yard long for another week, and then they are turned into a large aviary 12ft. by 6ft. high. It is pleasing to see these birds flying about chasing each other over small trees and on to the perches. When I turn them into the aviary I place their seed in small pots, such as shrimp pots, which answer well for the purpose; also sand and sunflower, which I give the same way. By this time I am well repaid for my trouble, as the birds are singing all day. We come next to the moult; I leave the birds in the aviary, or, if I have been using them for breeding with, I return them to the aviary for the moult. When I used to moult them in cages I had some trouble; nearly all of those I moulted in cages used to be troubled with their wings, and a kind of a lump formed in them. When this happened I pulled a feather or two out, and I have found them come out all right. I much prefer an aviary, because it gives the birds exercise. I may here state that I have had Russian Goldies go all off into a shiver in midsummer. What has been the cause I could never find out, seeing they came from such a cold climate. The birds I have had that had shaking fits did no further good that season as regards breeding. When I found out this condition I placed them in an outside aviary, and this proved a cure for them. When the dandelion begins to shoot out of Mother Earth I am always on the lookout to snatch it. When I go dandelion-hunting I have with me a small tin box, with a damp cloth inside, and when I come across any I take my box out of my pocket and carefully place the young tender leaves inside, and cover over with this damp cloth. This keeps the leaves fresh; otherwise they go soft. I have by me a number of small brown drinkers, that I collect out of the wooden cages, in which the birds are imported from Germany to this country. I place a piece of wire round each, so that I can hang it on the cage front (inside, of course), and fill it with water, placing the young leaves or roots of the dandelion in this; it keeps them fresh until the birds have done full justice to it. I also give the seeding heads, too, of the dandelion, and Mr. Goldie and Lady Bullie are quite pleased with my visit on this errand. W. Lloyd.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Firth, I may say that I won 2nd and 4th at the late L.C.B.A. Show, and I only received a sort of mutilated tram ticket on my cages. I duly received my prize money, but no cards. I wrote to Mr. Mugford, and up to the present have not heard from him. Whether he received my letter or not, I cannot say. I always like to have prize-cards, so that I can show them to friends. Judging by "Cardos" letter, I thought there were no cards, but Mr. Firth's alters the aspect. Am I to take it that the secretary had not enough cards to go round? Exhibitor.

Fresh-caught Birds Dying.

Sir,—"Dublin Reader" seems to have suffered losses from fresh-caught birds dying, for which he hints the dealers are responsible. Such an accusation is disastrous to our trade. I think his own letter explains the trouble, where he says they are "nearly dead, though lively, when bought." It is all due to ignorance on his part of the proper feeding—not giving suitable food and proper attention. If he knew how to care for fresh-caught birds, he would have nothing to complain about. I hope readers in Dublin will pay little attention to his startling statement, which only shows up his knowledge of birds. I also hope the Cage Birds League, when established, will protect us from such accusations and trashy nonsense.

William Thompson.

Wild Ducks in a Magpie's Old Home.

Sir,—I am a constant reader of your most interesting paper Cage Birds, and have learned many things about birds, which I had never known. Although I have been interested in the hobby for thirty years, I have never had a greater surprise than in May, 1910, when, while fishing along a small river, I was startled to see Wild Duck fly out of what I knew to be a Magpie's old nest. I climbed up (only nine or ten feet), and, to my surprise, I found nine eggs comfortably lying in their usual bed of down. I took them home, set them under a hen, and, in about twelve days, nine young ducklings were hatched, all of which I reared, and they make lovely pets. I am now advertising a pair. I should like to know if the above is a strange happening to the numerous readers of "C.B."?

P. Cunningham.

A "Tip" for Amateur Cage Makers.

Sir,—I enclose a sketch which may be of benefit to some of your readers who are amateur cage makers, like myself, and forget to leave sufficient play for the front to lift up into the holes at the top and drop back into same at bottom. Cut the bottom wires off flush, put the top wires into the holes made for them, and lift front into position, then place four or five pieces of wire, bent as shown in sketch, "A," over the puuch bar and woodwork of cage. W. Harker.

The Parkgate and Rawmarsh C.B.S.

Sir,—I wish to inform you that the above-named society is now going strong, and that all fanciers in this district would do well by joining at once. There are a lot of fanciers in the district who have given me their names, and I take this opportunity of letting them know that the society is making good progress, and that they are welcome at the Alexandra Hotel, on Saturday, March 18th, at 8.30. I may say, too, that Mr. W. Turner has been elected chairman, and the following fanciers form the committee: Messrs. W. Rix, R. Smith, G. France, and J. Woolhouse. The subscription is 6s. per year, with 1s. entrance fee. Now then, Parkgate fanciers, you want a society; come up and join us; you will be made welcome.

G. Watson, Secretary.

The Lancashires and Lizards of To-day.

Sir,—I think it is nearly time that you had some restrictions as to what constituted a free advertisement. Take Mr. Fuller's letter re Lancashires and Lizards as a sample. It all amounts to puffing Glossop, and Glossop fanciers only, as breeders of Lizards especially. Last year or two it was Mr. Dewsnap, now it is Mr. Oliver who gets the "booming up." If he had to pay advertisement prices, I fancy we should not hear so much about the "best Lizard on earth." Take the Lancashires in the first case, the way Mr. Fuller jumbles these birds up is a marvel. He says Mr. Vickers won at Manchester with a grand Lancashire, bred from two Lancashires, a grand bird, etc. Later on comes the query: "I say breed from Lancashires, but where are we to get the Lancashires from?" Naturally, one would say from Mr. Vickers; or shall we say it, from Mr. Fuller himself, as nobody seems to have any birds of real merit, only himself? So, people, hurry and purchase the Glossop marvels. Now to come to Lizards. In my opinion, Mr. House judged these classes badly. Clear gold cock, the second prize, was a poor specimen, Mr. Hampshire saying himself it was a very poor one. There was one in this class passed as having a hole in cap, by far the best bird in the class, Mr. Levi Butterworth saying it could have won. Broken silver hens, Mr. Oliver's bird should have won, and in my opinion the third bird of Mr. Rukin's should have been second, but was very wild when I saw it. Mr. Ollerenshaw's bird was very lucky to get a card. I expect its being a mis-capped bird suited Charley. In gold hens, the general opinion of the winner was that it was a cock. In silver hens, Mr. House again blundered, as the winner had nothing to recommend it, unless being mis-capped was a recommendation. In my opinion, it was a tight thing between Mr. Dowsnap's clear silver and Mr. Rukin's broken silver. In broken cap gold cocks, there was more bad judging. I also had the pleasure of seeing the Lizards at the Palace, and there was room for improvement in the judging there. In the golds, Mr. Rukin should have been, without injustice, first with a clear cap gold (first Newcastle according to the catalogue), and second with a broken cap (first L.C.B.A.), and fourth with a broken cap. The one which stood first (Mr. Dewsnap's) should have been third. There was another of Mr. Rukin's without a card, but this bird, first at L.C.B.A., looked as though it had been in the wars, as it had some new feathers showing in the middle of its back. As to the silvers, the diploma winner of Mr. Rukin's was an easy first, and could have beaten Mr. Oliver's silver if it had been in full feather, and no injustice would have been done if the owner of the winner had been third with a clear cap silver. Mr. Fuller says Mr. Oliver's bird is the best Lizard in the world. Well, all I say to this is "Rubbish!" What of Mr. Dewsnap's silvers, Mr. Rukin's golds, and Mr. Hampshire's silvers that have been shown these last few years? Are they all dead? They were better birds by far than Mr. Oliver's, although I grant him the broken cap silver was a good bird. The silver of the year, in my humble opinion, was the diploma winner at the Palace belonging to Mr. Rukin. We could do with hearing more of Messrs. John Garner, John Swalwell, John Vickers, and Ben Buckley on Lancashires, and Messrs. John Dewsnap, John Rukin, John Hamer, Jos. Hampshire, E. and W. Whipp, and E. Lowe on Lizards, than all the effusions of Mr. Fuller. It would not spoil the Fancy if certain writers of bunkum were shown without heads for a while.

Sir,—I was sorry to see by Mr. Fuller's letter that there was a lot of dissatisfaction at Rochdale, as I have known Rochdale fanciers and shows almost as long as I have known birds. The fanciers of Rochdale are amongst the best in the world, and there is not another show in England to compete with Rochdale, and I do not think that Mr. House's judgment, good or bad, would cause any dissatisfaction amongst the Rochdale fanciers. Perhaps a little disappointment amongst one or two of them, but if this was so, it has been forgotten long since. They do not usually cry over spilt milk. I think Rochdale fanciers know Mr. House's judgment, and they seem to like it, or they would not have him for years and years and years. If Mr. House does not know what a Lancashire or Lizard is, or know how to judge them, Mr. Fuller's views will never teach him anything. I was sorry to see that Mr. Fuller will not show under Mr. House. I thought he was a better sportsman than that. If he had a good bird, and it was best in the class, Mr. House would find it and be the first to congratulate even Mr. Fuller. I was proud to watch Mr. House judge birds at Rochdale. You can bet I watched him very keenly. He makes very few mistakes, and I do not forget the way he went over every bird. What was the cry some ten years ago? "We want Mr. House again, or our birds will be all Crests." I am sure he has always tried his best to keep the Lancashire up to standard. You have to thank Mr. House for a good many things amongst the Lancashire and Lizard fanciers. I was highly pleased to see Mr. Swalwell did very well at Manchester. He put Mr. J. Vicker's old Plainhead special for best bird in Lancashire classes. Mr. Compston said it was a real good bird, all a Lancashire (but Mr. Fuller said "nout"). You should let us know your views, Mr. Fuller, not Mr. Compston's (was it a good one, Ted?). At Rochdale Good Intent the same bird was commended under Mr. Hardy. The bird has not been shown since. The old Plainhead, perhaps, took the hump when it saw the Rochdale birds, for all the best do not go to Manchester show. The Rochdale fancier likes to have a little bit up his sleeve; he has plenty of other local shows to think about. But Mr. Hardy can tell a Lancashire, Mr. Fuller, and he can tell you how to breed them, and from two Lancashires. Try and get him to go over to Glossop or some other place near where you live; he will put you on the right track how to breed Lancashires from two Lancashires, providing you have the right stock birds, for you will never breed a racehorse from a donkey. The Scottish National Show has always been all right before. They do not put blind men to judge Lizards, even in Scotland. I was sorry to see that Mr. Rukin had been giving the advice to keep the birds at home. Why not advise the fanciers to show, and any little disappointment that there is, say, Never mind, better luck next time? Respecting certain birds, Mr. Fuller says a Crest has been there; I always thought that Mr. Fuller never tried to cross with the Crest. If he did not, how could he know the Crest had been there? You have to breed them before you can tell. You only guessed, Mr. Fuller. A flat-headed Lancashire Plainhead will never win unless it is extra big and good in body feather, but a fat-headed one will. It is the fat you want, not the flat head. I am pleased to know that they are making a lot of new members in the L. and L.F.A., and with a little better luck, I am hoping to be amongst the lads at the next Rochdale Town Hall Show, when it comes round again. I was sorry to see Mr. Rukin's gold Lizard was out of the cards at the Palace. Mr. Rukin will get to know why his bird was put down if he will send a stamped addressed postcard to the judge, as also will Mr. Oliver. Perhaps the birds were not in condition, or there were better birds in front of them. But in Mr. Fuller's view it is always the judge, and never the birds. Give the judge a chance, Teddy; he does his best, I don't care who he might be. In my opinion a good heavy-feathered Lancashire stock bird shown in Lancashire classes will always beat an overgrown Yorkshire with a little daisy on top of its head. I have written this to let my old pals know that I am, like Johnny Doolan's cat, still alive and howling. Alex. Donnelly.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red else.

An Appeal for an Oswestry Fancier.

Sir,—No doubt all fanciers have read in the columns of Cage Birds of the ill-luck of a brother fancier, Mr. H. E. Jordan, at Whittington, Salop, who lost all his stock of birds, including some typical Yorkshires, through some brown paper catching fire in his workshop during his absence. I may say this is a very sad loss to a working man. The stock has, I am given to understand, taken him some years to build up, and he is at present not in a financial position to get another start. May I appeal to brother fanciers for a small donation or birds to start him? The smallest donations will be thankfully received. I may state that he is a member of the Oswestry C.B.S., and one who came to the front to start this society last month, being a very keen fancier.

E. J. Evans,
Secretary, Oswestry C.B.S.,

Climbing the Yorkshire Exhibition Ladder.

Sir,—Having read Mr. Taylor's letter in Cage Birds of March 11th, we do not intend having any further correspondence on the matter, seeing that he ruthlessly and shamelessly contradicts our statements at every point: (1) by saying that he never had a fellow-fancier going backwards and forwards to his house (poor, lonely man he must be, and no wonder!); (2) he confuses your readers with two hens sold to two different persons (only for a set purpose), also stating that the hen which won at the Palace 1906 was marked on opposite wing to the bird we bred. He also accuses us of being troubled with swelled heads about our success at the Palace. Perhaps Mr. Taylor would like to be troubled with the same kind of swelled-headedness. We think that he is troubled with one, but of a different kind, when he makes a statement about the markings. He must be well up in birdology to say that a bird is marked on the opposite wing to a bird that is marked on both wings! It is quite evident that he does not know how the bird was marked. In proof of this, readers have only to look at the reports in Cage Birds 1904 and 1905 for Halifax, Pudsey and Stanningley, Bradford West, and Salford and Pendleton Shows. Also, we were seeking no cheap advertisement from your paper when writing our first letter, only thanking you and the reporter at the Palace Show. We leave the matter at this, trusting that those fanciers who know us best will not think us as base and untruthful as Mr. Taylor makes us out to be.

Blackburn and Mitchell.

A Nest-pan Holder.

Sir,—I was much interested in Mr. Norman's description of nest boxes, holders, etc., in March 4th issue. I send you a small model of a holder which I have in use, which allows of having the perches above the nest pan in the first stage, and below when the young birds' eyes are open, and this without removing the screw on which the holder rests, or lowering the perches. To set the hold above the perches put the short angle up on the screw. Reverse (the longer angle up), and the perches will be above the nest pans, thus getting the desired effect. I think this holder may be of use to some fanciers.

Arthur H. Cowell.

How to Use Nets.

Sir,—This is a most interesting correspondence to catchers. Mr. Pritchard is a "brick" to try to explain his methods to others. I think I now understand what he means—one of the reins of the pull line must pass through an iron ring which is at the end of a string 2ft. 6in. long, and this string is fastened at the other end to a 9in. peg driven into the ground. What is the effect of this? Obviously, when the pull line is used by a man standing, the rein which passes through the ring (or pulley, as he calls it) is held down to a height of 2ft. 6in. from the ground by this string. Suppose we erected a peg 2ft. high, and fastened to it a pulley string exactly like those through which railway signal wires pass, we could then pass one rein of the pull line through this pulley, and we would have the same result. I shall try this some day. Mr. Murray's nets are too long for Goldfinch catching. He should cut them down to 25½ft., and not set them too tight; that is, not strain the top strong line too much, only just enough to avoid a sag in the middle, when the nets close over each other. Goldfinches are much sharper than Linnets. Nets ought to come over easily with a pull from one hand. If they don't, they are not set well. I imagine Mr. Pritchard attaches a too narrow meaning to "trapping," which means nets and birdlime and every appliance for catching.

A Catcher.

More Early Birds.

Sir,—I had three Goldfinch mules hatched out on Friday, March 10th. All are doing well at present. I should like to know if I am first with Mules? I wish my old friend, Cage Birds, even greater success.

A Second Year Breeder.

Sir,—I have six young Canaries eight weeks old. By the time this is in print they will be nine weeks old.

W. Wilkinson.

Sir,—I wish to state that I had three young birds hatched by a Norwich hen on January 25th, and are well on seed now. Also I expect the second sitting hatched by the time this reaches you.

Hopkin George.

Sir,—I should like to know how I stand for record for early Mules, as I have a nest of three doing well, hatched February 10th?

W. Goldsmith.

Sir,—One of my Yorkshire Canaries laid her first egg on January 5th, sat on the 7th, and hatched on 21st two young, but, unfortunately, I lost them after five days. I sat the same hen on February 4th, with three eggs from a Linnet, and two hatched out (one egg clear) on February 18th. The young are doing well, picking hard seed, and the hen is ready to nest again. I should like to know if these are the first Mules this year?

R. Duke.

Sir,—I had two Goldfinch-Canary Mules hatch out on February 7th, and they are flying about the cage and feeding themselves. I have two more eggs down with the same pair of birds. I think Cage Birds is a splendid paper.

F. Wilkinson.

Sir,—I had a nest of Norwich Canaries hatched on January 10th, three bonny youngsters, which are doing well. Their parents have hatched the second nest of young, but only two are living. I have three pairs of Norwich sitting. I might say I have them in the kitchen.

J. W.

Early Breeding in Scotland.

Sir,—Several fanciers in Glasgow and district had birds so far forward at the end of February that they had to put in the nest boxes and let them go. Young may be hatched by the end of this week. The day is fairly long, but we will have cold snaps, and every care will have to be exercised in the rearing. A reliable foster pair should manage to successfully hatch and rear. Personally, I favour starting about the middle or end of April. Some of the best results have come from putting stocks into the breeding cages in the beginning of May. Mild weather is an important consideration, and breeders will soon be busy.

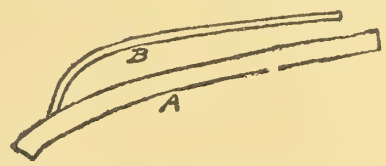
The Edinburgh and District Cage Bird Society.

Sir,—I have been informed that misunderstandings exist in some quarters regarding the above society, and on behalf of the office-bearers and myself I take the opportunity, with your permission, of emphatically stating that the above society was not formed by a few fanciers who had severed their connection with, or had any antipathy whatsoever towards, one or any of the Edinburgh clubs. It is the object of the promoters and the society, which is now in full working order, to hold an annual show in the form of a Derby, in which all varieties of the Canary, British and Foreign Birds will be catered for, and an opportunity given to all fanciers, whether affiliated with any club or not, to become members, thereby enabling fanciers from all parts of the city and district to muster together. The society has already justified its existence by the fact that fanciers from Portobello, Eskbank, Loanhead, Leith, Newton Grange, and Edinburgh are included in the membership, which is now over fifty, and the society is still an infant, only two months old. Every consideration has been given in the arrangements and business to prevent any injustice being done to clubs of the city and district.

J. I. Mackie, Secretary.



A Goldfinch Problem.

Sir,—I read with interest the remarks and good sound advice given in Cage Birds, and I thought that probably my experience of Goldfinch keeping might be of interest to some of your readers. I will deal mostly with fresh-caught birds, they being the most trouble to fanciers. Buy your bird about November or December, if possible; I never recommend buying birds that are not full-coloured; very little success have I had with them. Having bought the largest and brightest birds, put them in a large cage about 24 by 15 by 11ins. deep, three birds in each cage; give them the following mixture: Dutch hemp, 1 part, Canary 2 parts, teazel 1 part, niger and linseed ½ part of each. For a titbit or wild seed mixture, equal parts dandelion, maw, niger, lettuce, shepherd's purse and thistle. This is a grand mixture for all of the small Finch tribe. One word of warning: be careful of so-called wild seed mixtures sometimes advertised; they often do more harm than good, being put up by men inexperienced in the matter of attending to the wants of our birds. The Goldfinch should always be kept in a cold room. If you notice one of your birds looking at all queer, take him out; you will find he is getting thin. If you have a large flight, about four feet long, turn him in there with a house-moulted Goldie. Before doing so, put one drop of castor oil into his beak, and give him a teaspoonful of the above-named wild seed mixture daily; also hang on a bath. If taken in time, the bird will be well again very quickly. I am no believer in medicines for our birds except a pinch of Epsom salts occasionally, and for green food I know nothing better than dandelion leaves.

F. J. Wickham.

Sir,—I have read with interest the letters on "How to Solder with Resin,' and can only say that "Linnet" will be more satisfied if he uses spirits of salts (i.e., spirits killed with block tin). The only way I know of to solder with resin is to warm your stick of solder with your blow lamp, and place the end in powdered resin. It will be noticed the solder picks up a little resin, and this is the way plumbers use it on lead pipe. The following blow pipe for gas is the one I use, and I find it works out better than spirit lamps, as you have more control over the flame. Get a piece of brass tube, 10in. long, ⅛in. thick; drill a hole into it 1in. from the end, big enough to insert a piece of ¼in. tube. Thread the ¼in. tube, and bend both in the manner shown in very rough sketch. Fix A to a gas bracket by tubing (rubber or metallic). Fit a piece of rubber (as sold for feeding bottles) on B for blowing through with the mouth. The combination should work out in a pure bunsen flame.

Archibald Stinson.

The Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby.

Sir,—We take the liberty of reminding readers that the membership tickets are in circulation, and that the secretary will be pleased to let anyone have as many tickets as may be required. By this morning's post a very encouraging note came to hand, announcing that a fancier has succeeded in enlisting a fresh member, who has been out of the Scotch Fancy Canary for a period, but is now back into that section full of fervour. He has gathered together a capital stock. The show is on the last Saturday of September, and every member is allowed to exhibit eight Scotch Fancy Canaries for the moderate fee of 3s., which includes admission to the exhibition; this is wonderfully cheap, and should encourage every Scotch Fancy Canary breeder to join the ranks. The highest on record was 205; and we would like very much to exceed that in the Coronation year. When everyone is looking forward to great achievements, why not in Canarydom? The secretary is anxious to keep down the expense, and will be glad to have an early response from those to whom tickets were sent—the postage has been an item to be reckoned with. Mr. Wright, the president, has been associated with the Derby since the society's inception. Surely it will not be too much to accord him a record entry for year 1911?

Thomas Smith, Secretary and Treasurer,
10, Lochside Street, Crossmyloof,
Glasgow.

R. Wright, President.
Councillor James Hogg, Vice-President.

"Wake Up, Leyton!"

Sir,—May I trespass on your valuable space to ask the officials of the Leyton and District Association why we do not get any reports of monthly meetings now? Being one of the unfortunate members whose business will not allow me to get there very often, it is only through these reports that I am aware of what goes on. Surely, now that we have two secretaries and a very able assistant, it is not too much to ask to have a report once a month? Again, the annual meeting was held early in January, but up to now I have not had a manual for 1911. The cry used to be, "We lead, others follow"; well, I do hope that other societies will not follow them down the path they are drifting at present. Another favourite cry was, "We are unfederated"; well, I should advise them to get "unfettered" and move a bit faster.

"Alivo."

The Cage Bird Fancy in Devonshire.

Sir,—Would you kindly allow me a small space in your valuable journal, Cage Birds, to call attention to the Fancy in Devonshire? For one of the largest counties in England, it is not represented as it ought to be. There are only a very few towns that can boast of a cage bird society, and yet there are many in which a society could very well be formed. Tavistock, for instance, should be among the few. In 1909 a society was formed, and in December of that year a very successful local show was held, and proved a great attraction. But last year it seemed, for some reason or other, to have fallen through. Now, this ought never to have happened, as there are many fanciers in Tavistock who between them could run a very good society. Moreover, I have been informed that there is young blood in the district—novices, in fact, who will attempt some of our largest shows and get awards. If this is so, surely some steps ought to be taken to enliven things in Tavistock and other towns in Devon. I am sure my fellow-readers of Cage Birds will agree on this point with

"Devonian."

Loud Song from Skylarks.

Sir,—I see that one of your correspondents asks how to make Skylarks sing loud. I give my Canaries a hard-boiled egg once a week, mixed with arrowroot biscuit, and chopped finely. This strengthens their voice, and I suppose it would have the same effect on Skylarks.

The Construction of Breeding Cages.

Sir,—Allow me to thank Mr. Norman for his reply to my letter, and for his valuable practical article on "The Nursery Cage" in your last issue. I trust, however, you will allow me to protest against his opinion on sand trays. Mr. Norman no doubt keeps his own cages in perfect order, but cleanliness is, after food, the first essential, and I think that many scraped cages must be far from clean. No, sir, a loose, fairly deep, enamelled tray (metal for choice) is, I submit, an absolute necessity to the well-being of the bird; such a tray can be removed, washed, and replaced in a perfectly clean condition; and if a spare one is at hand, so much the better. They need not be expensive; three-ply nailed to a rail (one inch deep by a quarter thick) on all four sides, and enamelled, is sufficient. In my ideal cage, I am arranging the perches so that one does not cross under another. This will require the feeding perch to be broken up in lengths unless the food and water can be placed outside the ends of the cage.

Scrutineer.

Keeping Birds in Small Cages.

Sir,—"A Lover of Birds" seems to think it is cruel to keep birds in small cages, but how is it to be avoided? The small cages are bound to be used. For why? Because the foreign breeders and bird-catchers could not make the game pay if forced to use larger cages. Then, again, there are hundreds of men in this civilised country who keep bird shops; how, then, can they manage if large cages have to be used? Perhaps "Bird Lover" will say, Get larger shops; but where are they to be found? Large cages and large rents spell ruin to these men. I can find "Bird Lover" thousands of men, women, and children living under worse conditions than the birds in wicker cages. If it is cruel to keep birds in these cages, how is it the birds sing their best in them? I have seen German Canaries this season win large contests in cages you could put in your jacket pocket. I am quite satisfied that to get the best song from the Roller, and get him in perfect contest-singing condition, these small cages must be used. Mr. "Lover of Birds," I am as kind-hearted as you, and I like to see birds in large cages; but circumstances alter cases. Take, for instance, the Linnet keepers; how would they fare lugging big cages about? The thing is absurd. It is a question if there is a more popular bird than the Linnet amongst the wealth-producers of this country, and they keep them in small cages; and these are in better condition of health, feather, and song than birds in their natural haunts, as I will attempt to prove. The other Sunday I was invited to look at the Linnets of Statham Bros., and the birds I saw made me envious. Young Statham had just come from Warrington with first prize for quality singing, and the birds were on the table in small cages. Talk about Linnets, I saw about thirty altogether, and they are a credit to the lads. They were as tight and as smooth in feather as an ivory billiard ball, and "mad proud" in song. Although right under my very nose, they sang better than any I have heard on Chat Moor, and this is a noted place for good Linnets. One especially good bird was in song on the table, and he sang as if he was trying to burst himself. With his tail down and head-feathers up, his wing spread out like two fans, he was worth going a long way to see and hear. And these birds are all kept in small cages. Now, if "Bird Lover" is a sport, I will make him an offer! if he can find birds in their field plumage to beat these Linnets, I will buy him a £2 suit of clothes if he will buy me the same should he fail to do so. I wish success to Cage Birds League.

John Canning.

Sir,—It is a good thing to see this matter under discussion. It was one of the first things to attract my attention, but having only just "rejoined the regiment" (of fanciers) I did not feel quite at liberty to raise the question. As "V. M. Tozer" suggests, there ought to be a limit of least size of cage for each class of bird. I heard recently of eight birds (Canaries) being sent by rail in an ordinary wooden travelling cage, and my informant said that he once tried to put a live Jackdaw in one! However, being in London last week, I bought for information (and sixpence) a Linnet cage; it measures 6⅜ inches wide, 7⅜ inches high, and 4⅛ inches deep (back to front); these are outside measurements. I was offered a similar cage, slightly smaller, for fourpence. Yarrel says: "The whole length of a Linnet is about five inches and three-quarters," i.e., half as long again as the depth of the cage. In such cages I saw last week Linnets and Goldfinches living permanently. Comment is needless, and reform necessary. Perhaps the Cage Birds League could make regulations, and prosecute under R.S.P.C.A. bye-laws, if persuasion failed. As to bird shops, I visited several in London last week, and, to my way of thinking, I found their condition deplorable, as V. M. Tozer states. As a rule the advertisements were far more attractive than the shops. Horticultural and agricultural societies give prizes to the best kept gardens, etc. Could the Cage Birds League give a prize for the best kept (member's) shop?

In the Courts.

USER AND OWNER BOTH FINED.

Arthur Knowles, Sheringham, was summoned at Cromer Petty Sessions on March 6th, by Inspector Armstrong, of the R.S.P.C.A., for using nets for the purpose of taking Goldfinches, at Beeston, on February 3rd. Ernest W. Sadler was summoned for aiding and abetting. Both defendants pleaded not guilty.

Police-sergeant Hagger stated that he saw Knowles in a field at Beeston. He had some nets spread out and set, and when asked what he was catching, Knowles said "Linnets." Witness found three cages containing decoys, two being Linnets and the other a Goldfinch, and when defendant's attention was called to the latter bird, he said he brought that out by mistake. Witness seized the nets and decoys, and Knowles said, "That is hard lines; it is the first time I have been out." Later he said, "If I had got that Goldfinch out of the way I should have been alright." He also expressed sorrow at having committed the offence.

Inspector Armstrong said that he saw Knowles with regard to the case, and he told witness that the nets and birds belonged to Sadler, who lent them on the agreement that the proceeds from the sale of any birds caught should be divided between them. With Police-constable Piercy, the two then went to see Sadler, whom witness told what Knowles had said with regard to the ownership of the nets and birds; witness also reminded him that six weeks before he had cautioned him that it was illegal to catch Goldfinches. Sadler made no denial of Knowles' statement, but said that Knowles took them when he was not at home.

Knowles told the Bench that he did not use the nets with the intention of taking Goldfinches, whilst Sadler said he did not think that Knowles was going to use the nets illegally. Witness used the nets in destroying Sparrows on farms round Sheringham, whilst the Goldfinch was a bird used for breeding purposes; it took a prize at the recent Sheringham Show.

The Bench decided to convict, and fined each defendant, who had not been previously proceeded against, 1s., and 11s. costs each, or seven days' imprisonment. They also ordered the nets to be destroyed and the Goldfinch set at liberty.

A CASE OF ALLEGED CRUELTY DISMISSED.

At the Ormskirk monthly sessions, held March 3rd, Joseph Lewis, sawyer, was summoned by the R.S.P.C.A. for cruelty to four Linnets at Scarisbrick on February 5th. Mr. R. W. Brighouse prosecuted, and Mr. R. R. Glover defended.

From the statement of Mr. Brighouse it appeared that on Sunday morning, February 5th, Inspector Willcox, of the R.S.P.C.A., was on duty in Drummersdale Lane, Scarisbrick, and saw defendant in an adjoining field. He was operating with what is known as a "flirt stick," at the end of which a Green Linnet was secured by string, and some string went along the ground for about forty yards. Defendant was pulling and releasing the string, thus causing the Green Linnet to be "flirted" up and down in the air. This bird was used as a decoy for others flying about in the air, there being two large nets to close up and catch them, and between the nets were three Brown Linnets braced to strings and fastened to sticks, which also acted as decoy birds. It was cruelty to attach the birds to the sticks in the way they had been braced, and to attach the Green Linnet by string to the "flirt stick." The three Brown Linnets were taken away by the inspector, and two of them had since died.

Inspector Willcox said he saw the Green Linnet keep flirting in the air attached to the "flirt stick." He heard the bird call out, and watched the operation for a few moments. Witness told defendant he was causing unnecessary suffering to the birds, and he replied that he was very sorry if he had done anything wrong. There were two dead Linnets near the defendant's apparatus, and also two call birds in cages. Defendant refused his name for a long time, but afterwards asked for his birds and said he would not do it again. Defendant refused to go to Burscough Police Station, so that the birds could be examined, and witness took the three birds to Scarisbrick Police Station, where they were examined in the presence of P.C. Jolly. The birds were chafed under the wings and skin came off in small pieces from where they had been braced. The birds were thoroughly exhausted, and were suffering. To one of the braces some feathers were attached, and it was wet. On February 12th defendant came to his house and begged and prayed of him to withhold any summons, pleading sickness in his family. He came again on the 18th, but witness said he could not do anything.

Defendant said he was a snarer of birds, and he had trained the three Brown Linnets to entice other birds into the trap. He had also trained them to the use of the "flirt stick" and to draw the attention of other birds flying round the call birds. The net was a very light one, and was made of thread. It was impossible for the birds to hurt themselves the way they were braced. Green Linnets were of no use to him, and when he caught them he killed them, and admitted they were a nice dish. He caught eleven Brown Linnets (eight cocks and three hens) and three Green Linnets which were killed. He never braced a Green Linnet in his life, nor did he ever hear of anyone else doing so. He denied that a Green Linnet was tied to the "flirt stick," as was suggested by the inspector, and said he told him that he could not find any knots about the braces.

Mr. Glover contended that the prosecution must fail, as his client was being proceeded against under the wrong Act (the Wild Animals in Captivity and Protection Act, 1900). It was held that Linnets kept in captivity and trained to act as decoy birds were domestic animals and did not come within the purview of the Act mentioned.—Mr. Brighouse submitted that the Linnets were wild birds, and that there was no evidence that the birds were trained beyond the statement of the defendant himself.—After twenty minutes' retirement, the Bench intimated that the case would be dismissed.—In reply to Mr. Brighouse, the Chairman said the case was dismissed on technical grounds. They had upheld Mr. Glover's objection, but were prepared to state a case.

Mr. Glover asked for the return of the live Brown Linnet and the "flirt stick" and long line.—Mr. Brighouse submitted that the Bench had no jurisdiction in the matter.—The Chairman: We are not going to express an opinion.—Mr. Glover: Then I shall have to advise my client to take the matter before another tribunal to obtain recovery.

Jim Overend.

Reminiscences and Experiences of an Exhibitor of 40 Years Ago.

At the annual gathering of Yorkshire fanciers at Bradford, Mr. Jas. Overend (of Ravensthorpe) kept an audience of several hundreds in a continual roar of laughter with interesting stories of his experiences as an old-time fancier. Mr. Overend has kindly given our representative "Straight 'Un" an interview, and a first instalment of his reminiscences is appended.—EDITOR.

Mr. Overend, or, as he is more generally called, "Jim Overend," is probably the only fancier living in the West Riding who exhibited so far back as the year 1870. He has an unbroken record as a fancier of over forty years, and he is still as interested as he was at that time, being in possession of some forty or more birds. He is an old fancier and a lover of the cinnamon-marked bird, and, as the President of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. wished for someone else to present the prizes of the club in his place at the amalgamated social and prize distribution held on Saturday last at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. Overend was asked to officiate in that capacity, which he did; and he delighted the audience with his jovial and outspoken remarks in regard to the Fancy in the past. The fact of the splendid reception given to him, and the interest that would probably be taken in the recounting of some of his experiences by the present generation of the Fancy, led to an interview being arranged on the spot, and it is the hope of the writer that the following notes will give readers of CAGE BIRDS an insight into the difficulties that fanciers had to contend with in the early days of the Fancy.

"Jim" is Well Known.

Mr. Overend lives at Ravensthorpe, near Dewsbury, but if you think to call and see him at some time, you need not be troubled about the address, but do as I did—ask a policeman. And don't forget that you must ask for Jim Overend; they don't put handles on the names so much out there. The policeman said: "Yes, I do; come on, I'll show you where he lives," and he took me direct to the door. Arriving there, Mr. O. saw me coming, and came forward to meet me.

We were not long before we were chatting about the birds and making our way to the bird room, which is an outside structure, boasting plenty of size and being splendidly built with every convenience. It is a long building with windows all down one side, giving a splendid light, being nice and lofty and extra well ventilated, heated with hot water pipes (this not so much on account of the cold but to keep the place dry, outbuildings being apt to be slightly damp, which does not agree with Canaries); then there is a bath to wash in, cages, utensils, and perches; and the glasses can be kept up to the limit of cleanliness without the necessity of being taken into the house.

The cages are all down one side as you enter the double doors, one trellised and the other glass. You first come to some forty stock cages, nicely arranged in rows on nails, so as to be easy to lift down; and they are kept clear of the walls by wood battens. Then we come to the breeding cages, twenty of them—big, roomy places, and not made of wood, mind you, but built of bricks and plastered inside like houses. Between each compartment is a wall of single bricks, and to each is fixed a wood and wire front. Altogether they look fine. Each is like an aviary, quite big enough for a dozen birds.

Then at the top end are a few birds, foreigners, the property of Mrs. O.; and the good lady has also a share in the two splendid Peacocks that disport themselves in the outside aviaries, they being kept company by a few Britishers. I must not forget to add here that Mrs. Overend attends to all the wants of the birds, and is really a true fancier. Mr. O. simply peeps about and studies the birds over, especially just at this time of the year, the beginning of the breeding season.

The breeding cages were ready for having the birds put into them, and Mr. Overend told me that when once they were put together the birds had to stop there the whole season, no matter how they progressed; also that the young birds were not taken away, but left in until moulting time. How different this to most methods adopted by fanciers, who, as soon as they think the birds can eat all right, have them out to do for themselves. Of course, in cages like these there is a big advantage; the hen can get on sitting again, and the cock will attend to the youngsters and keep them quiet during the incubation of the second round.

As he stated at the meeting on Saturday evening last, Mr. Overend exhibited his first birds in the year 1870, and at that time all the shows were held on Saturdays and Sundays, and were generally held in public-houses. It was considered then to be a great honour to have won either the metal teapot or the copper kettle that was usually given as a special prize for the best bird in the show. (What would some of the "old stagers" have thought if they could have been at last Saturday's affair and seen the silver cups, etc., etc., that were on view?). Prizes were then on the sweepstake system, with an entry fee of one shilling, and as a rule the landlord of the house where the show was to be held would give anything up to £5 to add to the prize money—according, of course, to the size and drawing power of the show; and what he gave was usually equally divided amongst the classes provided. Thus, if a show of ten classes was run and the landlord gave £2 10s., each class would get 5s. added to its entry fees, the whole being split up into prizes on the sliding scale for first, second, third, etc. A charge of threepence per person was made for admission to the show, and a twopenny "refresher" was allowed each out of this, the judge usually being paid out of the remainder. (How much did he get?) Of course, at that time there were no societies to run shows; it was simply a matter of arrangement between fanciers and publicans, all arrangements being made on one or two Sunday evenings previous to the holding of the show; and it was that they might have the meetings and shows at their houses that the landlords gave so freely to the shows.

At the early shows the classes were usually on the following lines:—Class 1, Yellow Belgian; 2, Buff Belgian; 3, Lancashire Coppy Yellow; 4, ditto Buff; 5, Lancashire Plainhead Yellow; 6, ditto Buff; 7, Cinnamon Yellow; 8, ditto Buff (sometimes these were called "drab ones" or "duns"); 9, Lizards, gold cap; 10, ditto, silver (no broken caps allowed, all to be clear caps); 11, Even-marked Yellow; 12, ditto Buff. In the latter two classes, marks were the predominant feature; everything had to take a back seat to marks, and a five-pointed bird was always put in front of a four-pointed one. The six-marked bird, too, would "lick" the five-marked bird; therefore the six-pointed birds were most sought after. Only clear birds had to be shown in the Lancashire and Belgian classes. Ticks were not wanted, and were of no use whatever; and when anyone wanted a ticked bird he could have it for nothing. Afterwards two uneven-marked classes were included in some shows as a trial, and the results were good.

Another exhibit of the times was the cage of six, and the following birds were usually those of which it was composed: Belgian, yellow or buff, Even-marked Yellow, Even-marked Buff, (the two latter green marks), Even-marked Cinnamon, self or whole Cinnamon, and lastly Lizard. The lot had to be shown all in one cage of good size, with the perches all on one level. This was considered the champion class of the show, and whoever won was looked upon as we to-day look upon the Bailey, Shackleton, Sutcliffe and Son, Ogden Bros. troupe of to-day—with awe.

Borrowing at that time was rampant, and was considered quite legal. As a matter for reflection, the owners would be there and say, "This is my bird; I tell'd tha I'd beat tha to-day." It was done by all, and all knew it was done; and it was those who could borrow the most that did the most winning. Then, after the shows, the borrower sometimes did not know whom the birds belonged to, and the owners had to come to sort their own out.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

Marking Cage Bars.

Sent by Mr. N. Sutton, 132, Pleck Road, Walsall.

I show in sketch my way of marking cage bars in preparation for drilling, without the use of a rule. I make it at a cost of less than a penny. The marker is of tin made from the bottom of a meat tin. The handle is of hard wood, with a nail for rivet. I have found this very useful, and, as time is near for cage-making, this may be useful to others.—N. SUTTON.

To Prevent Draught.

Sent by Mr. S. T. Perrin, 26, Garfield Street, Kettering.

Most bird room doors are fitted badly, especially at the bottom, this causing the draughts so dreaded by bird fanciers. The following idea, if adopted, will be found to remedy this matter. Procure a piece of round wood the substance of a broom handle; cut off to width of door; then cover with felt by tacking it round, leaving about one inch to spare. This piece should then be tacked to the bottom of the door, so that when the door opens the wood will draw after, along the floor. The illustration will give a better idea of what I mean.—S. T. PERRIN.

Wild Bird-Life.

Rooks' and Doves' Nests.

Up to the time of penning these notes the month of March has failed to maintain its reputation for rough, boisterous weather; therefore there has been little to prevent one getting out into the open. Although there is as yet no shelter beyond the evergreens and some of last summer's leaves are still clinging to the brambles, this fact will not prevent the more forward birds from making a start in their household affairs. While out to-day, the writer came across a Thrush's nest in a half-finished condition; it was placed in the hedge bordering a quiet by-road, and was partly screened from view by a fairly stout trunk against which it was placed. Dried grass was the material mostly used, and as a stray branch of ivy had been woven in with the coarser material, it considerably added to its beauty and freshness. As there are many foot passengers passing this way, particularly at week-ends, one is doubtful if the bird will manage to hatch her eggs or rear any young ones. On still days the Rooks are particularly busy adding fresh material to the old nests. They will collect quite a handful in their huge beaks, and manage to struggle to the tops of the tall trees with it. Occasionally they have a little difficulty in getting between the branches, but as a rule they fly high and approach the nest from above. It is astonishing how strong and tough these rough-looking nests are; but the interior is composed of finer materials and finished off with bits of turf, grass, etc., and this helps to bind the coarser twigs together; and as they are added to year after year, they become in time of huge bulk, very weighty, and securely fixed. The most open nests are those made by the Dove family. They are simply sticks laid one across the other, and many a time the writer has been able to see the snow-white eggs through the nest without getting up to it. But some of these affairs are exceedingly strong. One found last autumn, which had been blown from its position, was composed of twigs collected from the pines; it was quite flat, about a yard in width, and would bear throwing about without damage. This nest must have been added to year after year, which accounted for its size; and being made of twigs with a rough surface, they held together very securely; in addition to which the droppings from the young birds had cemented the whole into a compact mass.

Rearing a Cuckoo.

The birds that rear a young Cuckoo are generally so worn out and tired by their strenuous efforts to feed the greedy nestling that, although most of them are double-brooded, it is doubtful if they make another venture at nesting. The writer has seen a pair of Wagtails frequenting the vicinity of a farm looking, during the remainder of the summer, anything but bright and happy.

A RED-LETTER DAY FOR YORKSHIREMEN

The Grand Amalgamated Social and Prize Distribution a Huge Success.

The annual amalgamated prize distribution of the Yorkshire Union, the Yorkshire Canary Club, the Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Canary Club, the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, and the Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club, took place on Saturday last, March 11th, at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, the headquarters of the clubs. The proceedings commenced at 4 o'clock with a dinner provided by the host, Mr. Mitchell, in his usual good style, about 170 sitting down to the excellent repast.

A Goodly Company.

Mr. D. Sunderland (the General Chairman) occupied the place of honour, and along with him were Mrs. Sunderland, Mr. J. W. Ramsden, Mr. Pretty, Mr. Pearce (our London friends), Mr. Brunskill and Master Brunskill (Darlington) Mr. Bladon and Mr. Lythgoe (Manchester, late President and Secretary of the Cage Bird Union), Mr. and Mrs. Carl, Messrs. Calam, Pepper, Ridley (Hull), Wilson, Chambers, Macmillan, Norton, Pawson (Leeds), Bishop (Sheffield), Hirst (Accrington), and from the surrounding districts we noted Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Snead, Mr. and Mrs. F. Crabtree, Mr. and Mrs. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. F. Self, Mr. and Mrs. E. Self, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Self, Mr and Mrs. Crowther, Mr. and Mrs. John Crowther. Mr. and Mrs. Bastow, Mr. and Mrs. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Sutcliffe, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe, Mr. and Mrs. Towers, Mr. and Mrs. Threppleton, Mr. and Mrs. Pickles, Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, Messrs. W. Cundell, H. W. Battye, Sykes, Brown, Chittenden, Raistrick, Smith, Wright, Hill, Hitching, Jackson, Craven, Cruise, Rushworth, Hall, Parkin, Drake, Crossley, Chapman, Musson, Haigh, Edmondson and Son, Greenwood, Spencer, Baines, Ingham, Pickles, Dykes, R. Sutcliffe and Son, Toulman, Fortnam, Walker, Wilkinson, Stables, Casey, Simonett, Price, Garnett, Greaves Walsh, Halliday, Cundall, Lane, Mitchell, Blakey, Morrison, Moss, Shackleton, Wellock, Gelder, Bromham, Hodgson, Inman, Fowle, Ogden Bros., Clegg, Ludbrook, Bailey, Thomas, Mitchell, Archer, Overend, and hundreds of others whose names we omitted to get, the room being packed to overflowing.

Mr. D. Sunderland set things going for the dinner with grace, after which a great quantity of eatable things were speedily put out of sight. The tables were then got away, and the room made ready for the evening's enjoyment. In the interval the prizes were inspected by an admiring crowd, many of them being ladies, who, no doubt, will be egging on their better halves to "have a go" for something next year. Articles useful and articles ornamental were there—sewing machine, blankets, eiderdowns, knives and forks and spoons, clocks, vases of various sizes and styles, medals, cups in both silver and pottery, overmantels, pictures; in fact, it was more like a shop, so numerous and varied were the prizes chosen. And they were well displayed.

The Ball Set Rolling.

Promptly at 6 o'clock the evening's entertainment commenced with a selection by the band, which was heartily applauded. Then Mr. Sunderland, the greatly esteemed Chairman for these gatherings, gave a short speech, in which he thanked the committee for the great honour they had done him by selecting him for that position for the fourth time in succession, and trusting to have a grand evening. He gave a hearty welcome to the visitors, old friends and new, especially mentioning Mr. and Mrs. Carl, Mr. Ramsden, Mr. Bladon, Mr. Lythgoe, Mr. Brunskill, and others, and indeed, he infused the meeting with that sociability and good fellowship that is so necessary in a gathering of this description. He told the exhibitors to forget the last twelve months' struggles in the competitions, and congratulated those who had won; and he hoped it would stimulate others to press onwards and try and win something next year.

Next, a tenor song by Mr. M. Spieght, held the audience spellbound, and was greatly appreciated. Mr. Sunderland now called upon Mr. F. Hammond, President of the Yorkshire Union, to present the prizes given in connection with the competition of the Y.U.

Mr. Fred Hammond's Welcome.

Mr. Hammond mentioned at the outset that he had been warned about long speeches, and he would take care that he was not pulled up by the chairman for taking up too much of their valuable time, as he knew there were plenty of items, and that our musical friends had some good things in store for the audience. However, be gave to all present a right hearty Yorkshire welcome. It was, he said, a great pleasure to welcome the late President, and Secretary of the Cage Bird Union, as ever since these gatherings were inaugurated the C.B.U. had always been mentioned; he wished the Union had achieved greater success than it had done. However, they would see to-night a little Yorkshire enthusiasm, and he hoped he would see within 12 months from this time a Union in Lancashire as strong as ours. Mr. Hammond next mentioned the fact that at the end of the present financial year of the Y.U., he would be vacating the office he now held, and that it would practically close his career in regard to the Yorkshire Union, and that then he would be entirely out of office and only an ordinary member; but in future what experience he had had would be freely given if required for the old ship, to guide it into a safe harbour and haven of rest.

Mr. Hammond now called upon Mr. J. Bailey to come forward as the winner of the premier competition, the W. H. Shackleton trophy competition, this making the second time he had won it, and as the donor has also won it twice, a lively time is expected next year. He presented Mr. Bailey with the gold medal denoting his success. Also Mr. Bailey wins the H. W. Naylor Challenge Cup; Mr. Hammond was too full, he said, for words, as owing to the recent death of Mr. H. W. Naylor, the less said the better, and he would leave the sentiments for someone else who would doubtless be able to do more justice to his memory. Mr. Bailey further takes the Ramsden Cruet. As usual, Mr. B. did not make a speech; he says he would rather show for the prizes than make a speech on receiving them. But Jim caused loud and continued laughter by the remark that he would go through—he would not get out at Manningham.

Messrs. Ogden Bros. took the second medal in the W. H. Shackleton trophy competition, and the J. W. Ramsden medal. Third was secured by Mr. H. H. Towers, and the fourth by Mr. J. Thomas.

Now, says Mr. Hammond, we come to what we are pleased to call "the backbone of the Fancy"—the novice section—and we will see what will now be done in regard to what has been called "The blot on the Fancy," i.e., the limit of price in the novice section of the Y.U. shows; it is on the ballot paper, and it rests with the members to deal with it as they think best. Mr. Morrison has the honour to lead the way in the Yorkshire Novice Section, and takes top medal, and also secures Ramsden's prize and is followed by Messrs. Rigg, Whitwham, Walker, Kershaw, Hadwen, Brown and Son, Craven, Radley, Burdekin Bros., Imeson, Bryant, in the order named. Then in Norwich Mr. Heap comes out at the top of the poll, followed by Messrs. Sykes, Jackson, and Pawson. We have here 16 members who are "knocked out" of the Novice classes, and who next year will have to show amongst the top-sawyers; and Mr. Hammond expressed the wish that they would all be seen as exhibitors in the season to come, and not be launched into obscurity, but shine as bright in the open as in the novice.

Mr. Stafford now rendered the baritone song, "The Yeoman's Wedding," in his usual fine style, and we have no fear in calling him "The Birdy man's favourite."

Mr. Shackleton's Turn.

The National Green Marked Y.C.C. President, Mr. W. H. Shackleton, was now called upon by Mr. Sunderland to present the prizes of his club. Mr. Shackleton expressed his pleasure on behalf of the club at the progress the club had made, and even more the progress made by the bird the last two years. At the outset Mr. Shackleton made the remark that at the time of the formation of the club he said that if the green mark were offered the same facilities as the cinnamon marks and the clears, they would go up by leaps and bounds, both in the matter of value, and in regard to the bird itself; and he was pleased to see that his prophecy had been quite fulfilled as now, instead of the better birds being worth about £1 to £1 10s., prices of various values up to £12 had been paid for marked birds, and hens at that. Great credit was due to the Green Marked Club for this state of affairs. When he entered the Fancy he hoped, he said, to do much to further the interests and leave it in a better condition and more flourishing than when he entered it. He advised the younger generation not to be afraid of introducing the green blood into their stock, as by doing so there was much to gain and nothing to lose.

Mr. Shackleton then presented Messrs. Sutcliffe and Son with the first prize, and congratulated them on their sportsmanship, expressing great pleasure in handing to them the prize, and also in handing to them the Ramsden Cruet. Mr. Sutcliffe, Senr., thanked Mr. Shackleton, but explained that he could not make a speech. But he also was one of those who would not get out at Manningham if he had booked through for Bradford. Oh! Bob!! Mr. H. Sutcliffe, the junior member of the firm, also spoke a few words, and it is evident they are both stayers. Mr. Dykes took second prize (a shaving cabinet, presented by Mr. Armstrong, the energetic secretary of the club), and here we have another exhibitor who will have to be reckoned with in the future. He secured the Ramsden medal, in addition. Mr. Shackleton wins third prize himself, and the fourth was secured by Mr. J. Thomas, who receives a medal; Messrs. Ogden Bros. took the fifth place and secured a box of cigars presented by Mr. Broxup, Mr. H. H. Towers receiving a medal for sixth place.

Open Novice Competition: Mr. E. Clegg leading, and was presented with the Sandiford Cup, Mr. Casey taking the second prize. Junior Novices Competition found Mr. A. M. Craven in first place, Mr. Hadwen coming in for second. Extra special competed for at the Crystal Palace Show, and given for most points was won by Messrs. Ogden Bros.; the prize (a pair of pictures) was kindly given by Mr. R. B. Wright, of Liverpool.

Mr. A. Smith now gave a humorous song, entitled "Little by Little and Bit by Bit," which fairly brought down the house.

"Cage Birds" Prizes.

Cage Birds prizes for Yorkshiremen were then handed over to the respective winners by the chairman, Mr. D. Sunderland. Yorkshire Union Section, Champions: 1, Ogden Bros. (tea service); 2, W. H. Shackleton (blankets); 3, Charlesworth (½ dozen silver spoons). Amateurs: 1, J. Thomas (2 pair blankets); 2, H. Smith (cruet); 3, J. Horsfield (dress length). Yorkshire Canary Club, Champions: 1, Bailey (tea service); 2, Thornton and Bower (silver rose bowl); 3, J. Helliwell (cruet). Amateur: 1, Casey (coffee-pot); 2, C. E. Hall (pair vases); 3 H. Long (pair silver photo frames). Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., Champion: 1, H. H. Towers (overmantel); 2, Cooper (marble clock); 3, F. Allen (flower vases). Amateurs. 1, J. Smith (flower stand); 2, D. Thornton (clock); 3, H. Simonett (pair of silver flower vases). National Green Marked Y.C.C., Champions: 1, Dykes (fruit and flower stand); 2, Sutcliffe and Son (knives and forks); 3, F. Sutcliffe (set of carvers). Amateurs: 1, E. Clegg (onyx clock); 2, S. Grayshon (set of flower vases). Open Norwich Plainhead Club, Champions: 1, Humphries; 2, Greenwood and Pickles (set of knives forks and spoons); 3, Eyre and Taylor (cruet). Amateurs: 1, F. Hammond (dressing case); 2, Fortnam (silver teapot); 3, O. Mitchell (cut glass rose-bowl and biscuit jar); Y.C.C.B.B. and M.C., Champions: 1, Inman (pair vases); 2, Duncan (silver cigarette case); 3, Bousfield (miniature silver rose-bowl). Amateurs: 1, Archer (silver cup); 2, Lane (knives and forks); 3, Beattie (hot water jug). Mr. Sunderland heartily thanked Mr. Carl for his generosity in giving such splendid prizes, and in doing so voiced the sentiments of all the officials of all the clubs concerned, not to mention the winners of the beautiful prizes. Mr. Carl responded, stating that it was an honour to be amongst them and to receive such a hearty Yorkshire greeting. In regard to the prizes given, he did not consider it as generosity, but simply as the repayment of a debt of gratitude he owed to them for the splendid way they had supported him throughout, and it would give him great pleasure to repeat what he had done last year. Mr. Carl also tendered his best thanks to the committee and especially to Mr. Hammond for his work as secretary, and as Mr. Hammond had refused to accept anything for his out-of-pocket expenses and work entailed, he would have pleasure in presenting to Mrs. Hammond a silver purse, and to Mr. Hammond a silver card case as a token of esteem and respect in regard to work done—done conscientiously and well.

Mr. Hammond for once appeared too full to find words to express his feelings. He and his wife would, he said, treasure the gifts as tokens of esteem and respect.

Mr. H. Greaves next gave a violin solo in fine style, which was greatly appreciated, being listened to with rapt attention.

Messrs. Bladon & Lythgoe Contribute.

Mr. Sunderland asked Mr. Bladon to say a few words. Mr. Bladon said he was somewhat embarrassed, as he had not been in such close touch with things of this description, but it gave him great pleasure to be there, and he hoped it would not be the last time he would be amongst them. As a matter of fact, he did not know he was half so well known as he was in the Fancy. Many had spoken to him, and he desired to thank all for the kind reception he had received. He was, he said, glad to see the spirit of unanimity that prevailed over all, and hoped prosperity would still further crown the efforts of the Y.U. Mr. Bladon gave a wrinkle that the Y.U. might with advantage be extended to all northern parts; he also passed a remark as to getting out at Manningham. Does he, too, then know the meaning?

The chairman here also asked Mr. Lythgoe to say a few words. Mr. Lythgoe said it gave him much pleasure to be amongst them—quite a contrast to the last time. He spoke in reference to the Cage Bird Union, which, he stated, was not dead yet. It had been a success, though at the present it did not show a great amount of life; he also thought that if the Y.U. would take in the whole of the North, it would be a great success.

Mr. Jim Overend's "Staggerers."

The next item was the presentation of the prizes of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., and the society had, in consequence of their president's wish, got another gentleman to officiate for him. The choice made was a good one. Mr. Jim Overend was seen, and gladly consented to officiate, and as he is probably the oldest living exhibitor and fancier of the variety, it was simply giving honour where honour was due. At the outset Mr. Overend said there was one thing he must ask them: they must excuse his grammar. But be is a true Yorkshireman—he looks it, and talks it. He stated that he showed his first bird in the year 1870, and that this gave present-day fanciers a good hit of a start. Some called him an old man, but he had never felt it yet, though he would be going for his old age pension soon. The next statement was a staggerer: he had never showed an honest bird in his life, had been at both top and bottom, won scores of prizes that he ought not to have won, and not won many a time when he ought to have won. His advice to exhibitors was: never look at your own birds at a show; look at the others and see what you have to beat—you can see your own at home any time. When he started showing he found out that the first thing one had to do was to deceive the judge; for instance, he had all new cages, and they were always old ones that got the prizes, so he kicked them all over the bird room to make them like the other ones—bent and knocked out of shape. Then, even-marked birds were the rage, and nothing but marks counted; shape, quality, style, were nothing—the marks had to be there, and if they did not suit, they had to be made to suit, either by putting a bit on or by taking a bit off; it had to be done, so he tried it, and instead of getting 2nd and 3rd he got 1st. Then when going home his pals wanted to rest a bit; he said, no! they aren't half as heavy when you have won. Cages were not then packed in boxes as they were to-day, but were stitched up in canvas to travel to and from the shows. At last Mr. Overend took to even-marks as his speciality, and in a few years' time the older showers were bringing their birds to him to "do up." Of course, it was all open and above board; everybody knew that they were done, and it was talked about quite openly; it was simply a matter as to who could get the best raw stuff and make the best finished job of it. One experience he had was this: he once had a bird that could win anywhere if it had only one more feather in, and this occupied his thoughts so much that he could not get it out of his head. He woke up one morning at about three o'clock just as, in his dreams, he was putting the necessary feather in. Be sports! he said, try to win. You get too much of showing to lose. He was pleased to be there and to see the ladies. He had had three wives and made them all into fanciers, and no duffers at that.

Mr. Overend thinks that the Cinnamon Marks have not improved as they ought to have done; in fact, he says they are not as good as they were ten years ago. He was glad Mr. Shackleton had taken up the Green Marks; they were grand birds, and much to be admired. The remarks of Mr. Overend were followed with great interest by the company present.

The C.M.Y.C.C. Prizes.

Winner of champion section, Mr. H. H. Towers (sewing machine); he also wins Ramsden's cruet. Second, Messrs. Ogden Bros. (eiderdown); 3, Dykes (Sandiford's cup); 4, Bailey (knives and forks), and winner of the Mason breeders' prize (a clock). Open novice: 1, J. Smith (rose bowl); 2, E. Clegg (pair bronzes); 3, F. Hammond. Junior novice: 1, Burdekin Bros. (gold medal); 2, Kershaw (umbrella); 3, Brown and Son (cake stand).

Next Mr. Overend had a very pleasing duty to perform, viz., to present the late secretary, Mr. R. Garnett, with a gold chain and medal as a token of the regard and esteem the members had for him for the great services he had rendered the club during his holding of the position of secretary; it was subscribed for by the members and friends. Mr. Garnett responded, and was heartily cheered. Mr. Overend also passed a few remarks in regard to the Ramsden prizes, and asked all to win these prizes with birds that had been fed on Ramsden's feed, and not, as he had heard of, with birds that were not eligible to compete.

Messrs. Stafford and Speight sang the duet "Excelsior," and were heartily applauded; in fact, the musical programme was going fine throughout,

The O.N.P.C. Prizes.

Open Norwich Plainhead Club prizes were distributed by Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, the chairman. Winners as follows:—1, A. Humphries (clock); 2, J. Thomas (pair pictures painted and given by Mr. O. Mitchell, also the "Percy Illingworth cup" and medal, and Ramsden's special); 3, Pickering and Wright; whilst for fourth place Messrs. Eyre and Taylor and Pickering and Wright tie. Novice Competition: Macmillan takes first place and received silver cup; Mr. T. Fortnam secures 2nd place (silver cup, and also Ramsden's cruet); 3, W. Johnson (pair pictures); 4, F. Hammond (bound volume).

Mr. A. Smith was now called upon by Mr. Sunderland for another of his highly humourous songs, and again received his full quota of appreciation.

The Y.C.B.B. and M.C. Prizes.

Mr. D. Duncan, jun., presented the prize on behalf of the Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C., of which body he is president. He spoke a few words on behalf of his favourite section, pleading for more support from the Union shows. He wanted more to ask for the patronage, so as to get the birds going in the Bradford district. Champion Section: 1, Inman (pair bronzes); 2, Stamp (set of carvers); 3, Duncan (pipe and case).

The song "Thora" was next given by Mr. Stafford, being admirably rendered, encores being enthusiastically called for; and he willingly obliged with the old favourite "Eilleen Alannah," and in the chorus all joined.

The Y.C.C. Competitions.

The chairman is also the president of the Y.C.C., so that Mr. Sunderland had the honour to present the prizes of the Club. In his opening remarks he suggested the amalgamation of all the specialist clubs catering for the Yorkshire bird. This, no doubt, will receive due attention from those concerned. Mr. J. Bailey is now the fortunate winner of the £6 6s. Ramsden cup, having this season won it outright, and he also wins a coal-vase and a teapot; 2, Ogden Bros., Sandiford's cup, £1 cash, and Ramsden teaspot; for 3rd and 4th place Messrs. Thomas and Thornton and Bower tie, and will have to divide a medal and some knives and forks between them. H. H. Towers wins one of Mr. Ramsden's medals, and takes 15/- in hard cash. In the open novice section Mr. Hall leads, and got for his prize a pair of hand-painted panels, and also Mr. Ramsden's cruet; 2, Mr. Smith (aluminium teapot); 3, Horsfield (lady's umbrella). Junior novices: 1, Rigg (silver cup, £2 2s.); 2, Whitwham (silver teapot); 3, Morrison (cruet); 4, Radley (overmantel).

We now had another song by Mr. M. Speight, "Good Night Beloved," for which he was loudly encored; he again got rousing cheers for his rendering of "Mary."

Mr. Sunderland next presented to Mr. W. Cruise the "Bradford East rose bowl," won by him at the last show of the Bradford East Society, for the best unflighted bird show by the breeder, the cup to be held for 12 months until won outright. Here Mr. S. made a special remark that the next show of the Bradford East Society will be the Cinderella show, and it is hoped all fanciers will assist to try and make it a success. The cause, of course, is good, and deserves good support. Mr. Sunderland proposed a vote of thanks to all the patrons—Mr. Carl, Mr. Ramsden, Mr. Shackleton, Mr. Bailey, and others, too numerous to mention, and this was carried with loud applause.

Mr. Ramsden responded on behalf of himself and others interested, and congratulated the company on having such a chairman. As regarded the prizes he would be pleased to do again as he had done in the past, and as the £6 6s. cup had now been won outright by Mr. Bailey, he was pleased to inform them that at the time he had got two, and that the other had been waiting until such time as the other had been won. Both, he might say, were made by one of the oldest and best makers, and were what was called hand-beaten—the best to be obtained—though now Mr. R. would like to give the novices a chance for something good. Terms will be arranged with the secretary (Mr. Greaves).

We were next favoured with a piccolo solo by Mr. R. Hill, excellently rendered and well received. Mr. Sunderland called upon Mr. Brunskill, who expressed great pleasure at this, his first appearance, and hoped to be with us again in the future. The comic element was again called into play, Mr. Smith convulsing all with his songs, and he was encored right royally. His second item, "Well Caught," was very laughable.

Mr. Hammond proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Sunderland, and paid worthy tribute to that gentleman's virtues for the position, and stated that he is now the recognised chairman of these gatherings. He expressed the hope that he would continue in the position for many years to come. He also paid a deserved tribute to Mr. H. Hill for his great work as secretary, he being largely responsible for the evening's entertainment arrangements. Mr. F. Armstrong seconded the vote of thanks, and eulogised the two gentlemen, referring to them as "ideal" for the positions they occupied. Mr. Sunderland responded, and said he considered it a great honour to occupy that position. He would, he said, be no good without a good secretary and a good committee, and he had been favoured with having both. Mr. Hill also responded to the vote and said that when the work was as successful as it had been for this gathering, it was a pleasure to do it.

This concluded the business and the pleasure of the evening, and it must be noted as one of the most pleasant we have had, and one that will live long in the memories of those who were fortunate enough to be present. Prizes were now to be packed ready for carrying home, and this was done without damage or loss; and it was exactly on the stroke of 11 that "the last of the mohicans" passed out into the open air, after seven hours, or more, of a real happy time.

TONBRIDGE AND DIST. F.S.

Members' show held March 8th, headquarters, Red Lion Hotel, High Street. There was a very nice collection of both Canaries and British; also a good attendance of members and friends, who assisted their hardworking and energetic secretary, Mr. F. Stonestreet, who had everything in perfect order and in time for the judging. The birds in all sections were a very even lot all round, and seeing most of the members are novices (some showing for the first time), they were a credit to them; they must take a great amount of interest in their hobby. Special mention must be made of a nice pair for Hybrid breeding, shown by Mr. W. Creed, being in exceptionally good trim. He told us he had several fertile eggs from this pair last season, but they did not hatch out. He is hoping for better luck this year. Mr. W. Creed won special for best cage bird. Mr. Hubble placed the awards which were well received.
YORKS. CK.: 1, W. Creed, very nice buff; 2, 3, Cross, beaten only in quality; vhc, French. HEN: 1, H. Creed, nice buff. NOR. CK.: 1, 3, hc, A. Davies, winner very nice buff in good feather, latter open on breast feather; 2, Smithers, very good yell., best in class, had been washing, which told against it; vhc, W. Creed; c, Richards. HEN: 1, spl, 2, W. Creed, former very smart typical yell., should be heard of again, 2nd larger buff; 3, Richards, variegated yell.; vhc, Smithers. GOLDIE, ETC.: 1, 3, Cross, former very good house-moulted Goldie, latter a Bullie hen, wee bit down in condition; 2, Smithers, cock Bullie, bit down in col. and condition; vhc, Dawes, black Bullie, showing good wing bars, markings almost white, which showed up well against the sooty black body. A.O.S. HARDBILL: 1, W. Creed, very good yellow Greenie, in the pink of condition; 2, hc, Cross, very good Chaffinch, well up in col.; 3, Richards, another good Chaffinch, beaten in col. only; vhc, Dawes; c, Cross. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Smithers, heavy variegated. C.-B. PAIRS (suitable for breeding): 1, hc, W. Creed, good pair for Hyb. breeding, Goldie and Bullie, both house-moulted, in wonderfully good trim, well shown; 2, 4, Smithers, Nor. pairs; 3, Richards, pair of Crests; vhc, Cross.

COVENTRY (Godiva) C.B.S.

Annual pair show held Mar. 4th, Cbequers Hotel. There were 44 pairs shown. Mr. J. Corrall judged, and gave great satisfaction. Mr. A. Symonds, the secretary, had the arrangements well in band.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 2nd, Wentworth Cafe, Mr. T. Flemming (president) in chair. Dates of the season's shows were fixed, also halls in which they will be held. Nest feather show, July 8th, Wycliffe Hall; open all-England show, Dec. 9th, Montgomery Hall; and final members' show, Dec. 28th, Montgomery Hall. Several gentlemen were proposed as judges, and secretary was instructed to write them. On the motion of Mr. W. T. Furniss it was unanimously decided that we withdraw from the Cage Bird Union. Result of the muling and hybrid pair show:—
MULING PAIRS: 1, 2, Hobson; 3, Falding; 4, Crapper. HYB. PAIRS: 1, Falding; 2, Hobson; 3, Woolhouse. Next meeting, table show of British, and lecture on same by Mr. A. Hobson.—J. Woolhouse, Assistant-Sec.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Very successful pair show held Mar. 9th, Temperance Hotel. The secretarial duties were admirably carried out by Messrs. R. Forster and T. M. Tate, under the superintendence of Mr. M. Swan, chairman of committee. There was a capital entry, especially in muling pairs (Canary and Finch)—some very promising pairs. Norwich pairs were very uniform in type and quality, as also were the Yorkshire and Border pairs. British pairs for hybrid breeding were not so strong in numbers, but there were some excellent exhibits. Mr. W. Miller won special for best pair (Nor.), closely followed by Messrs. Forster and Carns (Yorks.), who made amends by winning special for most points. There was a capital attendance. Mr. A. Dippie placed the awards.
NOR. PAIRS: 1, 3, Miller; 2, vhc, Forster and Carns; hc, c, Nesbit and Wright. YORKS.: 1, 3, Carns and Forster; 2, c, Moffat; hc, Nesbit and Wright. GLASGOW WEST END C.B.C.

Meeting and show of British birds held Clarendon Hall, Mar. 10th. There was an extra large turn-out of grand birds, the entries totalling 73. The judges were Messrs. A. Porteous and J. Lawrie, their awards giving every satisfaction. During judging the meeting was held in the side room, Mr. H. Jamieson presiding over a large attendance. A fine lot of business was got through in good time. One new member enrolled, viz., Mr. J. Wallace. Nomination of judges taken for first feather show and annual members' show. The meeting over, the members adjourned to the large hall to view the exhibits. The president at this point called the members to attention, and asked that a very hearty vote of thanks be accorded to Messrs. Porteous and Lawrie; this was accorded enthusiastically. One thing very noticeable was the large number of visitors who patronised the show.

PENRHIWCEIBER.

Held March 8th, Workmans Hall, a most convenient and suitable hall. Cage birds were staged on the platform free from draughts in a very good light. Owing no doubt to the lateness of the season, our section was not so well represented as it might have been held earlier. A more extended classification, and judicious advertising in Cage Birds would, we feel sure, make our section a great success. The quality of the exhibits made up somewhat for the lack of entries. Mr. G. Cabill, the steward of section, had everything in apple-pie order, and did everything possible for the welfare of the exhibits. We regret to hear that Mr. H. S. Davies' Red Headed Gouldian Finch met with a mishap during transit, the cage being badly broken; but fortunately the bird seemed to have escaped injury. Mr. T. J. Evans made a very capable secretary, and was well supported by the Committee. Mr. E. J. Davies judged.

OLD SHILDON (Workmen's Club) CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

Table show of pairs suitable for breeding purposes, held Mar. 11, in a grand, large hall kindly lent by the committee of the institute. There was a capital entry, and the quality of the birds was extra good. The members should evidently breed something worth looking at, and should make a name for themselves. There was a good attendance, and many remarks were passed about the hall which I consider second to none in the county, and an ideal place for a bird show. This society, which is practically just started, is receiving good support from the exhibitors, and I think that before long it will be thought a good deal of. Mr. T. Boddy judged, and his awards proved highly satisfactory. Mr. J. Elwell, the secretary, was very busy among the fanciers.

TORBAY O.S. (Paignton).

First Pair Show held Lower Public Hall, Mar. 8. Nearly 100 birds were staged, and the members are to be congratulated on their enthusiasm; it was certainly a grand revival, and a good sign of a busy breeding season. It was a great pleasure to meet fanciers from neighbouring towns. There was a grand muster of British birds, probably a record; but the strongest classes were Norwich; British came next, with Yorkshires a good third. Mr. J. B. Dyer judged. At the committee meeting which followed, the annual ramble was fixed for May 3rd. A subscription was opened towards a cup to replace that won outright at last show. £1 was promised. Mr. A. N. Innes presided over a large attendance.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Annual pair show and British birds, held March 11th, beadquarters, City Hotel. There was a capital entry. Yorkshires were exceptionally good, and the competition was very keen. Norwich did not come up to expectations. Mr. Houghton took the prizes in both classes, also special for best matched pair in show. Mr. Stonelake won special for second best pair with Yorkshires. Muling and Hybrid pairs contained some grand birds, Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Phillips gaining premier honours. The British made a nice show, Mr. Buckland securing special for best. Mr. W. H. Manley won points special. Mr. C. G. Telling judged.

March 12th, when 20 birds entered for three special prizes (three minutes' time singing), when Mr. Brown took 1st and 2nd with 83sec. and 75sec.; Driver, 66; Thompson, 55; Shinwell, 42. Contest every week-end. Wanted, new members to join Whitsuntide Club.—A. Brown, Sec.
Leeds Linnet F.A. quality singing contest King's Head, Shannon-street, Mar. 11th, when 20 birds faced the judges. 1st, H. Hayes; 2nd, J Green; 3rd, J. Bland; 4th, W. Sissons. Judges, Messrs J Naylor, J. Mclia, and W. Naylor. Also Mar 12th, when 25 birds entered. 1st, J. Varley; 2nd, C. Prince; 3rd, H. Hayes; 4th, W. Sissons. Judges Messrs J. Mclia. W. Naylor, and P. Padan.—W. Sissons, Hon. Sec.
Skinners' Arms Linnet F.A., Buslingthorpe-lane. Usual quality singing contest held Mar 12, when 11 birds competed. We had a large attendance, but only a small entry, and visitors were disappointed as only moderate singing was heard. Result: 1st, Green; 2, Ward; 3rd shared by Lunn and Butler. Judges, Messrs. C. Biss and E. Thirkell.—Wm. Lunn, Hon. Sec.
The Leeds Central Linnet and Canary Club has been started, and is composed entirely of novices—twelve up to the present have paid their subscriptions, which amount to 3d. per week each member. This, which, with the aid of donations and general fund, will enable us to have inter-sings with different clubs away. Our first match will be time and quality, March 19th, at Plasterers' Arms, Skinner Lane, off North Street, Leeds; open to members and intending members only, within three miles radius; commencing 1 o'clock. So will all novices who have birds bring them and try to help us? Those who have no birds can have one out of the club funds, and it will be deducted from his account at end of season. Also, seeing Mr. Green and Mr. F. Allen want to come to some terms re a quality Linnet singing match, Mr. A. Kendall will let them have the use of his room and will also give a substantial prize to winner.—Joe Hargreaves, Hon. Sec.

WARRINGTON.

Warrington L.S.A. open contest held Mersey Hotel, Mersey Street, when 20 birds entered. The landlord gave a very suitable prize, and some fair singing was heard. Result 1, McFarlane, 98; 2, W. Leak, 92; 3, W. Brown, 82; 4, C. Corbett, 68. Timekeepers, Messrs. A. Parker and C. Corbett; minuteman, Mr. W. Randles.—C. Corbett, Sec.

WIGAN.

Globe Inn Linnet Club for quality and time open-to-all England Linnet contest, held Wigan Lane, Wigan, when we had a very good entry of 40 birds, and we had some very fine singing, both for quality and time. Prize winners for quality: J. W. Jones (Leigh), 1; G. Randels (Warrington), 2; R. Holcroft (Leigb), 3; W. H. Topping (Blackburn), 4. For time: J. Lowton (Standish), 1; J. Mather (Warrington), 2; J. Hilton (Leigh), 3; G. Randels (Warrington), 4. Judges for quality, Messrs. T. Gibbons (Leigh), and W. Milligan (Wigan); time judge, Mr. W. Barns (Wigan). This was our first venture in Wigan, and as the entry was a good one, we are about to run another on the first open date we have. We have 12 more contests to come off in the next 4 months, and all for good prizes; and many more if we care to take them on. I hope I shall see strange faces at our next contest, Globe Inn, Leigh, March 18th.—J McAllister, Sec.

HULL.

Weekly Linnet contest held headquarters, Grapes Tavern, Brook Street. Only ten birds were sung, the rainy weather keeping most fanciers away. 1st prize, Wakeling, very promising young bird; 2nd, North; 3rd, Broadbent. Judge, Mr. F. Allen; timekeeper, Mr. Thundercliffe. Entries close shortly for Easter Monday contest; fanciers please note, entries fee, 2s. 6d. per bird. In reply to Mr. Green, I will sing him on his own terms, if he will deposit £10 with the Editor of Cage Birds. Please write me, Mr. Green, the date you wish to sing.—F. Allen, Hon. Sec.

DURHAM.

Linnet sing held Workman's Club, Brandon Colliery, March 11th, when 20 birds entered. After some very good singing, a division was made between A. Bailes and S. Gibbs; judge, Mr. J. Stout. Will all fanciers who promised to give 2s. 6d. each towards Mr. J. Ridley's prize drawing, let me have it on or before March 20th, so I can get the prizes ready?—Geo. Reed, Sec.

I like the song of the Linnet (my favourite bird), writes a Middlesbrough fancier, and would like to see a club formed in this district for Linnet-singing. There used to be plenty of contests here, so why not again? There are plenty of Linnet-keepers hereabouts, and a lot of old Linnet men. I feel sure that if the club could only be started, it would soon be a success.

Sparrow Life.

The recent warm weather apparently awakened the House Sparrow to a sense of duty. He has suddenly become noisy and demonstrative. His coat is glossy and sleek, his black bib dense in colour and clean cut, and what is apparently more to his taste, there is occasionally a glorious free fight, in which every healthy cock bird takes part.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against) It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.
